

THE RUBA'IYAT OF OMAR KHAYYAM

OF THIS EDITION

1,000 Copies have been printed.

THE RUBA'IYAT

OF

OMAR KHAYYAM

BEING

A Facsimile of the Manuscript in the Bodleian Library at Oxford, with a Transcript into modern Persian Characters,

TRANSLATED, WITH AN INTRODUCTION AND NOTES, AND A BIBLIOGRAPHY, AND SOME SIDELIGHTS
UPON EDWARD FITZGERALD'S POEM

ВY

EDWARD HERON-ALLE

بهوش گر بهطای و ملعنه منون که هید نفس بشر خالی از خطا لبود که هید نفس بشر خالی از خطا لبود

SECOND EDITION

Carefully Revised and considerably Enlarged

LONDON

Higs. NICHOLS LPD 39 CHARING CROSS ROAD W.C.

COF TED IN GREAT BRIGAIN AND THE UNITED STATES. 1897. PRINTED BY H S. NICHOLS, LTD., 39 CHARING EROSS ROAD & LONDON, W C.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

								PAGE
Introduction		•						ı –xlıi
English translation				•	-		-	1
Photographic facsim	ile of	MS.					-	29
Bibliographical refe	ences	, for	abb	revia	tions	in t	he	,
notes	٠	•		•	-	•	٠	115
Facsimile pages wi	th tra	anscr	ipt,	trans	slatio	n, a!	od
notes	-	-	•		-			119
Bibliography of Om-	ar Kh	ауун	m	-		. 1		281
Some Sidelights upo	n Ed	ward	Fit	∠Gera	ald's	Poer	n,
" The Ruba'iyat	of C	mar	Kha	yyām	ı ''

PREFATORY NOTE TO THE SECOND EDITION

P CONFESS that I am surprised—and agreeably so—to find that, within six months of the first publication of this volume, a second and larger edition is called for. I am not, however, so blinded with satisfaction as not to realize that the success of my book has been brought about, not so much by any intrinsic merits of its own, as by the ever-widening interest that is felt in the matchless poem of FitzGerald which was primarily responsible for its appearance. I have taken advantage of the opportunity thus afforded me to make several revisions suggested by scholarly critics, and to add a considerable mass of material which was not selected, or not discovered, in January last. I am glad to have found this further occasion for addressing my readers, if for no other reason than to record my indebtedness to Professor E. Denison Ross, who has not only helped me very greatly with the revision, but has had the kindness to correct the proofs of this edition for me during my absence from England.

EDWARD HERON-ALLEN.

VENICE, May, 1898.

WITH a pathetic insistence, equalled only by that with which King Charles's head intruded upon the memorial of Mr. Dick, a few biographical details concerning the Life of Ghiās ud-dīn Abul Fath 'Omar bin Ibrahīm Al Khayyām¹ (as recorded in the Testament of Nizām ul Mulk, and cited thence in Mirkhond's History of the Assassins,² in Khondemir's Habīb us-Siyar, and in the Dabistān³) have intruded upon the prefatory excursions of almost every author, poet, or translator that has published any book or article having these quatrains

- 1. The European forms of our author's name vary in accordance with his translators' and historians' nationalities and tastes in transliteration. In English works and catalogues alone we get the variations Omar Khayyam, Omar-i-Khayyam, and Omar al Khayyam. Mons. Nicolas, in his note on p. 2, says: "His real name was Omar, but being constrained to follow the oriental custom which requires every poet to assume a surname (takhallus), he preserved the name which indicated the profession of his father, and his own, i.e., Khayyām-' tent maker' (vide note 1 to q 22, post, vide also p xl). The Persians say that it was the extreme modesty of Omar that prevented his taking a more brilliant surname, like that of Firdausi (= the Celestial); Sa'dī (= the Happy), Anwarī (= the Luminous); Hāfiz (= the Preserver)." Prof. Cowell favours me with the following observations "The Atash Kadah calls him 'Khayyām,' adding (and Persian authors generally do so) 'and they call him 'Omar' (وهو عمر گويند). Still, the Persian preface of the Calcutta MS. has 'Omar Khayyam' like us Europeans. . . . Sprenger in his Catalogue calls him 'Omar Khayyam,' and so does Dr. Rieu in his British Museum Catalogue. 'Omar Khayyām' has therefore (as you see) plenty of authority for it. 'Omar al Khayyam,' as far as I can see, has none "
- 2. Muhammad ibn Khāvand Shah Mir Khwand. "History of the Early Kings of Persia," translated by D. Shea London, 1832. (Oriental Translation Fund.)
- 3. The Dabistan is a treatise upon religious sects, the author of which is not named, but which is supposed to have been written by one Mulla Mubad. A translation by D. Shea and A Troyer was issued in 1843 by the Oriental Translation Fund for theme. Broadly speaking, these may be said to include the story of the tripartite agreement for their mutual advantage of Omar Khayyām with Nizām ul Mulk and Hasan ibn Sabah; his reform of the calendar; the critical exordium of Shāhrastāni; the story of his apparition to his mother; and the one about his tomb related by his pupil, Nizāmī of Samarcand. It may be further observed that recent criticism has cast grave doubts upon the authenticity of these details. In like manner, since the death of Mr. FitzGerald, we may apply the same observation to the biographical details of his life, which have been sifted from his own chæming letters, or strained from the mass of magazine literature that has appeared during the intervening periods, to appear as integral portions of introductions, ever increasing in bulk and weight.

As it is improbable that this work will reach the hands of, or at any rate be seriously studied by, anyone who has not read Edward FitzGerald's own preface to his poem, and as it is unlikely that any student will read this volume unless his interest in that poem has been sufficient to have caused him to read the "Letters and Literary Remains of Edward FitzGerald," I will allow myself to preserve a discreet silence upon these points, and will not burden my introduction with stories that are already wearisomely familiar to my readers. I would refer those who desire to study the magazine literature of the subject to the articles of Mr. Gosse (Fortnightly Review, July, 1889), Mr. Groome (Blackwood's Magazine, November, 1880), Mr. Clodd (English Illustrated Magazine, February, 1894), and Mr. Schütz-Wilson (Contemporary Review, March, 1876). For the rest, the enquirer is referred to the Bibliographical Appendix and to Poole's Index of Periodical Literature.

There remains at our disposal the story of how the first edition of FitzGerald's poem fell from grace to the penny box, and rose thence to twenty guineas per copy—and an honoured anecdotage. For the details of this progression the reader is referred to the introduction to Mr. J. H. McCarthy's prose version, which is, as far as my studies have taken me, the most scholarly, the most enthusiastic, and the most graceful essay upon these more than triturated themes that has yet seen the light. (Vide Terminal Essay, p. 297.) Of critical essays upon FitzGerald's poem, probably the best is that of Mr. Keene (Macmillan's Magazine, November, 1887), though it will presently be seen that I disagree with the views he has expressed; and of essays ex cathedrâ—that is to say, written by oriental scholars, since the fundamental essay of Professor Cowell (Calcutta Review, March, 1858) nothing has surpassed that of Professor Pickering (National Review, December, 1890).

Apart, however, from the anecdotal history of this collection of quatrains, and of the matchless poem which they inspired, there is a chapter of history worthy our careful consideration—the chapter containing the history of the period extending from about A.D. 1050-60, within which limits the birth of Omar Khayyam has by consent of his historiographers been fixed, until the year 1123 (A.H. 517), when his death is recorded upon more or less contemporaneous authority. Within this period our poet-mathematician lived, and from the events of that period-events which were stirring Islam to the foundation of its faith-came influences which may have tinged the philosophy preached by the singer. The internal evidence of the collection negatives the idea that the quatrains were written at one time as components of a consecutive whole, and suggests that they were written at intervals extending over the whole period or Omar's life, and collected, generally into the consecutivealphabetical, or familiar diwan form, at the end of his life, or, as is more probable, after his death. In point of fact, I think it not unlikely that most of his quatrains were transmitted as traditional epigrams, and collected at the instance of later poets such as Hāfiz or Jāmī, or his pupil Nizāmī, many of whose recollections of Omar's quatrains, strongly imbued with the proclivities of their recorders, have passed into currency as the ipsissima verba of Omar, among the voluminous vollections of quatrains which, during five centuries, have been brought together and issued from time to time as his work.

It is reasonable to assume that passing events had little or no influence upon Omar and his work until, at earliest, A.D. 1076, when the conquest of Jerusalem by the Turks led to that protracted convulsion of the Muhammadan world whose opening phase was the First Crusade.1 The Sultan Toghrul Beg had been succeeded in 1063 by Alp Arslan, who extended his dominion from the Mediterranean Sea to Central Asia, and, being assassinated on Christmas Day, 1072, was succeeded Ly his son Malik Shah, the patron and protector of Omar Khayyam. No more perfect picture of the era of Omar can be found than that contained in the Makamat (or "Assemblies") of El Hariri the silk merchant, who, born in Bussorah in 1054, and dying in 1122, wrote the book of which Professor Chenery and Dr. Steingass have given us a masterly translation.2 The origin of this book was, we are told, his accidental meeting with one of the few survivors of the massacre of Serūj, when that city was attacked and destroyed by Baldwin, brother of Godfrey of Bouillon, in the year 1098, during the period when he ruled the Christian Principality of Edessa.³ In 1084 the conquest of Asia Minor may be said to have been completed by the Turks, in 1088 began the series of persecutions of Christian pilgrims to Jerusalem which led to the Crusades, and, in 1092, Malik Shah died, having, in addition to his territorial conquests, reformed the calendar by means of the labours of eight learned men, of whom Omar was one, and inaugurated, by the correction of all errors of reckoning, either past or future, the Jalāli era, a computation of time which, says r For a simplified account, see "The Crusades" in the "Story of the Nations" series, by T. A Archer and C. L. Kingsford London and New York, 1894.

^{2. &}quot;The Assemblies of Al Hariri" London, 1867. This edition contained only twenty-six "Assemblies," but the work has now been completed by Dr. Steingass for the subscribers to the Oriental Translation Fund.

^{3.} According to some authorities, the conquests of Syria and Palestine and the Empire of the far East were accomplished by Malik Shah (c 1074-5), but this does not concern us in this place.

Gibbon, surpassed the Julian, and approached the accuracy of the Gregorian style. It is difficult to resist the temptation to touch upon some of the leading episodes of this periodthe disgrace of Nizām ul Mulk; the successive reigns of the Seljuk Sultans, Mahmud (1002), Bargiyaruk (1004), Malik Shah II. (1104), Muhammad (1104), Sanjar (1117), and the period of comparative tranquillity which supervened, during which Omar died 2 (1123) in retrement and philosophical repose at Naishapur, his declining years softened by the companions, the roses, and the wine whose Canticle he sang to such lasting purpose, within sight of the still beautiful and fertile valley of Meshed in Khorasan, that nursery of Persian song, which boasted itself the birthplace in turn of Firdausī, of Asadī, of Ferid ud-dīn 'Attār, of Jalāl-ud-dīn Rāmī, of Jāmī, of Hātifī, and many others, and which may justly be named the Persian Parnassus.

In the West a sharp line of demarcation is apt to be drawn between men of thought and men of action. The names of a few soldier-poets and artisan-philosophers surge in the mind as one writes this, but these are few and far between. It has not been so in the East. Omar the tent-maker, Attar the druggist occur to one's mind par nobile fratrum, and what better examples could be cited than Omar the Mugheri (who has been confused ere now with our Omar), "the nobleman, the warrior, the libertine, but above all the poet—the Don Juan of Mecca, the Ovid of Arabia and the East—Omar fewer lines than Gray." Were it not that one instinctively recoils from instituting even a passing comparison between Omar and the late Mr. Tupper, one would be inclined to write him down the Sultan of proverbial philosophers, an attribute which is generally enhanced by the want of sequence of idea inseparable from the dīwān form of poetic arrangement, in which the quatrains follow one another strictly according to the alphabetical sequence of their rhyme-endings and without regard to the series of thoughts expressed, or to the pictures evolved.

^{1. &}quot;Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," chap. lvii. Vide also Dr. Hyde's work (p, xiv.), chap. xvi, pp. 200-211. Mr Binning (vide note 2, p xxv.) states that this work was done under the auspices of Sultan Jalal-ud-din of Khorasan, who ordered that, once every four years, six extra intercalary days, instead of the usual five, should be added, so as to make up the complete solar year, which consequently corresponds closely with our Gregorian year. (Vol. ii., p. 207.)

^{2.} A. Houtum-Schindler, in a letter to the Academy (24th January, 1885), states that Omar died in A.D. 1124, over one hundred years old; but he does not give his authority for this information.

A primary difficulty which confronts the student of Omar Khayyām is the great difficulty and doubt which exists as to which of the ruba'iyat have reached us in a form most nearly approaching that in which they left the master's hand. Diligent search in the older cities of Central Asia, where Persian is the language, or at least the elegant study of the more cultured classes, may bring to light some MS. that may fairly be regarded as a "Codex," and serve as the point of departure for the student. At present the oldest MS. available for the student is that of the year A.H. 865 (A.D. 1460), in the Bodleian Library at Oxford, which is reproduced by photography, transcribed, and translated in the present volume. It was discovered among an uncatalogued mass of Oriental MSS., forming the Ouseley collection in 1856 by Professor Cowell, who made a transcript of it, which transcript lies before me, and has been of the greatest assistance to me in deciphering the MS. The original MS. is probably one of the most beautiful Persian MSS. of its age 1 in existence, and is written upon thick yellow paper in purple-black ink, profusely powdered with gold. These gold spots have frequently confused the workman who made the line-blocks which accompany my translation, a further element of difficulty being introduced by the fact that the points are often merged into the borders, and therefore invisible in the line-blocks. My publishers, however, have with great liberality had executed for me, in

I It is written, according to the Catalogue, in Nasta'lik; but I should be inclined to describe it as written in a hand mitlway between Nasta'lik and addition, a set of half-tone blocks, which the student will fully appreciate, as in them all the faint indications of the original are reproduced with exact fidelity. The permanence of the ink is extraordinary, the only places where it has faded being here, and there on the borders, and in the formal heading discount ("and likewise to him") which appears above each quatrain. Internal evidence seems to point to the fact that the borders and headings were added afterwards in a different ink, which would account for this. The scribe has been exceptionally careful in his work, even for a Persian (than which praise could hardly go higher 1), but, even 'so, the diacritical points are omitted here and there; these I have supplied in the transcript.³

Next in order of age among the MSS. come those in the Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris, which I have made a point of carefully examining before committing these sheets to the press. There are three principal MSS., one, No. 349 of the "Ancien Fonds," and two, Nos. 823 and 826 of the Supplé-

Shikasta—Nim-Shikasta. There are three predominant classes or types of handwriting under which it is customary to class oriental MSS. Naskh, Nasta'lik, and Shikasta. Naskh is the equivalent of perfect modern printed characters, Nasta'lik is small and cursive, but beautifully fine in execution, answering to our "copper-plate" writing, whilst Shikasta (e" broken") is the current hand in which ordinary commercial writing and correspondence is carried on A farreaching knowledge of the language and all its idioms and inflections is required to decipher it The three types are excellently illustrated in Sir William Jones's Grammar

- 1. In no country has the art of caligraphy been carried to so high a point, and been so highly honoured as in Persia. Their MSS are ornamented with marvellous miniatures, the paper is powdered with silver and gold, and frequently perfumed with the most costly essences. (Cf Fitzgerald's "youth's sweet-scented manuscript") Sir William Jones recorded his opinion that the MS. of Yüsüf and Zuleika at Oxford (No. 1 of the Greaves' collection) is the most beautiful MS. in the world. Since he wrote, however, many MSS. of equally marvellous beauty have come to light, and copies of the Qur'an are to be found in eastern mosques of surpassing workmanship. The learned Fakr-ud-din Rast, speaking of the Khalif Mustassim Billah, can find no higher eulogy than "He knew the Qur'an by heart, and his handwriting was very beautiful." Some of the finest specimens of Persian MSS. in existence are to be found in the Morary of the Asiatic Society in London, and in the British Museum, where some chosen specimens are generally on view in the King's Library.
 - 2. As for instance in qq 20, 50, 99, 112, 130, and elsewhere.

ment Persan. The first, which is dated A.H. 920 (A.D. 1514), is beautifully written in Nasta'lik between blue and gold lines and an ornamental heading in red, blue, and gold. It contains 213 ruba'iyat. The second MS. forms part of a large collection of poems transcribed by the same hand, the terminal leaf of which bears the following inscription: "The copying of these quatrains was finished by the aid of God and by the excellence of his assistance, the fifteenth day of the month of Jumādā, the second of the year 934" (i.e., 16th February, 1528).

This MS, is written in Nasta'lik between blue ruled borders, and presents, like the first cited MS., the peculiarity that the ruba'iyat are not in alphabetical or dīwān order. The third MS. also forms part of a collection of poems, dated A.H. 937 (A.D. 1530), written in a neat Nasta'lik, in a Turkish hand which is extremely difficult to read. Another MS. in this library has been cited, but Mons. Omont, the keeper of the Oriental MSS., informs me that it has been missing for many years. In addition, there are eight ruba'ivat written in a handwriting of the late ninth or early tenth century, A.H., upon the blank leaves of a diwan of Emad which is dated A.H. 920; six in an eleventh-century handwriting in a collection of poems, undated; and thirty-one in a fine MS. of the Atash Kadah of Azr dated A.H. 1217 (A.D. 1802), in the colophon of which Azr is described as afsah ál mu'āsirīn, "the most eloquent of contemporaries," indicating that he was then alive. It will be observed, therefore, that the Bodleian MS, is not only the earliest MS. known, but is one of the very few which are complete in themselves, and do not form part of collections in bāyāz or commonplace books. There are a considerable number of later MSS. in various public libraries, in which the number of the quatrains is swelled by the addition of a vast number which are for the most part either variants of those in the earlier MSS., or frank repetitions of one another,1 until we arrive at the comparatively modern Cambridge MS, in which the ruba'iyat reach the alarming total of 801.

¹ I have found quatrains repeated even in the Paris MS. of A.H. 934 (e.g., 99, 154 and 172)

Of these the most valuable and interesting is. I think. the MS. No. 1548 in the Bengal Asiatic Society's Library at Calcutta, and it is especially interesting to English students as having been the principal other authority consulted by Professor Cowell when writing his article in the Calcutta Review, and used by Edward FitzGerald in the construction of his poem. Professor Cowell has kindly placed his copy of this MS. at my disposal for the purposes of this work. (Vide Terminal Essay, p. 296.) At the moment that the first edition was leaving the press, I received through the courtesy and pains of Mr. A. S. Pringle, Director of Indian Records in the Home Department at Calcutta, a copy of a very important MS. once the property of one Maulavi Khudā Baksh Khān Bahādur, by whom it had been presented to the public library at Bankipur. It forms (as usual) part of a collection of literary extracts, written by two Indian scribes in the year 961 A.H. It contains 604 ruba'iyat, of which 81 are not to be found in any of the MSS, and other collections noted in my Bibliographical References (p. 115). It will be observed therefore that, for its age, this is the largest collection that has hitherto been found, and, on account of the large number of ruba'ivat not found elsewhere, one of the most important. It will also be remarked by the student that, as a general rule, the readings of this MS. are identical with those of the Bodleian MS., even when all other texts are at variance with it, and that the meaning is more clear in this MS. than in any other under consideration. There are over 40 ruba'iyat in the Bodleian MS. that are not in this MS., so that these two alone give us nearly 650 ruba'iyat, of a date not later than 1553 A.D.

Scarcely less important than the MSS. are the lithographed editions of Teheran, Calcutta, Lucknow, Bombay, and Tabriz, from the first of which Mons. Nicolas made his printed text, 10 and from the last of which Professor

I. It would ill-beseem me to criticise adversely so valuable and in many respects scholarly a work as that of Mons. Nicolas, but it must be admitted that the accuracy of his translation, in many places, leaves much to be desired Where the meaning is more than ordinarily obscure, he generally shirks the Schuchovsky, of St. Petersburg, made his lithographed edition.1 These will be found duly noted in the Bibliographical References (p. 115), and in the Bibliography (p. 281). For the European student the text and translation of Mons. Nicolas is probably the best, though as a text alone, that of Mr. Whinfield, issued by Messrs. Trübner in 1883, is unsurpassed. This text Mr. Whinfield framed from a comparison of the Bodleian, the Calcutta, and the two India Office MSS., the Calcutta and Lucknow lithographs, and the printed editions of MM. Blochmann and Nicolas. It may seem churlish to look so valuable a text in the footnotes (so to speak), but regard being had to the very great diversities existing in the various texts, it is a great pity that Mr. Whinfield did not pursue a system of numbering the quatrains in his authorities, and so save the conscientious student a world of troubleso ne labour.3 A very interesting collection of quatrains attributed to Omar is included in that pantheon of Persian poetry, the Atash Kadah of Hajji Lutf Ali Beg of Isfahan, known as Azr, a collection numbering thirty-one quatrains, of which ten are represented in the translation and merely gives the intention of the original, and the assistance that Mr McCarthy would seem, from internal evidence, to have derived from Mons. Nicolas's translation, has caused the same observation to be applicable to his prose rendering. Mons. Nicolas was essentially a Sufi, and dragged in Sufistic interpretations wherever he could, attributing a mystic or divine interpretation to Omar's most obviously materialistic passages, by way of apology for the "sensualité quelquefois révoltante," which has passed into a proverb among students of Omar. Edward FitzGerald dealt at length with this amiable weakness (if one may so call it) in the preface to his second and subsequent editions. The reader is referred to Nicolas's note 5 on p 105, note 5 on p 143, note 1 on p 170, note 4 on p. 171, and note 2 on p. 183 of his translation, to quote only five out of a great number of such notes. The two last refer to qq 128 and 137 of the Bodleian quatrains.

2 It must be borne in mind that in the MSS, and lithographs the ruba'iyat are never numbered, and when in the course of this volume I refer to them by numbers, it must be understood that I am referring to numbers I have myself affixed in my copies to simplify the work of reference. Thus, therefore, if Mr Whinfield had numbered his Lucknow lithograph (for instance) his numbers would differ from mine, as I have used a later edition, containing more ruba'iyat than his.

Bodleian MS.¹ and twenty-one are of different, and probably later, origin.² The Paris MS. of this work has already been referred to. Azr was not born until A.D. 1722, and his "new" quatrains are as a whole very inferior to those in this MS. Everything, therefore, seems to point to the fact that the quatrains have been multiplied in every succeeding MS. by unscrupulous scribes, who boldly repeated quatrains, with or without slight variations, in view of the fact that they were probably paid "by the piece"; by religious objectors, who either altered quatrains to suit their own views, or added new ones to answer quatrains to which they especially objected; and by editors who have sought to give their work the importance of mere bulk.

Thus Mr. Whinfield's copy of the Lucknow lithograph, printed in 1868, contains 716 quatrains, the edition of 1878 contains 763, and my own copy, a re-issue lithographed in 1894, contains 770. Mrs. Jessie E. Cadell, who made the quatrains of Omar Khayyām a principal study of her regrettably short life, and published the results of her labours in Fraser's Magazine (May, 1879), collated all the authorities to be found in public libraries in Europe, and found over twelve hundred distinct quatrains attributed to him. I have attempted a catalogue of authorities available to the student in the Bibliographical Appendix. Passons outre.

A history of this poem in its most widely accepted European dress must necessarily partake largely of the nature of a Bibliographical Essay, which would take us beyond the purpose of an Introduction. A few words on the subject are, however, permissible in this place. The first Persian scholar to introduce Omar Khayyām to European readers was ^{1.} These are Nos 9, 47, 77, 62, 1, 103, 102, 109, 136, and 155 For fear of overburdening my work with variant readings I have not compared these with the Bodleian MS quatrains in the following pages.

^{2.} The editions of 1860 and 1881, lithographed by Fath-al-Kirim, at Bombay, contain 42 quatrains, of which 13 are represented in the Bodleian MS. The extra 11 quatrains are evidently recently added to the collection

Dr. Thomas Hyde, Regius Professor of Hebrew and Arabic at Oxford, who, in his "Veterum Persarum et Parthorum, et Medorum religionis historia" (Oxford, 1700, 2nd edition, 1760). recounts the story of the apparition of Omar, after his death, to his mother, and his recital of the well-known quatrain to her (vide post, note to q. 1). The first to make an extended study of the quatrains was Von Hammer-Purgstall, who, in his "Geschichte der schönen Redekünste Persiens" (Vienna, 1818), gave verse-translations of twenty-five quatrains, but does not state from what MS. he translated. Friedrich Rückert, who died in 1866, included two quatrains in his "Grammatik, Poetik und Rhetorik der Perser" (published at Gotha in 1874), and Sir Gore Ouseley, gave the same number in his "Biographical Notices of Persian Poets" (London, 1846), one of which was q. 81, post. Save for the pamphlet in which Garcin de Tassy, in 1857, forestalled FitzGerald, from materials derived from him, this brings us to the time when Omar was taken in hand by Professor Cowell and Edward FitzGerald.

It will not, I think, be uninteresting to gather from the letters written by Edward FitzGerald to his friends, and recently published by Messrs. Macmillan, his own account of the Persian studies that culminated in the production of the poem by which, it may fairly be said, the Ruba'iyat of Omar Khayyām became known to European readers. In 1845 it is clear that he had no leaning towards oriental subjects; indeed, in a letter to Frederick Tennyson (6th February, 1845) he says:

^{1. &}quot;Letters of Edward FitzGerald" (edited by W Aldis Wright). London (Macmillan), 1894 2 vols. Extracted from L. R.

^{2.} I wish, in this place, to record my sincere thanks to Mr Aldis Wright and Messrs Macmillan for their permission, readily granted me, to reprint the following voluminous extracts from their publication. Their edition of FitzGerald's works, referred to throughout this work as "L. R.," is indispensable, to the student of the poem, for all FitzGerald's work was more or less tinged by his studies of Omar Khayyām.

Eliot Warburton has written an Oriental book.¹ Ye Gods! In Shakespeare's day the nuisance was the Monsieur Travellers who had "swum in a gundello," but now the bores are those who have smoked Tschibouques with a Peshaw!

Early in 1846, however, we find him writing to his friend E. B. Cowell (now Professor of Sanskrit at the University of Cambridge):

• Your Hāfiz is fine; and his tavern world is a sad and just idea. . . . It would be a good work to give us some of the good things of Hāfiz and the Persians; of bulbuls and ghuls we have had enough.

Two years later he writes to Cowell (25th January, 1848):

Ten years ago I might have been vext to see you striding along in Sanskrit and Persian so fast; reading so much; remembering all; writing about it so well. But now I am glad to see any man do anything well, and I know that it is my vocation to stand and wait and know within myself whether it is well done.

In answer to some queries about FitzGerald's early Persian studies, Professor Cowell writes me as follows (21st October, 1806):

Edward FitzGerald began to read Persian with me in 1853; he read Jones's Grammar, which exactly suited him, as its examples of the values are always beautiful lines of poetry from Hafiz, Sādi, &c.

FitzGerald himself records the matter in his Letters, thus, to Cowell (25th October, 1853):

I have ordered Eastwick's Gulistan; for I believe I shall potter out so much Persian. The weak Apologue goes on, for I have not had time for much here, and I find it difficult enough even with Jones's Translation.

- 1 "The Crescent and the Cross, or Romance and Realities of Eastern Travel" London, 1845, 2 vols. 12mo.
- This refers to certain translations of selected Odes of Hāfiz, by Cowell, which he sent to FitzGerald to read They were subsequently incorporated by him in an article upon Hāfiz, and published anonymously in Fraser's Magazine for September, 1854

3 "A Grammar of the Persian Language," by Sir William Jones London,

1771 7th edition, London, 1809

- 4. An early edition of the translation cited in the Bibliographical References (p. 115).
- 5 "The Gardener and the Nightingale" in Sir William Jones's Persian Grammar
 - 6 Richmond, Surrey

Later (27th December, 1853) he writes to F. Tennyson:

I also amuse myself with poking out some Persian which E. Cowell would inaugurate me with; I go on with it because it is a point in common with him and enables us to study a little together.

After mastering the rudiments, FitzGerald first addressed himself seriously to Jāmī's poem of Salāmān and Absāl; Professor Cowell tells me (loc. cit.):

I read Jāmī's Salāmān and Absāl with him at Oxford in 1854 and '55, which he translated and published in 1896. J. W. Parker and Son were the publishers. The Life of Jāmī appeared in that volume.

Accordingly, we find FitzGerald writing to Cowell in 1855, in reply to a letter concerning Hāfiz:

Any such translation of such a writer as Hāfiz by you into pure, sweet and partially measured prose² must be better than what I am doing for Jāmī, whose ingenuous prattle I am stilting into too Miltonic verse. This I am very sure of. But it is done.

In the earliest days of 1856 the translation of Salāmān and Absāl was for practical purposes complete, and FitzGerald writes to Cowell:

I send you a sketch of Jāmi's Life, which cut, correct and annotate as you like. Where there was so little to tell, I have brought in all the fine names and extra bits I could to give it a little sparkle. There is very little after all; I have spread it over paper to give you room to note upon it. Only take care not to lose either these or yesterday's papers, for my terror at going over the ground.

You must put in the corrected Notice about the Sultan Hussein, both in the Memoir and in the Note to the Poem. The latter will have room for at least four (I think five) lines of note type, which you must fill, and not overflow: "Strong without rage," etc.

I feel guilty at taking up your time and thoughts, and also at dressing myself so in your plumes. But I mean to say a word about this, φωνᾶντα συνετοῖσιν, in my Preliminary Notice; and would gladly dedicate the little book to you by name, with due acknowledgment, did I think the world would take it for a compliment to you. But though I like the version, and you like it, we know very well the world—even the very little world, I mean, who will see it—may not; and might laugh at us both for any such compliment. They cannot laugh at your scholarship; but they might laugh at the use I put it to, and at my dedicating a cobweb (as Carlyle called Maud the other night) to you.

I. "Salāmān and Absāl, an Allegory." Translated from the Persian of Jāmī. London, 1856. A reprint of this edition was made in 1871 by Cowell and Sons, of Ipswich. The original was printed by Messrs. Childs, of Bungay.

^{1. 2.} This evidently refers to the article upon Hafiz cited in note 2, p. xv.

FitzGerald was evidently desirous of seeing his first oriental translation in print, for a few days later (10th February, 1856) he writes further to Cowell, as follows:

I sent you a string of questions about Salaman last week, all of which I did not want you to answer at once, but wishing at least to hear if you had leisure and inclination to meddle with them. There is no reason in the world you should, unless you really have time and liking. If you have, I will send you the proofs of the little book which Mr. Childs is even now putting in hand. Pray let me know as soon as you can what, and now much, of this will be agreeable to you.

You don't tell me how Hāfiz gets on. There is one thing which I think I find in Salāmān which may be worth your consideration (not needing much) in Hāfiz: namely, in Translation to retain the original Persian names as much as possible—"Shah" for "King," for instance, "Yúsuf and Suleyman" for "Joseph and Solomon," etc. The Persian is not only more musical, but removes such words and names further from Europe and European prejudices and associations. So also I think best to talk of "a moon" rather than "a month," and perhaps "sennight" is better than "week."

This is a little matter, but it is well to rub off as little Oriental colour as possible.

As to a notice of Jāmī's Life, you need not trouble yourself to draw it up unless you like, since I can make an extract of Ouseley's, and send you for any addition or correction you like.

This is the notice of Jāmī's life referred to by Professor Cowell in his letter to me. It was immediately after the publication of the Salāmān and Absāl in 1856 that Mr. Cowell was appointed Professor of History at the Presidency College in Calcutta, whither he went in August, 1856. In a letter written to him (22nd January, 1857) FitzGerald says:

I have read really little except Persian since you went; and yet, from want of eyes, not very much of that. I have gone carefully over two-thirds of Hāfiz again with Dictionary and Von

^{1.} Sir Gore Ouseley. "Bibliographical Notices of the Persian Poets" London, 1846. P. 131, No. 9, "Jami"

Hammer; and gone on with Jāmī and Nizāmī. But my great performance all lies in the last five weeks since I have been alone here; when I wrote to Napoleon Newton to ask him to lend me his MS. of Attar's Mantic ut tair; and, with the help of Garcin de Tassy, have nearly made out about two-thirds of it. For it has greatly interested me, though I confess it is always an old story.

On the 12th March, 1857, FitzGerald writes to Cowell:

To-day I have been writing twenty pages of a metrical sketch of the Mantic, for such uses as I told you of. It is an amusement to me to take what liberties I like with these Persians, who (as I think) are not poets enough to frighten one from such excursions. and who really do want a little art to shape them. I don't speak of Jeláleddin," whom I know so little of (enough to show me that he is no great artist, however), nor of Hafiz, whose best is untranslatable, because he is the best musician of words. Old Johnson said the poets were the best preservers of a language; for people must go to the original to relish them. I am sure that what Tennyson said to you is true: that Hafiz is the most Eastern-or. he should have said most Persian—of the Persians. He is the best representative of their character, whether his Sākī and Wine be real or mystical. Their religion and philosophy is soon seen through, and always seems to me cuckooed over like a borrowed thing, which people, once having got, don't know how to parade enough. To be sure their Roses and Nightingales are repeated enough; but Hāfiz and old Omar Khayyām ring like true metal The philosophy of the latter is, alas! one that never fails in the world. "To-day is ours," etc.

While I think of it, why is the sea (in that Apologue of Attar once quoted by Falconer) supposed to have lost God? Did the Persians agree with something I remember in Plato about the sea and all in it being an inferior nature? in spite of Homer's "Divine Ocean," etc.

This idea appears to have struck FitzGerald so much that he introduced it into the 33rd stanza of his Omar. Professor Cowell, writing on the subject to Mr. Aldis Wright, says:

- ı Joseph von Hammer, "Der Diwan von Mohammed Schemsed-din Hafis"... übersetzt von J. von H. Stuttgart, 1812, 2 vols. 12mo.
- 2. Vide note 1, p xxvi, post The influence which this study of the Mantik ut tair had upon Fitzgerald's paraphrase of the ruba'iyat will be seen in the notes to the translation post.
- More than one critic has called attention to the fact that so careful a scholar as FitzGerald should have given this mistransliteration of the name of [alal-ud-din Rumi.

I well remember showing it to Fitzgerald, and reading it with him in his early Persian days at Oxford in 1855. I laughed at the quaintness; but the idea seized his imagination from the first, and like Virgil with Ennius's rough jewels, his genius detected gold where I had only seen tinsel. He has made two grand lines out of it.¹

FitzGerald's correspondence with Garcin de Tassy would appear to have commenced about this period, and on the 29th March, 1857, he writes to Cowell, in a letter referring to other oriental translations:

Well; and I have had a note from Garcin de Tassy, whom I had asked if he knew of any copy of Omar Khayyām in all the Paris libraries; he writes: "I have made by means of a friend," etc. But I shall enclose his note to amuse you. Now what I mean to do is, in return for his politeness to me, to copy out as well as I can the Tetrastichs as you copied them for me, and send them as a present to De Tassy. Perhaps he will edit them. I should not wish him to do so if there were any chance of your ever doing it; but I don't think you will help on the old Pantheist, and De Tassy really, after what he is doing for the Mantic, deserves to make the acquaintance of this remarkable little fellow. Indeed, I think you will be pleased that I should do this. Now for some more Friday, April 17th.—I have been for the last five days with my brother at Twickenham; during which time I really copied out Omar Khayyām, in a way! and shall to-day post it as a "cadeau" to Garcin de Tassy in return for his courtesy to me. I am afraid a bad return; for my MS. is but badly written, and it would perhaps more plague than profit an English "savant" to have such a present made him. But a Frenchman gets over all this very lightly. Garcin de Tassy tells me he has printed four thousand lines of the Mantic.

And in a letter enclosed in this one for Mrs. Cowell, he says:

You may give him (i.e. E. B. C.) the enclosed instead of a former letter from the same G. de T. For is it not odd he should not have time to read a dozen of those 150 tetrastichs? I pointed out such a dozen to him of the best, and told him if he liked them, I would try and get the rest better written for him than I could write. I had also told him that the whole thing came from E. B. C., and I now write to tell him I have no sort of intention of writing a paper in the Journal Asiatique, nor I suppose E. B. C. neither; G. de Tassy is very civil to me, however.

Wednesday, April 22nd.—Now this morning comes a second letter from Garcin de Tassy, saying that his first note about Omar Khayyām was "in haste," that he had read some of the tetrastichs, which he finds not very difficult—some difficulties which are probably errors of the "copist"; and he proposes his writing an article in the Journal Asiatique on it, in which he will "honourably mention" E. B. C. and E. F. G. I now write to deprecate all this, putting it on the ground (and a fair one) that we do not yet know enough of the matter; that I do not wish E. B. C. to be made answerable for errors which E. F. G. (the "copist") may have made; and that E. F. G. neither merits nor desires any honourable mention as a Persian scholar, being none.

In the following month (7th May, 1857) he writes to Cowell:

To-day I have a note from the great De Tassy, which announces: "My dear Sir,- Definitively I have written a little paper upon Omar, with some quotations taken here and there at random, avoiding only the too badly-sounding Rubaiyat. I have read that paper before the Persian Ambassador and suite, at a meeting of the Oriental Society, of which I am Vice-President, the Duc de Doudeauville being President. The Ambassador has been much pleased with my quotations." So you see I have done the part of an ill subject in helping France to ingratiate herself with Persia when England might have had the start. I suppose it probable Ferukh Khan himself had never read or perhaps heard of Omar. I think I told you in my last that I had desired De Tassy to say nothing about you in any paper he should write; since I cannot have you answerable for any blunders I may have made in my copy, nor may you care to be named with Omar at all. I hope the Frenchman will attend to my desire; and I dare say he will, as he will then have all credit to himself. He says he cannot make out the metre of the Rubaiyat at all, never could, though "I am enough skilful in scanning the Persian verses, as you have seen" (Qy.) "in my Prosody of the Languages of Mussulman Countries," etc. So much for De Tassy.

And in a continuation of the above letter, dated June 5th, FitzGerald says:

- 1. The Journal of the (London) Asiatic Society is here referred to; not the Journal Asiatique of the Paris Society, in which De Tassy's "Note" was subsequently published Vide the Bibliographical References (p. 115)
- 2 Accordingly, in G de Tassy's pamphlet and article (vids Bibliography) there is no mention of E B C. or E F G, the discovery of the Ruba'iyat in the Bodle'an appearing to be De Tassy's own

When in Bedfordshire, I put away almost all books, except Omar Khayyam, which I could not help looking over in a paddock covered with buttercups and brushed by a delicious breeze, while a dainty racing filly of W. Browne's came startling up to wonder and sniff about me. "Tempus est quo Orientis, Aura mundus renovatur, Quo de fonte pluviali, dulcis Imber reseratur; Musimanus undecumque ramos insuper splendescit, Jesu-spiritusque salutaris terram pervagatur," which is to be read as Monkish Latin, like "Dies Irae," etc., retaining the Italian value of the vowels, not the classical. You will think me a perfectly Aristophanic old man when I tell you how many of Omar I could not help running into such bad Latin.2 I should not confide such follies but to you, who won't think them so, and who will be pleased at least with my still harping on our old studies. You would be sorry, too, to think that Omar breathes a sort of consolation to me! Poor fellow; I think of him and Oliver Basselin⁸ and Anacreon; lighter shadows among the shades, perhaps, over which Lucretius presides so grimly.

Thursday, June 11th.—Your letter of April is come to hand, very welcome; and I am expecting the MS. Omar, which I have written about to London. And now with respect to your proposed Fraser Paper on Omar. You see, a few lines back, I talk of some lazy Latin versions of his Tetrastichs, giving one clumsy example. Now I shall rub up a few more of those I have sketched in the same manner, in order to see if you approve.

The letter breaks off abruptly at this point, but is continued on the 23rd of June:

June 23rd.—I begin another letter because I am looking into the Omar MS. you have sent me, and shall perhaps make some notes and enquiries as I go on. I had not intended to do so till I had looked all over and tried to make out what I could of it; since it is both pleasant to oneself to find out for oneself if possible, and

I Vide Ruba'i No 13, post

2. Mr. Herbert W Greene, of Magdalen College, Oxford, has completed this task, and turned FitzGerald's Omar into a most elegant and charming volume of elegiacs, privately printed for him.—Vule the Bibliography (No. 94)

3. An apt illustration of the extent and breadth of FitzGerald's reading. Many of Omar's quatrains must have reminded him of Olivier Basselin's line (Vaux de Vire, xvii.), "Les morts ne boivent plus dedans la sépulture" I am surprised that the analogy between Omar and Herrick never seems to have struck FitzGerald Compare with this, for instance, Herrick's "Anacreontike" (Hesperides):

Born I was to be old, And for to die here: After that, in the mould Long for to lye here. But before that day comes, Still I be Bousing, For I know, in the Tombs There's no Carousing also saves trouble to one's friends. But yet it will keep me talking with you as I go along; and if I find I say silly things or clear up difficulties for myself before I close my letter (which has a month to be open in!), why, I can cancel or amend, so as you will see the whole process of blunder. I think this MS. furnishes some opportunities for one's critical faculties, and so is a good exercise for them, if one wanted such! . . . I must also tell you that Börrow! is greatly delighted with your MS. of Omar, which I showed him; delighted at the terseness, so unusual in Oriental verse. But his eyes are apt to cloud; and his wife has been obliged, he tells me, to carry off even the little Omar out of reach of them for a while.

Several such analogies are cited in the notes to the quatrains

4. The copy of the MS. in the Bengal Asiatic Society's Library at Calcutta to which I have referred above.

On July 1st he adds:

July 1st.—June over! A thing I think of with Omar like sorrow. And the 10ses here are blowing—and going—as abundantly as even in Pers'a. I am still at Geldestone, and still looking at Omar by an open window, which gives over a greener landscape than yours.

His letters to Cowell at this period largely partake of the nature of journals. On July 13th, 1857, he writes:

By to-morrow I shall have finished my first Physiognomy of Omar, whom I decidedly prefer to any Persian I have yet seen, unless perhaps Salāmān.

Tuesday, July 14th.—Here is the anniversary of our Adieu at Rushmere. And I have been (1ather hastily) getting to an end of my first survey of the Calcutta Omar by way of counterpart to our joint survey of the Ouseley MS. then (on the 14th July). I must repeat, I am sure this Calcutta Omar is, in the same proportion with the Ouseley, by as good a hand as the Ouseley; by as good a hand, if not Omar's; which I think you seemed to doubt if it was in one of your letters.

Have I previously asked you to observe 486? of which I send a poor Sir W. Jones' sort of Parody, which came into my mind walking in the garden here, where the rose is blowing as in Persia. And with this poor little envoy my letter shall end. I will not stop to make the verse better.

I long for wine! oh Sáki of my soul. Prepare thy song and fill the morning bowl. For this first summer month that brings the rose, Takes many a Sultan with it as it goes.²

- I do not know that George Borrow ever published any translations from the Persian beyond three odes in the "Targum," pp. 5-6 He printed privately 150 copies of a literal translation of the Jokes of the Khwaja Nasr ed din Efendi, under the title "The Turkish Jester, or the Pleasantries of Cogia Nasr ed din Effendi, translated from the Turkish by George Borrow." Ipswich, 1884. W. Webber.
- 2 Suggested by ruba'iyat which are Nos 118 and 135 in the Bodleian MS. The Calcutta MS. contains ruba'iyat much closer to E. F. G.'s verse, which became No. 8 in Fitzgerald's first edition, F. v 9

During the summer and autumn of 1857, FitzGerald would appear to have finished the first draft of his translation, and in a letter, written to Cowell on the 8th December, 1857, he says:

. I have left with Borrow the copy of the Mantic De Tassy gave • me; so some days ago I bought another copy of Norgate. For you must know I had again taken up my rough sketch of a translation which, such as it is, might easily be finished. But it is in truth no translation, but only the paraphrase of a syllabus of the poem; 1 quite unlike the original in style, too. But it would give, I think, a fair proportionate account of the scheme of the poem. If ever I finish it, I will send it you. Well, then, in turning this over, I also turned over volume i. of Sprenger's Catalogue,* which I bought by itself for 6s. a year ago. As it contains all the Persian MSS., I supposed that would be enough for me. I have been looking at his list of Attar's Poems. What a number! All, almost, much made up of Apologues, in which Attar excels. I think. His stories are better than Jami's; to be sure, he gives more to pick out of. An interesting thing in the Mantic is the stories about Mahmud. and these are the best in the book. I find I have got seven or eight in my brief extract. I see Sprenger says Attar was born in 513, four years before poor Omar Khayyam died! He mentions one of Attar's books, "The Book of Union," Waslat namah, which seems to be on the very subject of the Apologue to the Peacock's Brag in the Mantic, line 814 in De Tassy. I suppose this is no more the orthodox Mussulman version than it is ours. Sprenger also mentions as one separate book what is part of the Mantic, and main part, the Haftwady. Sprenger says (p. 350) how the MSS, of Attar differ from one another.

And now about old Omar. You talked of sending a paper about him to Fraser, and I told you, if you did, I would stop it till I had made my comments. I suppose you have not had time to do what you proposed; or are you overcome with the flood of bad Latin I poured upon you? Well, don't be surprised (vexed you won't be) if I solicit Fraser for room for a few quatrains in English verse, however, with only such an introduction as you and Sprenger give me—very short—so as to leave you to say all that is scholarly, if you will. I hope this is not very cavalier of me. But, in truth, I take old Omar rather more as my property than yours; he and I are more akin, are we not? You see all [his] Beauty, but you don't feel with him in some respects as I do. I think you would almost feel obliged to leave out the part of

r. This is as terse a description as could well be given of his poem, the Ruba'iyat of Omar.

^{2.} Vide post, Bibliographical References (p. 115), sub S.

Hamlet in representing him to your audience, for fear of mischief. Now I do not wish to show Hamlet at his maddest; but mad he must be shown, or he is no Hamlet at all. G. de Tassy eluded all that was dangerous, and all that was characteristic. I think these free opinions are less dangerous in an old Mahometan or an old Roman (like Lucretius) than when they are returned to by those who have lived on happier food. I don't know what you will say to all this. However, I dare say it won't matter whether I do the paper or not, for I don't believe they'll put it in. 1 . . .

I must, however, while I think of it, again notice to you about those first Introductory Quatrains to Omar in both the copies you have seen, taken out of their alphabetical place, if they be Omar's own, evidently by way of putting a good leg foremost—or perhaps not his at all. So that which Sprenger says begins the Oude MS. is, manifestly, not any Apology of Omar's own, but a Denunciation of him by someone else; and is a sort of parody (in form at least) of Omar's own quatrain 445,2 with its indignant reply by the Sultan.

In January he sent the manuscript to his publisher, and later again to Parker, and on the 3rd September, 1858, he says to Cowell:

I have not turned to Persian since the spring, but shall one day look back to it, and renew my attack on the "Seven Castles," if that be the name. I found the Jami MS. at Rushmere; and . there left it for the present, as the other poem will be enough for me for my first onslaught. I believe I will do a little a day, so as not to lose what little knowledge I had. As to my Omar, I gave it to Parker in January, I think; he saying Fraser was agreeable to take it. Since then I have heard no more; so as, I suppose, they don't care about it; and may be quite right. Had I thought that they would be so long, however, I would have copied it out and sent it to you; and I will still do so from a rough and imperfect copy I have (though not now at hand), in case they show no signs of printing me. My translation will interest you from its form, and also in many respects in its detail, very unliteral as it is. Many quatrains are mashed together and something lost I doubt, of Omar's simplicity, which is so much a vatue in him.5 But there

- 1. This anticipation, as will presently be seen, was realised.
- 2 In the Calcutta MS
- 3. These are the two quatrains Nos. 316 and 317 of Nicolas's text.
- 4. The seven castles of Bahram Gür alluded to by FitzGerald in his note upon that hero. They were made the subject of a well-known poetical romance, the Haft Parkar of Nizāmī, which is the work alluded to in the above letter.
- 5. Professor Cowell, writing to me under date 31st December, 1896, says: "You will be able to decide whether his first translation was made from the Oxford MS. only, by seeing whether that will account for all the tetrastichs. He altered and added, but he never, I fancy, invented an entire tetrastich of his own."

it is, such as it is. I purposely said in the very short notice I prefixed to the poem that it was so short because better information might be furnished in another paper which I thought you would undertake. So it rests.

And on the 2nd November he writes again to Cowell:

• As to Omar, I hear and see nothing of it in Fraser yet; and so I suppose they don't want it. I told Parker he might find it rather dangerous among his Divines; he took it, however, and keeps it. I really think I shall take it back; add some stanzas, which I kept out for fear of being too strong; print fifty copies and give away; one to you, who won't like it neither. Yet it is most ingeniously tesselated into a sort of Epicurean ecloque in a Persian garden.

On the 13th January, 1859, he writes to Cowell:

I am almost ashamed to write to you, so much have I forsaken Persian, and even all good books of late. There is no one now to "prick the sides of my intent"; vaulting ambition having long • failed to do so! I took my Omar from Fraser [? Parker], as I saw he didn't care for it; and also I want to enlarge it to near as much again of such matter as he would not dare to put in Fraser. If I print it, I shall do the impudence of quoting your account of Omar, and your apology for his freethinking; it is not wholly my apology, but you introduced him to me, and your excuse extends to that which you have not ventured to quote, and I do. I'like your apology extremely also, allowing its point of view. I doubt you will repent of ever having showed me the book. I should like well to have the lithograph copy of Omar which you tell of in your note.1 My translation has its merit, but it misses a main one in Omar, which I will leave you to find out. The Latin versions, if they were corrected into decent Latin, would be very much better. . . . I have forgotten to write out for you a little quatrain which Binning found written in Persepolis; the Persian tourists having the same propensity as English to write their names and sentiments on their national monuments. This is the quatrain:

> The palace that to Heav'n his pillars threw, And kings the forehead on his threshold drew— I saw the solitary ring-dove there, And "Coo, coo, coo," she cried, and "Coo, coo, coo."

And on the 27th of April, having printed his Quatrains, he wrote to Cowell:

1. The Calcutta edition of 1836

2. Vide Robert B. M. Binning, "A Journal of Two Years' Travel in Persia, Ceylon, etc." London, 1857, vol. ii, p. 20.

3. The copy in the Library of the British Museum was received there on the 30th March, 1859.

I sent you poor old Omar, who has his kind of consolation for all these things. I doubt you will regret you ever introduced him to me. And yet you would have me print the original, with many worse things than I have translated. The Bird Epic might be finished at once; but cui bono? No one cares for such things, and there are doubtless so many better things to care about. I hardly know why I print any of these things, which nobody buys: and I scarce now see the few I give them to. But when one has done one's best, and is sure that that best is better than so many will take pains to do, though far from the best that might be done, one likes to make an end of the matter by print. I suppose very few people have ever taken such pains in translation as I have, though certainly not to be literal. But at all cost, a thing must live, with a transfusion of one's own worse life if one can't retain the originals better. Better a live sparrow than a stuffed eagle. I shall be very well pleased to see the new MS. of Omar.

He evidently did not look upon this as the last word to be said on the subject of Omar, for on the 7th December, 1861, we find him writing to Cowell:

I shall look directly for the passages in Omar and Hāfiz which you refer to and clear up, though I scarce ever see the Persian character now. I suppose you would think it a dangerous thing to edit Omar; else, who so proper? Nay, are you not the only man to do it? And he certainly is worth good re-editing. I thought him from the first the most remarkable of the Persian poets, and you keep finding out in him evidences of logical fancy

This was never printed in FitzGerald's lifetime It occupies pp. 433-482 of vol. ii of the "Letters and Literary Remains" The following note by Professor Cowell is prefixed to it. "FitzGerald was first interested in 'Attar's Mantik-ut-tair' by the extracts given in De Sacy's notes to his edition of that poet's Pand-nāmah, and in 1856 he began to read the original in a MS lent to him by Mr. Newton of Hertford. In 1857, Garcin de Tassy published his edition of the Persian text, of which he had previously given an analysis in his 'La Poésie philosophique et religieuse chez les Persans', and FitaCerald at once threw himself into the study of it with all his characteristic enthusiasm. De Tassy subsequently published, in 1863, a French prose translation of the poem; but the previous analysis was, I believe, FitzGerald's only help in mastering the difficulties of the original. He often wrote to me in India, describing the pleasure he found in his new discovery, and he used to. mention how the more striking apologues were gradually shaping themselves into verse, as he thought them over in his lonely walks. At last, in 1862, he sent me the following translation, intending at first to offer it for publication in the Journal of the Bengal Asiatic Society, but he soon felt that it was too free a version for the pages of a scientific journal. He then talked of publishing it by itself, but the project never assumed a definite shape, though I often urged him to print the 'Bird Parliament' as a sequel to the 'Salaman.'" which I had not dreamed of. I dare say these logical riddles are not his best, but they are yet evidences of a strength of mind which our Persian friends rarely exhibit, I think. I always said about Cowley, Donne, etc., whom Johnson calls the metaphysical poets, that their very quibbles of fancy showed a power of logic which could follow fancy through such remote analogies. This is the case with Calderon's conceits also. I doubt I have given but a very one-sided version of Omar; but what I do only comes up as a bubble to the surface and breaks; whereas you, with exact scholarship, might make a lasting impression of such an author.

And writing to Prof. W. H. Thompson, who subsequently became Master of Trinity, he says:

• As to my own peccadilloes in verse, which never pretend to be original, this is the story of Rubaiyat. I have translated them partly for Cowell; young Parker asked me some years ago for something for Fraser, and I gave him the less wicked of these to use if he chose. He kept them for two years without using; and as I saw he didn't want them I printed some copies with Quaritch; and, keeping some for myself, gave him the rest. Cowell, to whom I sent a copy, was naturally alarmed at it; he being a very religious man; nor have I given any other copy but to George Borrow, to whom I had once lent the Persian, and to old Donne when he was down here the other day, to whom I was showing a passage in another book which brought my old Omar up.

Omar drops out of his correspondence from this point until the 28th December, 1867, when he writes to Cowell:

I don't think I told you about Garcin de Tassy. He sent me (as no doubt he sent you) his annual Oration.³ I wrote to thank him; and said I had been lately busy with another countryman of his, Mons. Nicolas, with his Omar Khayyām. On which De Tassy writes back by return of post to ask "Where I got my copy of Nicolas? He had not been able to get one in all Paris!" So I wrote to Quaritch, who told me the book was to be had of Maisonneuve, or any Oriental bookseller in Paris; but

^{1.} FitzGerald's first translations from Calderon were published in 1853, under the title "Six Dramas from Calderon" They were badly received by the Press; the Athenaum, in particular, attacked the work so violently that he withdrew them from circulation, and destroyed the whole edition. They are reprinted in extenso in vol. ii. of the "Letters and Literary Remains."

As Professor of Oriental Languages in the Institut de France. There is a Recueil Factice of these in the British Museum containing his annual orations from 1853 to 1869.

that probably the shopman did not understand when "Les Rubaiyat d'Omar," etc., were asked for, that it meant "Les Quatrains," etc. This (which I doubt not is the solution of the mystery) I wrote to Garcin, at the same time offering one of my two copies. By return of post comes a frank acceptance of one of the copies, and his own translation of Attár's Birds by way of equivalent. . . . At p. 256, Translation (v. 4620), I read, "Lorsque Nizâm ul-Mulk fut à l'agonie, il dit: 'O mon Dieu! je m'en vais entre les mains du vent.'" Here is our Omar in his friend's mouth, is it not?

In September, 1863, Mr. Ruskin addressed a letter to "The Translator of the Rubaiyat of Omar," which he entrusted to Mrs. Burne Jones, who, after an interval of nearly ten years, handed it to Charles Eliot Norton, Professor of the History of Fine Art in Harvard University.² By him it was transmitted to Carlyle, who sent it to FitzGerald, with the letter which follows, of which the signature alone is in his own handwriting:

CHELSEA, 14th April, 1873.

DEAR FITZGERALD,-Mr. Norton, the writer of that note, is a distinguished American (co-Editor for a long time of the North American Review), an extremely amiable, intelligent and worthy man, with whom I had some pleasant walks, dialogues and other communications of late months, in the course of which he brought to my knowledge, for the first time, your notable Omar Khayyam, and insisted on giving me a copy from the third edition, which I now possess, and duly prize. From him, too, by careful crossquestioning, I identified beyond dispute the hidden "FitzGerald," the translator; and, indeed, found that his complete silence and unique modesty in regard to said meritorious and successful performance was simply a feature of my own Edward F.! translation is excellent; the book itself a kind of a jewel in its way. I do Norton's mission without the least delay, as you perceive. Ruskin's message to you passes through my hands sealed. I am ever your affectionate

T. CARLYLE.

At the same time Carlyle wrote to Prof. Norton:

5 CHEYNE ROW, CHELSEA, 18th April, 1873.

DEAR NORTON,—It is possible FitzGerald may have written to you; but whether or not, I will send you his letter to myself, as a

- 1. Vide note 2 to Ruba'i No. 121, post.
- 2. Vide the Bibliography, No. 71 slight emblem and memorial of the peaceable, affectionate, and ultra-modest man, and his innocent far niente life, and the connection (were there nothing more) of Omar, the Mahometan Blackguard, and Oliver Cromwell, the English Puritan, discharging you completely, at the same time, from ever returning me this letter, or taking any notice of it, except a small silent one.

The following was enclosed:

15th April, 1873.

MY DEAR CARLYLE,—Thank you for enclosing Mr. Norton's letter, and will you thank him for his enclosure of Mr. Ruskin's? It is lucky for both R. and me that you did not read his note; a sudden fit of fancy, I suppose, which he is subject to. But as it was kindly meant on his part, I have written to thank him. Rather that in the day, for his letter (which Mr. Norton thinks may have lain a year or two in his friend's desk) is dated September, 1863. . . .

P.S.—Perhaps I had better write a word of thanks to Mr. Norton myself, which I will do. I suppose he may be found at the address he gives.

Accordingly, he wrote to Prof. Norton:

WOODBRIDGE, 17th April, 1873.

DEAR SIR,—Two days ago Mr. Carlyle sent me your note, enclosing one from Mr. Ruskin "to the Translator of Omar Khayyam." You will be a little surprised to hear that Mr. Ruskin's note is dated September, 1863; all but ten years ago! I dare say he has forgotten all about it long before this. However, I write him a note of thanks for the good, too good, messages he sent me; better late than never; supposing that he will not be startled, and bored by my acknowledgments of a forgotten favour rather than gratified. It is really a funny little episode in the ten vears' dream. I had asked Carlyle to thank you also for such trouble as you have taken in the matter. But as your note to him carries your address, I think I may as well thank you for myself. I am very glad to gather from your note that Carlyle is well, and able to walk, as well as talk, with a congenial companion. Indeed, he speaks of such agreeable conversation with you in the message he appends to your letter. For which, thanking you once more, allow me to write myself, yours sincerely, EDWARD FITZGERALD.

After this we hear nothing further of Omar from FitzGerald until the 1st March, 1882, when he writes to Mr. Schütz Wilson the following letter:

1. Vide the Bibliography, No. 75.

1st March, 1882.

My DEAR Sir,—I must thank you sincerely for your thoughts about Salāmān, in which I recognise a good will towards the Translator as well as liking for his work.

Of course, your praise could not but help that on; but I scarce think that it is of a kind to profit so far by any review as to make it worth the expense of time and talent you might bestow upon it. In Omar's case it was different; he sang in an acceptable way, it seems, of what all men feel in their hearts, but had not had Jāmī tells of what everybody knows, exprest in verse before. under cover of a not very skilful allegory. I have undoubtedly improved the whole by boiling it down to about a quarter of its original size, and there are many pretty things in it, though the blank verse is too Miltonic for Oriental style,

All this considered, why did I ever meddle with it? Why, it was the first Persian poem I read, with my friend Edward Cowell, near on forty years ago; and I was so well pleased with it then (and now think it almost the best of the Persian poems I have read or heard about), that I published my version of it in 1856 (I think) with Parker, of the Strand. When Parker disappeared, my unsold copies, many more than of the sold, were returned to me; some of which, if not all, I gave to little Quaritch, who, I believe, trumpeted them off to some little profit, and I thought no more of them.1

But some six or seven years ago that Sheikh of mine, Edward Cowell, who liked the version better than anyone else, wished it to be reprinted. So I took it in hand, boiled it down to threefourths of what it originally was, and (as you see) clapt it on the back of Omar, where I still believed it would hang somewhat of a dead weight; but that was Quaritch's look out, not mine. I have never heard of any notice taken of it, but just now from you; and I believe that, say what you would, people would rather have the old sinner alone. Therefore it is that I write all this to you. I doubt not that any of your editors would accept an article from you on the subject, but I believe also they would much prefer one on many another subject; and so probably with the public whom you write for.

Thus "liberavi animam meam" for your behoof, as I am rightly bound to do in return for your goodwill to me.

As to the publication of my name, I believe I could well dispense with it, were it other and better than it is. But I have some unpleasant associations with it; not the least of them being, that it was borne, Christian and surname, by a man who left college just when I went there. . . . What has become of him I know not; but he, among other causes, Jias made me dislike my name, and made me sign myself (half in fun, of course) to my friends, as now I do to you, sincerely yours,

(The Laird of) LITTLEGRANGE, where I date from.

^{1.} It is strange that FitzGerald makes no allusion here to the reprint of the first edition made by Cowell and Sons, & Ipswich, in 1871.

The FitzGerald referred to in this letter was Edward Marlborough FitzGerald, who, I am informed, achieved some notoriety in unenviable directions. To this correspondence with Mr. Schütz Wilson the year before his death he refers in two of his letters to Fanny Kemble¹ in the terms following:

February, 1882.

Mr. Schutz Wilson, a littérateur en général, I believe, wrote up Omar Khayyam some years ago, and I dare say somewhat hastened another (and so far as I am concerned) final edition.

March, 1882.

Not content with having formerly appraised that Omar in a way that, I dare say, advanced him to another edition, he (S. W.) now writes me that he feels moved to write in favour of another Persian who now accompanies Omar in his last Avatar. I have told him plainly that he had better not employ time and talent on what I do not think he will ever persuade the public to care about, but he thinks he will. He may very likely cool upon it; but in the meanwhile such are his good intentions, not only to the little poem, but, I believe, to myself also—personally unknown as we are to one another.

Such is the history, as recorded by its author, of the Poem which of late years has become in a manner the gospel of a cult.

So many eminent scholars, poets and essayists have given to the world critical essays and appreciations, having for their theme this poem of Edward FitzGerald's, that were I to add a further discourse on the subject I should be adding an item of little or no value to the mass of analytical criticism. One aspect of the poem I may, however, be allowed to consider, on the ground that I have an intimate acquaintance with the original in general and with FitzGerald's sources of inspiration in particular; and that is its claim to consideration as a translation. A translation pure and simple it is not, but a translation in the most artistic sense of the term it undoubtedly is. In considering this question it is necessary to bear in mind the first and the second editions of the poem, for these were written under the direct inspiration of the original Persian.1 The first edition was written from the Bodleian MS. and the transcript of the Calcutta MS.; the second-but it will profit us to read FitzGerald's own words from the preface to the second (1868) edition: "While the present edition of Omar was preparing, Mons. Nicolas, French Consul at Rescht, published a very careful and a very good edition of the text, from a lithograph copy at Teheran, comprising 464 ruba'iyat, with translation and notes of his own. Mons. Nicolas's edition has reminded me of several things, and instructed me in others. . . ." In this second edition FitzGerald expanded his original seventy-five quatrains to one hundred and ten, nine of which were suppressed in the third and subsequent editions. The method of construction adopted by FitzGerald must be borne in mind. I assumed at one time that he had made a more or less literal prose translation of his originals, and, after steeping himself in these, wrote his poem: and I suggested this theory to Professor Cowell. He writes me under date 8th July, 1897: "I am quite sure that Mr. Fitz-Gerald did not make a literal prose version first; he was too fond of getting the strong, vivid impression of the original as a whole. He pondered this over and over afterwards, and

^{1. &}quot;Letter of Edward FitzGerald to Fanny Kemble, 1871-1883," edited by William Aldis Wright. London (Bentley), 1895

^{2.} My researches upon this subject are embodied in the Terminal Essay to this edition, p 288.

1. Dr. Talcott Williams, the eminent Arabic scholar, writing to Mr. Nathan H. Dole (vol. i. of N. H. Dole's edition, p. 123), observes "In my judgment Omar owes more to FitzGerald than he does to himself, as far as English readers are concerned. I do not mean by this that Omar's thought differs with the utterances of FitzGerald's translation, but the utterance owes so much in our language to the form in which FitzGerald has cast it, that I have always felt, in the few quatrains which I have laboriously translated, that pretty much everything had evaporated when the thought was taken out of FitzGerald's setting. The truth is, in literature, form is everything. Everybody has the same ideas, I fancy, and it is only the capacity for expression which makes literature. . . . I really cannot exaggerate the difference between native and European knowledge of an oriental language. We generally know their formal grammar, history and derivatives of their tongues especially, a hundredfold better than they do; but when it comes to the meaning of a particular passage, we are simply nowhere. It is a simple and soul-humbling truth that the first translation or two of almost any Oriental work is full of the wildest shot." The student who undertakes the translation of any Persian author speedily realises that not to Sa'adi alone might be applied the well-known Eastern saying, "Each word of Sa'adı has seventy-two meanings " altered it in his lonely walks, sometimes approximating nearer to the original, and often diverging further. He was always aiming at some strong and worthy equivalent; verbal accuracy he disregarded." Professor Cowell has honoured me with a good. deal of information on this matter of FitzGerald's methods, supplementing the information contained in Fitz-Gerald's own letters reproduced above. I will quote some of this information at once:

Rhayyam in the Bodleian and made a copy for him, which I sent him just before I went to India in August of that year. He sent a transcript of that copy to Garcin de Tassy. . . . I reviewed Omar Khayyam in the Calcutta Review in 1858. . . . I made a French edition of one of Khayyam's mathematical works my 'text.' FitzGerald alludes to my article in his preface. . . . He read the "Parliament of Birds" in a MS. directly I left England, and sent me his account of it, and subsequently his verse translation. Garcin de Tassy published his text and translation in 1858 and '59, and this FitzGerald used for his revised translation, published after his death. . . .

23rd October, 1896.—The MS. in the Ouseley collection was the only MS. I then (1856) knew—all the MSS. were then ouncatalogued. My copy is dated "May 31st, 1856. Bodleian Library." I had never seen a MS. of the quatrains, so it was a real "find!"...

29th October, 1896.—I have the copy of the Oxford MS. which I sent to E. F. G., but it is too sacred a legacy to be lent to anyone²—it is filled with his notes as well as with letters of mine to him from Calcutta. . . .

31st December, 1896.—I got a copy made for him from the one MS. in the Bengal Asiatic Society's Library at Calcutta soon after I arrived in November, 1856. It reached FitzGerald, June 14th, 1857, as I learn by a note in his writing. Some time after this I sent him a copy of that rare Calcutta printed edition, which I got from my Munshi. I had just got it when I wrote my article in the Calcutta Review, which was mainly compiled from the two texts of the Calcutta and Oxford manuscripts. . . . You will be able to decide whether his first translation was made from the Oxford MS. only, by seeing whether that will account for all the tetrastichs. He altered and added, but he never, I fancy, invented an entire tetrastich of his own. . . . I feel persuaded that his first translation was compiled from the Oxford and Calcutta MSS. combined. You will find tetrastichs from the latter represented in his translation which have no parallel in the brief Oxford MS. . . . I have no MS. copy of his translation. That was all done after I had left England. He used to send me questions by letter. . . .

^{...} I. Vide note I, p xxvi.

^{2.} I had asked Professor Cowell to lend me this.

^{3.} The Calcutta lithograph of 1836

I desire to record in this place my profound gratitude to Professor Cowell for all this most interesting information, which he alone is competent to give ex cathedra. To return, in the light of these extracts, to the question of how far Edward FitzGerald may be called the translator of the Quatrains of Omar Khayyam, Professor Charles Eliot Norton, in the North American Review (October, 1869), says: "He is to be called 'translator' only in default of a better word, one which should express the poetic transfusion of a poetic spirit from one language to another, and the re-representation of the ideas and images of the original in a form not altogether diverse from their own, but perfectly adapted to the new conditions of time, place, custom, and habit of mind in which they reappear. It has all the merit of a remarkable original production, and its excellence is the highest testimony that could be given to the essential impressiveness and worth of the Persian poet. It is the work of a poet inspired by the work of a poet; not a copy, but a reproduction; not a translation, but the re-delivery of a poetic inspiration . . . in its English dress it reads like the latest and freshest expression of the perplexity and of the doubt of the generation to which we ourselves belong."

The opposition in the debate, if I may so call it, is supported by Mr. H. G. Keene in an article written for Macmillan's Magazine (November, 1887). Reviewing FitzGerald's paraphrase, he says: "This unique and beautiful poem does not in truth's show the real Khayyām. Unquestionably among the fine things in modern English verse, these quatrains give no accurate representation of the original in any of their versions; as indeed the variations of successive editions do themselves tend to show. . . . In FitzGerald . . . of the flighty Persian freethinker, eclectic and unsystematic, we see little or nothing." The want of system here described as lacking in FitzGerald's poem is explained for the orientalist by the exigencies of the diwan form in which Omar's quatrains have for the most part been preserved and published. It is beyond the function of criticism from the standpoint of accurate rendering to brand FitzGerald's compulsory marshalling and re-organisation of his material with the stigma of inaccuracy. After presenting us with some renderings of the original into English verserenderings, by-the-way, far above the average of such achievements, both as to manner and translation-Mr. Keene says: "It is difficult to explain by isolated specimens FitzGerald's deviations from his original, because his variation is general and total. The difference between him and Khayyam is the same as that between a group of epigrams and a long satire." The essayist then illustrates by quoting two out of the four quatrains (F. v. 78-81), in which FitzGerald has summed up the philosophy of the whole poem, and appends a literal prose translation of two out of the twenty or thirty quatrains of the original that contain the inspiration of those four verses. It is unfair to make this juxtaposition and to imply that FitzGerald intended his two verses as translations of the two originals given. During the twelve years that I have been working at the subject, it has interested me to note wherever I found a line in the Bodleian or in the Calcutta MSS. that could be distinctly pointed out as "the original" of a line of FitzGerald. A very few emendations were taken by him, as he himself says, for his second and subsequent editions, from the text of Nicolas, and at some future time I propose to print an edition of FitzGerald's quatrains, giving the original, or inspiration, of every quatrain, if not or every individual line. The reader of the following pages will be able to judge for himself how close to the originals whole quatrains of FitzGerald's poem really are.

Whilst these pages have been passing through the press I have been following up the clue afforded by Professor Cowell's observations (vide p. xviii. and xix.) as to the origin of the distich beginning "Earth could not answer, nor the seas that mourn," and FitzGerald's own quotation of the dying utterances of Nizām ul Mulk from the Mantik ut tair of Ferīd ud dīn Attār, and I have made the discovery that most, if all of FitzGerald's lines which have baffled students, of the ruba'iyat of Omar Khayyam, are taken from that poem, which FitzGerald had deeply studied immediately before he addressed himself to his Omar. (Vide note 1, p. xxvi.) These parallels I propose to set forth in another place; 1 for the present, suffice it to say that I have found in the Mantik ut tair the originals of the quatrain beginning "Oh Thou! who man of baser earth didst make," and that beginning, "Heaven but the Vision of fulfilled desire," and many other quatrains and isolated lines. A number of these parallels are indicated in the notes accompanying the text (vide post).

The faults, if faults they be, which Mr. Keene attributes to FitzGerald, are necessarily inseparable from any verse translation, the exigencies of rhyme and metre compelling a distortion of the translated lines. These faults are abundantly manifest in the verse translations of Mr. Keene himself. Mr. Whinfield has observed: "Omar is a poet who can hardly be translated satisfactorily otherwise than in verse. . . . The successor of a translator like Mr. FitzGerald, who ventures to write verse, and especially verse of the metre which he has handled with such success, cannot help feeling at almost every step that he is provoking comparisons very much to his own disadvantage. But I do not think this consideration ought to deter him from using the vehicle which everything else indi-" cates as the proper one." Even admitting this contention, one cannot help regretting that Mr. Whinfield did not also give us the literal prose translation he may be assumed to have made in the first instance; a comparison of the literal translations comprised in the present volume with his verse renderings of the same quatrains, will, I think, abundantly justify this regret, from the point of view of the mere student. It is next door to impossible to imitate in English the prevailing metre of the ruba'iyat: Mr. Michael Kerney, the anonymous editor of the American reprint of FitzGerald's collected works (Boston, 1887), has attempted it in his notes to the quatrains, with a result which must be seen to be believed. enthusiastic student of the ruba'iyat, however, has handled the metre of the original with grace and felicity, and that is Mr. Nathan H. Dole, editor of the Boston Variorum Edition of 1896, in his own introductory "ruba'iyat"; these contain the true lilt of the original without resorting to verbal quirks that jar upon the occidental ear. Of verse translations, the best I have seen are those of Professor C. J. Pickering, in the National Review for December, 1890.1

¹ Vule the Terminal Essay to this edition, p 288.

A few words in conclusion, by way of apology for my own work. It does not aim at being an edition of the Ruba'iyat of Omar Khayyām in general, but it is an attempt to place before English readers a literal translation of the oldest known MS. of the quatrains, and an exposition of the most important section of the material used by FitzGerald in the construction of his poem. In the case of the majority of the quatrains the task is not an especially difficult one, but in the case of the residual minority, the obscurity of the original has made the work one of the greatest doubt and anxiety. Such, for instance, are qq. 14, 19, 30, 50, 57, 98, 104, 106, 113, 142—quatrains in which the correct rendering of almost every individual line is highly debateable.²

- Later scribes and editors have made bold emendations, and these I have diligently marshalled, with the result that I have decided to supplement and, where possible, elucidate the readings of the Bodleian MS, by reference to the following texts:
- 1. The reader or critic who feels curious to know to what extent a translation can be abused is referred to the Spectator, vol. lxiii, p. 215 (Aug. 17, 1889)
 - 2. Vide note I, p xxxii.

- 1. The MS. No. 1458 in the Bengal Asiatic Society's Library at Calcutta. It is a 12mo containing 49 leaves. It has 9 ruba'iyat on each leaf, and 87 further ruba'iyat are written upon the margins. Page b of leaf 1 contains a prose preface ending with the anecdote of Omar's apparition to his mother, which leads to the opening ruba'i of the MS. quoted in the note to q. 1, post.
 - 1a. The Bankipur MS. described at p. xi.
- 2. The Lucknow lithographed edition. My copy, referred to as L. in the notes to this text, is one of the edition of A.H. 1312 (A.D. 1894), containing 770 quatrains.
- 3. The text printed opposite to his prose translation by Mons. Nicolas. Taken from the edition lithographed in Teheran in A.H. 1278 (A.D. 1861).
- 4. The text lithographed in St. Petersburg in 1888, taken from the Tabriz edition of A.H. 1285 (A.D. 1868). It is identical with the text of Mons. Nicolas, excepting that it contains one ruba'i (No. 48) not in Nicolas, and does not contain the Nos. 35, 196, 316, 317, 365, 390, 439, and the concluding five ruba'iyat, which are out of their dīwān order at the end of that text.
- 5. The Paris MS. before referred to, containing 346 ruba'iyat, and dated A.H. 934 (A.D. 1538).²
- 6. The Bombay lithographed edition of A.H. 1297 (A.D. 1880), containing 756 ruba'iyat.
 - 7. The text printed by Mr. Whinfield, described elsewhere.
- r. Dr. Rieu, in his Catalogue of the Persian MSS in the British Museum, states that Nicolas's text is that of Sanjar Mirza, i thographed at Teheran in a h. 1278, with a few additional ruba'iyat from other sources.
- 2 The copy of the Paris MS of A.H 934 which I have had made for me only reached me when these sheets were almost ready for the printer. The first edition was, in fact, kept back in order that the information to be found in so important a MS. might be included. My copy was unfortunately made by hand instead of by photography, and contains clerical errors; still, it is clear that nearly all the Bodleian ruba iyat are to be found in it, and that where this is the case the readings are in the majority of cases identical. The haste in which I compared this Paris MS. with this and the other texts may have caused me to overlook some few references that might have been added, had it been in my hands during the years that these notes have been in course of preparation.

I have also consulted, for the elucidation of obscure readings, but have not collated all through, or given crossreferences to, the following:

- 8. The MS. in the British Museum, Or. 330.
- 9. The MS. in the British Museum, Add. 27,318.
- 10. The Calcutta lithographed edition of 1836.
- 11. A collection of ruba'iyat by Omar Khayyam, Bābā Tāhir, and Attār, lithographed at Teheran in 1857.
- 12. The 41 quatrains contained in the Atash Kadah of Azr, described elsewhere (p. xiii. and note 2).
 - 13. The Paris MS. of A.H. 920 (A.D. 1514).
 - 14. The Paris MS. of A.H. 937 (A.D. 1530).

I have also noted, where necessary, the translations of Nicolas, Whinfield, Cowell, and Garcin de Tassy.

It will therefore be observed that when it would appear from the notes to my text that a ruba'i is "only to be found in the Bodleian MS.," it must be borne in mind that I have actually searched for it only among the 4,415 ruba'iyat comprised in the first eight of the texts above referred to.

The exigences of time, space, my reader's patience, and my publisher's pocket have made me, with some regret I own, but, I think, with advantage to my book, omit a vast mass of references to other ruba'iyat, not identical with, but more or less closely corresponding to, ruba'iyat that are contained in this MS. The inclusion of these would have swelled my notes far beyond the dimensions of the whole work as it stands. The curious who care to see what they have been spared may make the following comparisons between this text and that of Mons. Nicolas alone. They are picked at random from several hundred references:

Compare Bodleian MS. q. 21 with Nicolas's text, q. 117

,, •,, 29 ,, ,, 177 ,, ,, 34 ,, ,, 168-9 Compare Bodleian MS. q. 85 with Nicolas's text, q. 191

,,	,,	116	"	,,	115
19	,,	127	,,	,,	64
,,	,,	129	"	,,	. 72
D	,,	139	"	,,	•61

In like manner, when referring to parallel passages from other authors, I have only given the originals (in the Persian notes) in the cases where there exist printed or lithographed texts available for reference and easily obtainable. It seems a grievous thing to refer the student to an isolated MS. in the British Museum or elsewhere, and I have avoided doing so, but it may be observed that my quotations from the Beharistān are taken from the British Museum MSS., Add. 18,579 and 7,775. I do not think that the most exacting critic will blame me for transposing the order of the pages of the original MS.; to have arranged them to read backwards, according to oriental custom, would have savoured of pedantry.

Most translators of oriental works have given elaborate explanations of the system they have adopted in transliterating Persian words. It is pitiable that no universal system has been established, for the diversities to be found in all transliterations are confusing in the extreme. One finds this even in the name Khayyām, which will be found transliterated in the Bibliography (p. 281) Khaiam, Khaiyam, Chiam, Chajjam, etc., etc. I have adopted the expedient of noting only strong vowel sounds represented in the original by Alif, Waw, and Ye, giving always a supplementary note of the actual Persian where I have been compelled to transliterate. FitzGerald crystallized (so to speak) for all time the transliteration "ruba'iyat," a transliteration which I would fain see fall into disuse and thence into oblivion. ruba'i is common to more than one oriental language, and is correctly translated "quatrain." Between the letters of the first part of the word "ruba" and the terminal -i, or -y, occurs the purely oriental letter p = soft gh, as in our word

"high," as opposed to the $\dot{p} = \text{hard } gh$, as in our word "ghost," the terminal -at being an artificial form of Persian plural borrowed from the Arabic, in which language it is the regular plural termination of feminine nouns. If, therefore, it be desired to retain this Persian word in the title of an English translation (a pedantry which would be deemed inexcusable were it to occur in such a title as, for instance, "The Gedichte of Henry Heine"), it seems a pity that the transliteration "rubaghyat," which conveys an idea of the rich sonority of the original, culcul, should not be adopted in place of the spiritless and thin rendering "ruba'iyat," even with the gh indicated as is usual by an inverted comma. I have, however, taken counsel with Professor Cowell, Mr. Whinfield and Dr. Ross, and they warn me earnestly against disturbing an accepted rendering, and point out that my suggestion would involve similarly transliterating the p which commences the name "Omar" (or, as some purists have it, 'Umar), and reading it "Ghomar," which would offend widely spread susceptibilities. It is also difficult to pronounce this gh without giving it the value of the thick (grasséyé) continental r. I have, therefore, avoided attempting this innovation.

Finally, let me acknowledge the sympathetic assistance that I have received in preparing these sheets for the press from Professor Cowell, who placed his MSS. at my disposal, and thereby greatly lightened my labours; from Mr. Whinfield, who has favoured me with his valuable opinion upon some of the most obscurely-worded quatrains; and from Professor E. Denison Ross, who has taken a keen interest in my work, even to the point of going through the whole with me line by line and note by note, and without whose help I should even now have hesitated to give the result of my labours to the world.

As regards the actual translation of the quatrains, it has been my endeavour to give a literal rendering of the original line for line, either in the translation proper or in the accompanying notes, and in this I have been very greatly assisted by

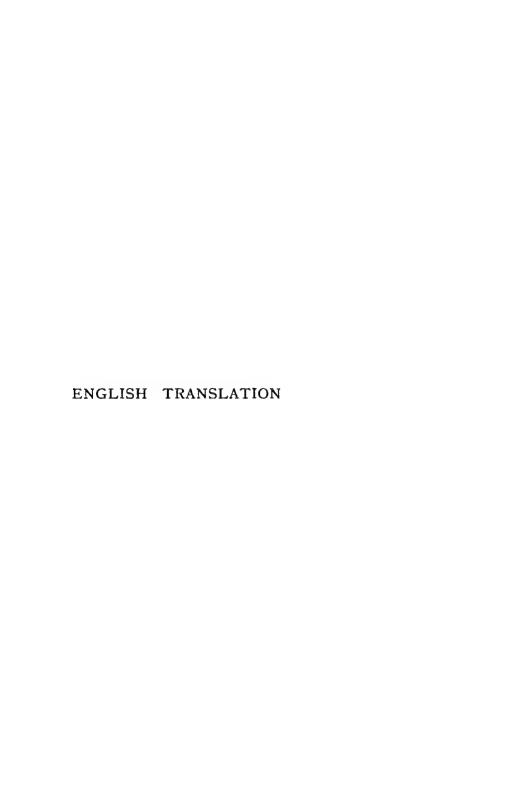

Mr. Barry Pain, who has gone through it with me and helped me to turn the intricate Persian construction of the lines into English, a task for which one is entirely unfitted after being steeped, as I had been during the preparation of this volume for the press, in the involved phrasing of the original. The arrangement of the quatrains upon the pages of the MS., a bait, a ruba'i, and another bait on each, being very awkward for the English reader, and the translation being much confused by note-references, I have inserted between this Introduction and the text accompanied by the translation and the facsimiles, etc., a clean copy of the English only, for the convenience of readers who wish to gather a general impression of the whole poem, without going into the minutiæ dealt with in the notes. It must, however, be borne in mind by those who read this English translation, that the nature of the original is such that in many places it is quite incomprehensible without reference to the notes which accompany the text. In conclusion, I cannot do better than quote the concluding distich of the edition from which the Kama Shastra Society's translation of the Gulistan was made:

> Gratitude is due that this book is ended Before my life has reached its termination.¹

LONDON, April, 1898.

1. The originals of these lines will be found on p 287. They are taken from a text of the Gulistān lithographed in Bombay in 1875. The Editor remarks, in a marginal note, that he has never seen them in any MS. other than that from which his text was taken, and Mr. Ellis consulted a quantity of MSS, and texts of the Gulistān at the British Museum before he found them for me in the 1875 lithograph.

QUATRAINS OF OMAR KHAYYAM

(Ousely MS., 140, Bodleian Library, Oxford)

NOTE.—Words printed in italics are not, properly speaking, represented in the Persian text, but are inserted for the purpose of converting Oriental into Occidental forms of phraseology.

I.

If I have never threaded the pearl of Thy service, and if I have never wiped the dust of sin from my face; nevertheless, I am not hopeless of Thy mercy, for the reason that I have never said that One was Two.

2.

If I talk of the mystery with Thee in a tavern, it is better than if I make my devotions before the Mihrab without Thee.

O Thou, the first and last of all created beings! burn me an Thou wilt, or cherish me an Thou wilt.

3.

So far as in thee lies, reproach not drunkards, lay thou aside pretence and imposture; if, henceforth, thou desirest rest from this life of thine, do not for a moment shun humble folk.

4.

So far as in thee lies, cause no pain to anyone, nor cause anyone to suffer from thy wrath; if thou hast a desire for eternal peace, fret thyself always and harass no one.

5

Since no one will guarantee thee a to-morrow, make thou happy now this love-sick heart; drink wine in the moonlight, O Moon, for the moon shall seek us long and shall not find us.

6.

The Qur'an, which men call the Supreme Word, they read at intervals but not continually, but on the lines upon the goblet a text is engraved which they read at all times and in all places.

7.

Here are we; and so is the wine, and the drinking bench; and the ruined furnace; careless of hopes of mercy, and of fears of punishment; our souls, and our hearts, and our goblets, and our garments full of the lees of wine, independent of earth and air, and fire and water.

8.

In this life it is best that thou shouldst make but few friends; distant intercourse with one's fellow men is good; that person upon whom thou leanest entirely, when thou examinest him closely, he is thine enemy.

9.

This jug was once a plaintive lover as ! am, and was in pursuit of one of comely face; this handle that thou seest upon its neck is an arm that once lay around the neck of a friend.

10.

Ah, woe to that heart in which there is no passion, which is not spell-bound by the love of a heart-cheerer! the day that thou spendest without love, there is no day more useless to thee than that day.

II.

To-day being the season of my youth, I desire wine, for thence comes my happiness; reproach me not, even though acrid it is pleasant; it is acrid in that it represents my life.

12.

Thou hast no power to-day over the morrow, and anxiety about the morrow brings thee only melancholy; waste not thou this moment if thy heart be not mad, for the value of the remainder of this life is not manifest.

13.

Now that there is a possibility of happiness for the world, every living heart has yearnings towards the desert, upon every bough is the appearance of Moses' hand, in every breeze is the exhalation of Jesus' breath.

14.

For him for whom the fruit of the branch of truth has not grown, the reason is that he is not firm in the Road.

Every one has feebly shaken with his hand the bough of truth.

Know that to-day is like yesterday, and that to-morrow is like the First Day of Creation.

Already on the Day of Creation beyond the heavens my soul searched for the Tablet and Pen and for heaven and hell; at last the Teacher said to me with His enlightened judgment, "Tablet and Pen, and heaven and hell, are within thyself."

16.

Arise and give me wine—what time is this for words? for to-night thy little mouth fills all my needs; give me wine, rose-coloured as thy cheeks, for this penitence of mine is as full of tangles as thy curls.

The spring breeze blows sweetly upon the face of the rose, in the shade of the garden plot a darling's face is sweet; nothing thou canst say of yesterday that is past, is sweet, be happy and do not speak of yesterday, for to-day is sweet.

т8.

How long shall I throw bricks upon the surface of the sea? I am disgusted with the idol-worshippers of the pagoda. Khayyām! who can say that he will be a denizen of hell, who ever went to hell, and who ever came from heaven?

19.

The elements of a cup which he has put together, their breaking up a drinker cannot approve, all these heads and delicate feet—with his finger-tips, for love of whom did he make them?—for hate of whom did

• he break them?

20.

Like water in a great river and like wind in the desert, another day passes out of the period of my existence; grief has never lingered in my mind—concerning two days, the day that has not yet come and the day that is past.

21.

Seeing that my coming was not for me the Day of Creation, and that my undesired departure hence is a purpose fixed for me, get up and gird well thy loins, O nimble Cup-bearer, for I will wash down the misery of the world in wine.

22.

Khayyām, who stitched at the tents of wisdom, fell into the furnace of sorrow and was suddenly burnt; the shears of doom cut the tent-rope of his existence, and the broker of hope sold him for a mere song.

Khayyām, why mourn thus for thy sins? from grieving thus what advantage, more or less, dost thou gain? Mercy was never for him who sins not, mercy is granted for sins—why then grieve?

24.

In cell, and college, and monastery, and synagogue are those who fear hell and those who seek after heaven; he who has knowledge of the secrets of God sows none of such seed in his heart of hearts.

25.

If in the season of spring a being, houri-shaped, gives me on the green bank of a field a goblet full of wine, (though to everyone this saying may seem uncouth) a dog is better than I am if thenceforth I pronounce the name of heaven.

26.

Know this—that from thy soul thou shalt be separated, thou shalt pass behind the curtain of the secrets of God. Be happy—thou knowest not whence thou hast come: drink wine—thou knowest not whither thou shalt go.

27.

I fell asleep, and wisdom said to me:-

"Never from sleep has the rose of happiness blossomed for anyone;

why do a thing that is the mate of death? Drink wine, for thou must sleep for ages."

28.

My heart said to me:—"I have a longing for inspired knowledge; teach me if thou art able."

I said the Alif. My heart said:—"Say no more.

If One is in the house, one letter is enough."

No one can pass behind the curtain that veils the secret, the mind of no one is cognizant of what is there; save in the heart of earth we have no haven. Drink wine, for to such talk there is no end.

30.

The mystery must be kept hidden from all the ignoble, and the secrets must be withheld from fools.

Consider thine actions towards thy fellow men: our hopes must be concealed from all mankind.

From the beginning was written what shall be; unhaltingly the Pen writes, and is heedless of good and bad; on the First Day He appointed everything that must be—our grief and our efforts are vain.

In the spring, on the bank of the river and on the edge of the field, with a few companions and a playmate houri-shaped, bring forth the cup, for those that drink the morning draught are independent of the mosque and free from the synagogue 33.

The heavenly vault is the girdle of my weary body, Jihun is a water-course worn by my filtered tears, hell is a spark from my useless worries, Paradise is a moment of time when I am tranquil.

34-

They say that the garden of Eden is pleasant with houris: I say that the juice of the grape is pleasant.

Hold fast this cash and let that credit go, for the noise of drums, brother, is pleasant from afar.

Drink wine, for thou wilt sleep long beneath the clay without an intimate, a friend, a comrade, or wife; take care that thou tell'st not this hidden secret to anyone:—
The tulips that are withered will never bloom again.

36.

Drink wine, for this is life eternal, • this is thy gain from the days of thy youth; a season of roses, and wine, and drunken companions—be happy for a moment for THIS is life!

37.

Give me wine which is a salve for my wounded heart, it is the boon companion of those who have trafficked in love; to my mind the dregs of a single draught are better than the vault of heaven which is the hollow of the world's skull.

38.

I drink wine, and my enemies from left and right say:—"Do not drink wine, for it is the foe of religion."
When I knew that wine was the foe of religion,
I said:—"By Allah! let me drink the foe's blood, for that is lawful."

39.

Wine is a melted ruby and the cup is the mine thereof; the cup is a body and its wine is the soul thereof; that crystal cup that is bubbling over with wine is a tear in which the heart's blood is hidden.

40.

I know not whether he who fashioned me appointed me to dwell in heaven or in dreadful hell, but some food, and an adored one, and wine, upon the green bank of a field—all these three are cash to me: thine be the credit-heaven!

The good and the bad that are in man's nature, the happiness and misery that are predestined for us—do not impute them to the heavens, for in the way of Wisdom those heavens are a thousandfold more helpless than thou art.

42.

Whosoever has engrafted the leaf of love upon his heart, not one day of his life has been wasted; either he strives to meet with God's approbation, or he chooses bodily comfort and raises the wine-cup.

43.

Everywhere that there has been a rose or tulip-bed, there has been spilled the crimson blood of a king; every violet shoot that grows from the earth is a mole that was once upon the cheek of a beauty.

44.

Be prudent, for the means of life are uncertain; take heed, for the sword of destiny is keen.

If fortune place almond-sweets in thy very mouth, beware! swallow them not, for poison is mingled therein.

45.

One jar of wine and a lover's lips, on the bank of the sown field—these have robbed me of cash, and thee of the credit. Some are pledged to heaven or hell, but who ever went to hell, and who ever came from heaven?

46.

O thou, whose cheek is moulded upon the model of the wild rose, whose face is cast in the mould of Chineşe idols, yesterday thy amorous glance gave to the Shah of Babylon the moves of the Knight, the Castle, the Bishop, the Pawn, and the Queen.

Since life passes; what is Baghdad and what is Balkh?

When the cup is full, what matter if it be sweet or bitter?

Drink wine, for often, after thee and me, this moon will pass on from the last day of the month to the first, and from the first to the last.

48.

Of those who draw the pure date wine and those who spend the night in prayer, not one is on the dry land, all are in the water. One is awake: the others are asleep.

49

This intellect that haunts the path of happiness keeps saying to thee a hundred times a day:—
"Understand in this single moment of thine existence, that thou art not like those herbs which when they gather them spring up again."

50.

Those who are the slaves of intellect and hair-splitting, have perished in bickerings about existence and non-existence; go, thou ignorant one, and choose rather grape-juice, for the ignorant from eating dry raisins have become like unripe grapes themselves.

51.

My coming was of no profit to the heavenly sphere, and by my departure naught will be added to its beauty and dignity;

neither from anyone have my two ears heard 'what is the object of this my coming and going.

52.

We must be effaced in the way of love, we must be destroyed in the talons of destiny; O sweet-faced Cup-bearer, sit thou not idle, give to me water, for dust I must become.

Now that nothing but the mere name of our happiness remains, the only old friend that remains is new wine; withhold not the merry hand from the wine-cup to-day that nothing but the cup remains within our reach.

54.

What the Pen has written never changes, and grieving only results in deep affliction; even though, all thy life, thou sufferest anguish, not one drop becomes increased beyond what it is.

55.

O heart, for a while seek not the company of the frail ones; cease for a while to be engrossed with the commerce of love. Frequent the thresholds of the darvishes—perhaps thou mayest be accepted for awhile by the accepted people.

56.

Those who adorn the Heavens for a fragment of time, come, and go, and come again as time goes on; in the skirt of Heaven, and in the pocket of earth, are creatures who, while God dies not, will yet be born.

57.

Those whose beliefs are founded upon hypocrisy, come and draw a distinction between the body and the soul; I will put the wine jar on my head, if, when I have done so, they place a comb upon my head, as if I were a cock.

58.

The bodies which people this heavenly vault, puzzled the learned.

Beware lest thou losest the end of the string of wisdom, for even the controllers themselves become giddy.

I am not the man to dread my non-existence, for that half seems pleasanter to me than this half; this is a life which God has lent me,

I will surrender it when the time of surrender comes.

60.

This caravan of life passes by mysteriously; mayest thou seize the moment that passes happily! Cup-bearer, why grieve about the to-morrow of thy patrons? give us a cup of wine, for the night wanes.

61.

Being old, my love for thee led my head into a snare; if not, how comes it that my hand holds the cup of date-wine? My sweetheart has destroyed the penitence born of reason, and the passing seasons have torn the garment that patience sewed.

62.

Although wine has rent my veil, so long as I have a soul I will not be separated from wine; I am in perplexity concerning vintners, for they—what will they buy that is better than what they sell?

63.

So much generosity and kindness at the beginning, why was it? and that maintenance of me with delights and blandishments, why was it?

Now Thine only endeavour is to afflict my heart; after all, what wrong have I done—once more, why was it?

64.

In my mind may there be desire for idols houri-like, in my hand may there be, all the year round, the juice of the grape;

they say to me, "May God give thee repentance!"

He himself will not give it; I will none of it; let it be far off!

In the tavern thou canst not perform the Ablution save with wine, and thou canst not purify a tarnished reputation; be happy, for this veil of temperance of ours is so torn that it cannot be repaired.

66.

I saw upon the terrace of a house a man, alone, who trampled upon the clay, holding it in contempt; that clay said to him in mystic language:—
"Be still, for like me thou wilt be much trampled upon."

67.

It is a pleasant day, and the weather is neither hot nor cold; the rain has washed the dust from the faces of the roses; the nightingale in the Pchlevi tongue to the yellow rose cries ever:—"Thou must drink wine!"

68.

Ere that fale makes assault upon thy head, give orders that they bring thee rose-coloured wine; thou art not treasure, O heedless dunce, that thee they hide in the earth and then dig up again.

69.

Take heed to stay me with the wine-cup, and make this amber face like a ruby; when I die, wash me with wine, and out of the wood of the vine make the planks of my coffin.

70.

O Shah! destiny appointed thee to sovereignty, and saddled for thee the horse of empire; when thy golden-hoofed charger moved, setting foot upon the clay, the earth became gilded.

A love that is imaginary has no value; like a fire half-dead, it gives no heat.

A true lover, throughout the month, and year, and night, and day, takes neither rest, nor peace, nor food, nor sleep.

72

No one has solved the tangled secrets of eternity, no one has set foot beyond the orbit, since, so far as I can see, from tyro to teacher, impotent are the hands of all men born of woman.

73.

Set limits to thy desire for worldly things and live content, sever the bonds of thy dependence upon the good and bad of life, take wine in hand and play with the curls of a loved one; for quickly all passeth away-and how many of these days remain?

74.

The heavens rain down blossoms from the clouds, thou mayest say that they shed blossoms into the garden; in a lily-like cup I pour rosy wine, as the violet clouds pour down jessamine.

75.

I drink wine, and every one drinks who like me is worthy of it; my wine-drinking is but a small thing to Him; God knew, on the Day of Creation, that I should drink wine; if I do not drink wine, God's knowledge was ignorance.

76.

Do not allow sorrow to embrace thee, nor an idle grief to occupy thy days; forsake not the book, and the lover's lips, and the green bank of the field, ere that the earth enfold thee in its bosom.

Drink wine, that will banish thy abundant woes, and will banish thought of the Seventy-two Sects; avoid not the alchemist, for, from him, thou takest one draught, and he banishes a thousand calamities.

78.

Even though wine is forbidden, for all that it depends upon who drinks it, and then in what quantity, and also with whom he drinks it; these three conditions being as they should be; say! • who drinks wine if a wise man does not do so?

79.

Drink wine, for thy body becomes atoms in the earth, thine earth, after that, becomes goblets and jars; be thou heedless of hell and heaven, why should a wise man be deceived about such things?

80.

Now is the time when by the spring-breezes the world is adorned, and in hope of rain it opens its eyes, the hands of Moses appear like froth upon the bough, the breath of Jesus comes forth from the earth.

8т.

Every draught that the Cup-bearer scatters upon the earth quenches the fire of anguish in some afflicted eye. Praise be to God! thou realizest that wine is a juice that frees thy heart from a hundred pains.

82.

Every morning the dew bedecks the faces of the tulips, the crests of the violets in the garden are bent downward; verily, most pleasing to me is the rosebyd which gathers its skirts close around itself.

Friends, when ye hold a meeting together, it behoves ye warmly to remember your friend; when ye drink wholesome wine together, and my turn comes, turn a goblet upside down.

84.

Friends, when with consent ye make a tryst together, and take delight in one another's charms, when the Cup-bearer takes round in his hand the Mugh wine, remember a certain helpless one in your benediction.

85.

One cup of wine is worth a hundred hearts and religions, one draught of wine is worth the empire of China, saving ruby wine there is not, on the face of earth, any acrid thing that is worth a thousand sweet souls.

86.

If thou desirest Him, be separated from wife and children, bravely move thine abode from thy relations and friends; whatever is, is an hindrance on the road for thee, how canst thou journey with these hindrances?—remove them!

87.

Bring me that ruby in a clear glass, bring me that companion and intimate of all excellent people: since thou knowest that the duration of this earthly world is a wind that quickly passes by,—bring me wine.

88.

Arise! bring physic to this oppressed heart, bring that musk-scented and rose-coloured wine; if thou desirest the elements of sorrow's antidote, bring ruby wine and the silk stringed lute.

I saw a potter in the bazaar yesterday, he was violently pounding the fresh clay, and that clay said to him, in mystic language, "I was once like thee—so treat me well."

90.

Drink of that wine that is eternal life, it is the stock-in-trade of youthful pleasure, drink! it burns like fire, but sorrows it makes like the water of life—drink!

qI.

Follow not the Traditions, and leave alone the Commands, withhold not from anyone the morsel that thou possessest: neither slander, nor afflict the heart of anyone,

I guarantee you the world beyond—bring wine!

92.

Wine is rose-red, and the cup is filled with the water of roses,
—maybe,
in the crystal casket is a pure ruby,—maybe,
a melted ruby is in the water,—maybe, moonlight is the veil of the sun,—maybe.

93.

Every vow we make, we break again,
we shut once more upon ourselves the door of fame and fair repute;
blame me not if I act as a fool,
for once more am I drunken with the wine of love.

94.

To speak plain language, and not in parables, we are the pieces and heaven plays the game, we are played together in a baby-game upon the chessboard of existence, and one by one we return to the box of non-existence.

Oh, heart! since in this world truth itself is hyperbole, why art thou so disquieted with this trouble and abasement? resign thy body to destiny, and adapt thyself to the times, for, what the Pen has written, it will not re-write for thy sake.

96.

On the face of the rose there is still a cloud-shadow, in my nature and heart there is still a desire for wine; sleep not, what right hast thou to sleep yet? give me wine, sweetheart, for it is still daylight.

97.

Go! throw dust upon the face of the heavens, drink wine, and consort with the fair of face; what time is this for worship? and what time is this for supplication? since, of all those that have departed, not one has returned?

98.

Fill the cup! for the day breaks white like snow, learn colour from the wine that is ruby; take two fragrant aloe logs, and brighten the assembly, make one into a lute, and burn the other.

99.

We have returned to our wonted debauch, we have renounced—the Five Prayers! wherever the goblet is, there thou mayst see us, our necks stretched out like that of the bottle.

100.

In great desire I pressed my lips to the lip of the jar, to enquire from it how long life might be attained; it joined its lip to mine and whispered:—
"Drink wine, for, to this world, thou returnest not."

IOI.

I will give thee counsel if thou wilt give ear to me, for the sake of God do not wear the garment of hypocrisy, the hereafter will fill all hours, and the world is but, a moment, do not sell the kingdom of eternity for the sake of one moment.

102.

Khayyām, if thou art drunk with wine, be happy, if thou reposest with one tulip-checked, be happy, since the end of all things is that thou wilt be naught; whilst thou art, imagine that thou art not,—be happy!

103.

I went last night into the workshop of a potter,
I saw two thousand pots, some speaking, and some silent;
suddenly one of the pots cried out aggressively:—
"Where are the pot maker, and the pot buyer, and the pot seller?"

104.

Of this spirit, that they call pure wine, they say:—"It is a remedy for a ruined heart"; set quickly before me two or three heavily filled cups, why do they call a good water "wicked water"?

105.

Regard my virtues one by one, and forgive my crimes ten by ten, pardon every crime that is past, the reckoning is with God! let not the wind and air fan the flame of thy rancour, by Muhammad's tomb! forgive me.

106.

Verily wine in the goblet is a delicate spirit, in the body of the jar, a delicate soul reposes, nothing heavy is worthy to be the friend of wine save the wine-cup, for that is, at the same time, heavy and delicate.

Where is the limit to eternity to come, and where to eternity past?

now is the time of joy, there is no substitute for wine: both theory and practice have passed beyond my ken, but wine unties the knot of every difficulty.

108.

This vault of heaven, beneath which we stand bewildered, we know to be a sort of magic-lantern:

know thou that the sun is the lamp-flame and the universe is the lamp, we are like figures that revolve in it.

109.

I do not always prevail over my nature,—but what can I do? and I suffer for my actions,—but what can I do?

I verily believe that Thou wilt generously pardon me on account of my shame that Thou hast seen what I have done,—but what can I do?

110.

Let me arise and seek pure wine, make thou the colour of my cheek like that of the jujube fruit, as for this meddling intellect, a fist-full of wine will I throw in its face, to make it sleep.

III.

How long shall we continue slaves to every-day problems? what matter whether we live one year, or one day, in this world? pour out a cup of wine, before that we .become pots in the workshop of the potters.

TT2.

Since our abode in this monastery is not permanent without the Cup-beater and the beloved, it is painful to support life:

how long of ancient creeds or new, O philosopher? when I have left it what matter if the world be old or new?

In loving Thee I incur reproaches for a hundred sins, and if I fail in this obligation I pay a penalty: if my life remain faithful to Thy cruelty, please God, I shall have less than that to bear till the Judgment Day.

4

The world being fleeting, I practise naught but artifice, I hold only with cheerfulness and sparkling wine; they say to me:—"May God grant thee penitence."

He himself does not give it, and if He gives it, I will none of it.

115.

Although I have come with an air of supplication to the mosque, by Allah! I have not come to pray;
I came one day and stole a prayer-mat—that sin wears out, and I come again and again.

116.

When I am abased beneath the foot of destiny and am rooted up from the hope of life, take heed that thou makest nothing but a goblet of my clay, haply when it is full of wine I may revive.

117.

My heart does not distinguish between the bait and the trap, one counsel urges it towards the mosque, another towards the cup;

nevertheless the wine-cup, and the loved one, and I continually together, are better, cooked, in a tavern, than raw, in a monastery.

TT8.

It is morning: let us for a moment inhale rose-coloured wine, and shatter against a stone this vessel of reputation and honour; let us cease to strive after what has long been our hope, and play with long ringlets and the hardle of the lute.

We have preferred a corner and two loaves to the world, and we have put away greed of its estate and magnificence; we have bought poverty with our heart and soul—in poverty we have discerned great riches.

120.

I know the outwardness of existence and of non-existence, I know the inwardness of all that is high and low; nevertheless let me be modest about my own knowledge if I recognise any degree higher than drunkenness.

121.

For a while, when young, we frequented a teacher, for a while we were contented with our proficiency; behold the foundation of the discourse:—what happened to us? we came in like water and we depart like wind.

122.

To him who understands the mysteries of the world, the joy and sorrow of the world is all the same; since the good and the bad of the world will come to an end; what matter, since it must end? an thou wilt, be all pain, or, an thou wilt, all remedy.

123.

So far as in thee lies, follow the example of the profligate, destroy the foundations of prayer and fasting: hear thou the Word of Truth from Omar Khayyām, ""Drink wine, rob on the highway, and be benevolent."

124.

Since the harvest for the human race, in this wilderness, is naught but to suffer affliction or to give up the ghost, light-hearted is he who passes quickly from this world, and he who never came into the world is at rest.

Darvīsh! rend from thy body the figured veil, rather than sacrifice thy body for the sake of that veil; go and throw upon thy shoulders the old rug of poverty—beneath that rug thou art equal to a sultan.

126.

Behold the evil conduct of this vault of heaven, behold the world—empty by the passing away of friends; as far as thou art able live for thyself for one moment, look not for to-morrow, seek not yesterday, behold the present!

127.

To drink wine and consort with a company of the beautiful is better than practising the hapocrisy of the zealot; if the lover and the drunkard are doomed to hell, then no one will see the face of heaven.

T28.

One cannot consume one's happy heart with sorrow, nor consume the pleasure of one's life upon the touchstone; no one is to be found who knows what is to be; wine, and a loved one, and to repose according to one's desire,— these things are necessary.

129.

This heavenly vault, for the sake of my destruction and thine, wages war upon my pure soul and thine; sit upon the green sward, O my Idol! for it will not be long ere that green sward shall grow from my dust and thine.

T30.

What profits it, our coming and going? and where is the woof for the warp of the stuff of our life? How many delicate bodies the world burns away to dust! and where is the smoke of them?

Flee from the study of all sciences—'tis better thus, and twine thy fingers in the curly locks of a loved one—'tis better thus, ere that fate shall spill thy blood; pour thou the blood of the bottle into the cup—'tis better thus.

132.

Ah! I have brushed the tavern doorway with my moustaches, I have bidden farewell to the good and evil of both worlds; though both the worlds should fall like balls in my street, seek me,—ye will find me sleeping like a drunkard.

From everything save wine abstinence is best, and that wine is best when served by drunken beauties in a pavilion, drinking, and Kalendarism, and erring, are best, one draught of wine from Mah to Mahi is best.

134.

This heavenly vault is like a bowl, fallen upside down, under which all the wise have fallen captive, choose thou the manner of friendship of the goblet and the jar, they are lip to lip, and blood has fallen between them.

135.

See; the skirt of the rose has been torn by the breeze, the nightingale rejoices in the beauty of the rose; sit in the shade of the rose, for, by the wind, many roses—have been scattered to earth and have become dust.

136.

How long shall I grieve about what I have or have not, and whether I shall pass this life light-heartedly or not? Fill up the wine-cup, for I do not know that I shall breathe out this breath that I am drawing in.

Submit not to the sorrow of this iniquitous world, remind us not of sorrow for those who have passed away, give thine heart only to one jasmine-bosomed and, fairy-born, be not without wine, and cast not thy life to the winds.

138.

Though thy life pass sixty years, do not give up; wherever thou directest thy steps, walk not save when drunk; before they make the hollow of thy skull into a jar, lower not the jar from thy shoulder, neither relinquish the cup.

One draught of old wine is better than a new kingdom, avoid any way save that of wine—'tis better so; the cup is a hundred times better than the kingdom of Feridun, the tile that covers the jar is better than the crown of Kai-Khosru.

140.

Those, O Saki, who have gone before us, have fallen asleep, O Saki, in the dust of self-esteem; go thou and drink wine, and hear the truth from me, whatever they have said, O Saki, is but wind.

141.

Thou hast broken my jug of wine, O Lord; Thou hast shut upon me the door of happiness, O Lord; thou hast spilled my pure wine upon the earth; may I perish! but thou art strange, O Lord!

142.

. .-

O heaven! thou givest something to every base creature, thou suppliest baths, and millstreams, and canals; the pure man plays hazard for his night's provisions: wouldst thou give a fig for such a heaven?

O heart! at the mysterious secret thou arrivest not, at the conceits of the ingenious philosophers thou arrivest not; make thyself a heaven here with wine and cup, for at that place where heaven is, thou mayst arrive, or mayst not.

144.

Thou eatest always smoke from the kitchen of the world; how long wilt thou suffer miseries concerning what is or is not? thou desirest not a stock in trade, for its source weakens, and who will consume the capital, seeing that thou consumest all the profit?

145.

O soul! if thou canst purify thyself from the dust of the body, thou, naked spirit, canst soar in the heavens, the Empyrean is thy sphere,—let it be thy shame, that thou comest and art a dweller within the confines of earth.

146.

I smote the glass wine-cup upon a stone last night, my head was turned that I did so base a thing; the cup said to me in mystic language, "I was like thee, and thou also wilt be like me."

147.

Grasp the wine-cup and the flagon, O heart's desire!
pleasantly, pleasantly, and cheerfully, wander in the garden
by the river brink;

many are the excellent folk whom malicious heaven has made a hundred times into cups, and a hundred times into flagons.

148.

In a thousand places on the road I walk, Thou placest snares, Thou sayest, "I will catch thee if thou placest step in them"; in no smallest thing is the world independent of Thee, Thou orderest all things, and callest me rebellious.

I desire a little ruby wine and a book of verses, just enough to keep me alive and half a loaf is needful; and then, that I and thou, should sit in a desolate place is better than the kingdom of a sultan.

150.

Do not give way so much to vain grief,—live happils, and, in the way of injustice, set thou an example of justice, since the final end of this world is nothingness; suppose thyself to be nothing, and be free.

151.

Gaze as 1 may on all sides, in the garden flows a stream from the river Kausar, the desert becomes like heaven, thou mayst say hell has disappeared, sit thou then in heaven with one heavenly-faced.

152.

Be happy! they settled thy reward yesterday, and beyond the reach of all thy longings is yesterday; live happily, for without any importunity on thy part yesterday, they appointed with certainty what thou wilt do to-morrow,—yesterday!

153.

Pour out the red wine of pure tulip colour, draw the pure blood from the throat of the jar, for to-day, beside the wine-cup, there is not, for me, one friend who possesses a pure heart.

154.

To the ear of my heart Heaven whispered secretly:—
"The commands that are decreed thou mayst learn from me: had I a hand in my own revolutions,
I would have saved myself from giddiness."

If a loaf of wheaten-bread be forthcoming, a gourd of wine, and a thigh-bone of mutton, and then, if thou and I be sitting in the wilderness, that would be a joy to which no sultan can set bounds.

156.

If henceforth two measures of wine come to thy hand, drink thou wine in every assembly and congregation, for He who made the world does not occupy Himself about moustaches like thine, or a beard like mine.

157.

Had I charge of the matter I would not have come, and likewise could I control my going, where should I go? were it not better than that, that in this world I had neither come, nor gone, nor lived?

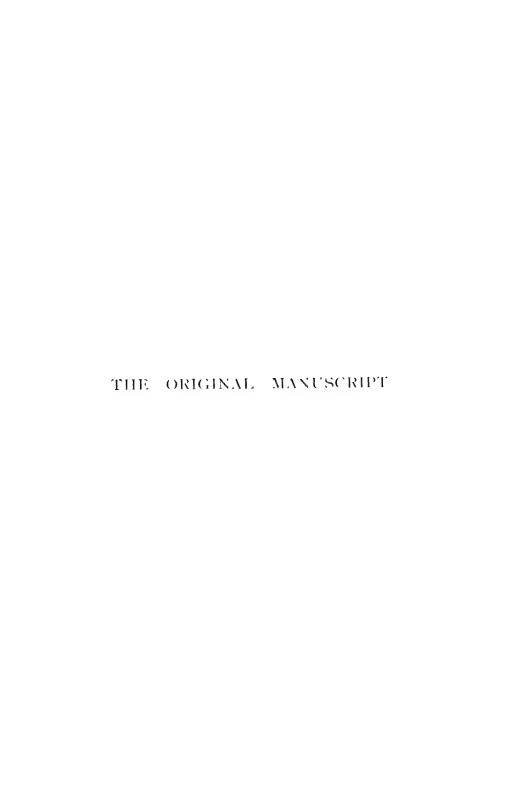

158.

The month of Ramazan passes and Shawwal comes, the season of increase, and joy, and story-tellers comes; now comes that time when "Bottles upon the shoulder!" they say,—for the porters come and are back to back.

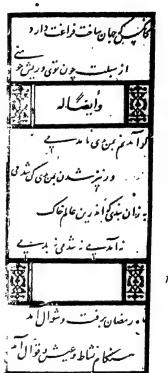

END OF THE QUATRAINS.

Written by the humble slave, who is in need of mercies of Eternal God, Mahmūd Yerbūdākī. Finished in the last decade of Safar, with blessing and victory, in the year Eight hundred and sixty-five of the Hijrah of the Prophet, upon whom be peace, and benediction, and honour; in the capital Shīrāz.

May God most high protect her from evils.

	اد کووش خوش کرما و سندمی
	فودا برنا نم ب زسر کردا .
,	وأبينسًا له
	کرد ت دار زمو کند م اینے از کر سرکار زمان میں اور
	ار می کدون رکوسفت بریان واکمه من و توسیست درویران ئے برآن نیدیرپ طا ^ن
ı()
	مرزاک م تأیت از می و د
	مضسشن دمغلوم أسبخن
	78

تونیا دېرنې که تامانیای ته چې
واوندنس إكل رفردا في في ال
وابنيال
، د ه و معل لا لا كون سائية . مُثَا ي زحل شيئة خوال ال
كاروز برون زعام بنت م
کم ووت که دار دارمان
ور كوش و لم كمن فلك چما
ک گرفتها و د زین د د
,7

	•
	چون احر کا راین جان نهی آ ایخار کونسیشی وازا دیزی
151	وابضًا له
	چذان کم کا ہے کنم مرسو پی
	د باغ روانت برکوثر هر يې پر
	معراج بثت شدر دوزج مرکوی
	بمثن ست بسنی رو ک
1 12	وا بنبًا له
	فرش بشركح بيدا ولمودأي
	این شنازمه مای تو می
	70

	1
ىمەن زىم توجان خان ئىستى كىرتوكىيە رىلامىيىز، ئىستىپ
وابنبًا له	1 19
عمل به معن خواسم و دینی این به سدر مقولی میر و نفیدن ن آ وانکدین و تونیست در ویر آ
در مان رو استار در این
	130
چندان غم سچید و دیمنی رشا د بری وامذر ر دیپ دا و توا و او
/3

	۽ من زبان مال وي کست سو من خون تو هر مرفوز دون من آ
117	واخنا له
	بردار پالد کوپ موای د بلوی
	خشوش خشام روبغ وب
	أُبِن فِي وَرِاكْرِيسِينَ وَفِي صداربالدكردوصداربوى
1 18	وابنيًا له
	ر بکدم ساوا واری کورک کیریت کار کام
	7+

	إزاده بان بركان	ورة بتأرشو
	شايكر رائحن فكسيري	المناز المان المان
113	وابنیگا له
	ای ل نو باسپدار معا نرسی	مے راسکے عرب ا
	ورنخت دير كان داناز	ورهم سرايسي رسيد
	إنجابي دُجا مِهِ المِنسِينِي مِهَا رَ	برخي لايب
	المحابخاك بشت دسي يزا	د برقی طب و منی ری
111	وابضًا بر	به فا بضا له
	ازمط ج دیا رسد دوری	خ مرخیرل حیب بردی سه از در در در
	ا چندعنسهان بردوا بودی	مِواسِيا وكاريزوج
	7.2	7 1

_
	زان پرم کائے سرت کوز کمند
	؛ توکوزه زووکشور کا ایزوت !
139	وانصا له
	نميے جوعه ي كنب ز مك يوج
	ارْمرحپ نه هطرين پروت ت
	طامنیشه براز ملک در دون ^ا
	. خت سرنم زاج محی رو ؟
140	وا بشًا له
	أمَانُ كُورْسِيْتُ مُغْالِمُ الْمِيالِيِّ
	وفاك و دخنا زاما
	-11

رک منع او و که معکوم پ من مین دیوکه منسرور و را رم ایر ا
, ,	137
ن درغسه روز کاریدا د آن
، زا زغ که ششته کان و من
ول شنه نربی بریزا و م ^ن این
ينه اوه ما راد	138
ورابط م چن عمزا در کرد دازشت سن	770
رو ما مرد این مارد براید. سرها که فذم نهی مجز پ
(H)	1

	م مورث میشد و ساغ کمربی	کربرد د جهان چکویان سان چکویان
137	ورنیا به فوان و این و این و این و این او این او این این این این از این این این این این این این او این ا	رمن بری وست بشیمت وانصا م	133
	نمرزمیسیا، این کاچاک شن بورزجان کاط با کسینده	ا زمرچ برنی ات کوآی : وزوت بان ت خرکانی
	ر به بایمون شرکی بر کاکن دا در در در در در در داری کشت	ې وقلت دری و کمرای ت کمي حرطه ی را مرای ت
136	وا بینگاله ناکی غنه آن فرد که دارم	این نیز دیلا پیت کمون در	134
	الماريخ الماريخ والكذاريم	دروی سرزر کا ن زبول ا

i
	چذین شروای از نیاچی ن ر
	ع سوز د وفاک بیش ^{و د و} دی کو
	والنبأ له
	از درسپس علوم حله بمریزی "
	والمررزلف ولرآوري
	مُّان مِیشیر کردز کارونت ریز ^د
1000	عنه انوخون برای بنده درزی: منابع
,	وابنباً ل
	ای من در منوایهٔ به به سبلت نه منه سه
	المبركرك بدونك سرد وعاكم
	1.15

مرغي چردا ذکوچ خوا بد بودن عيد يا مه و معثوق و بحالي و ارخي بن ملک بر الماک و الخي بن ملک بر الماک و مشد ي دار د بان کس ن و بر بن ن شيخ کا بس د بر المد بر بن برون د ه رنی کسی از آه ن ورنست با مودی کو وز آ روجه و عسد ا پودی کو

	The Property	100
	أبدا ن توكيف غ درابس	ن كرين جان زود بر
	فردائكر ويطلط كالدبن	و مکنی کوخو د نیا بچھپ ^ن و مکنی کوخو د نیا بچھپ
127	Y	وابعًا و
	بي فررون وكر د نيسكوان كرويه	ن زینها مه صورت برکن
	بوزائم برزق إيدورز يا مناكم برزق إيدورزية	ر مراجع مجا مصورت نن
	ر مانش مرعانش ومن دو زن داېر	_ کلیم فقر بروش اک ^ی ن
	ن المريد الم	زر کلیم کوست طان ز ^ن
128	وابغياله	· · ·
	ننوان دلث درا بغم ورسو دن	سدكرون ما فعال بن
	وقت فرش د د بر محت	رفن دور شارها خال ^{بن}
. '		3-2-2-2-2-2-2-2-2-2-2-2-2-2-2-2-2-2-2-2

	i a .
	چەن كېڭە دېرىمان بىرخوا پوت	بالن مها زوانش ه و شرم .
123	خواسي ميد و و اژوخواني ^{ان} وا يضاً له	کرور نه ٔ ورای شیخی ایم وابغهأ نه	1_1
	، ، بتوا نی خدست رندان می ^ن	کپد کجو د کی بہت و تعدیم
	نیا د نا زورو نه ویران ^{یک}	کیندوکپ نا دی د ژنا و تگریم	•
	بثنونن دا _ن ت زنیام سر	، ن خونکرکه ، یا چه رسیه پاین خونکرکه ، یا چه رسیه
	می منور وره می زن وادیا می منور وره می زن وادیا مندسته می میداد	تونآب درام مرومون وسليم
121	وُاعِبُدًا ال	33	> '2
	چِ ن طاصل آوی درین سور سپیا ن ر	آ زاکه و توفت براسرارها ^ن برای در در برای برای در می ماند و ماند
	جِرْ خُرِرون غَصِه بِ کِیمَدُ نَ ^ن َ	تا درونم عمان بروشد کیب ن
•	() ·	ϵ_{I}

	•
119	وت ازان دارهٔ دا زکت نیم دران دارد داریک نیم وامنیهاگد	زنمب رکا بوندا کیب در بست میکردر را و دنتوری ا	117
	مجنی دور قرص از جهان گرنید م. ۲۰ در دورت دشهندش الیمب م.	ول رَق في كندس زارزوام را شي مجدت درا شي م
	و دوشی را بجان و النسب ندم " در در در ویشی تراکمزهیب ویدم	ا دارخ که ماور در میشون ای در میکدیم پیزیت برگر در در اینا
120	,	وابنيًا له	178
	مظامرت وسی ایم منابط مروازوسیتی ایم	مبت زیری کارنگ یا م وین شینه ام و کار کرد کرد
	for	50

		•
		•

	•
	تو نده کارورت نو. دما د اوغه د نه به و کر د پرکتی	ای زید در وید شان در کهم در در مهارچ عدث پر مذم
115	وابنيا له	النيكار النيكار
	وسب اکره ایا زام ام در داه کرزازمب نیازآن	روی در مات مر این ماری در دات بر
	قروز فاخت جا ذبر کم کرد م منتقل کمند شد الحداز و آرو آ	برند المتعالی ترا ویانات مانت بخر
116	وانسًا له	1/9
	ازای جاره سی سدا کلند بوم از واجه الپذهسدر کند . ش	ر و المستسرية المام المام وروشان تم
•	5%	57

	•
	لان بود کسیج کران ملک پنجو سانو! و کمان کرانیطیف
107	النباء
	آیی دا مرحدیث و ماکی دا زل
	از منام طرب شراب دایث ^{ال}
	گوشت دا داده من عمده عل مرحم و باشراب کردا دحل
108	واخبًا له
	أجيسنع كك كما درجيانيم
	فانوسية خالا ذوشال والنهم
	21

	•
	بِوَنْ اَوْكُا رَمْیت دَا ہِی ! ن اُکُور کا رَمْیت دِساخ شدن بْرُ
В	وابضاً د
	ه کارکوره کوره درس در در د
11	هم کوکون کردکوز در دکوزه می وایشا از
	ر مع که راخ اب می خواند ش نامار در اخراب خواندش نیا ر در اخراب خواندش
•	52

	ر دارهٔ وحو د زامجیب مع د را مین هر ولب زوآن کرمنزه ر
19	لا ين والشال
	پر نیم و کرسٹین کمی فار مرم کر بار است رہم برج با فرماکہ پادائیت را بھی سرداز
0	ر دن وسب ای سرباد رده واعضاً له
	ب رب کوره براهای
	» زوطار واسط ^{عب} ورا ز
•	50

	آزی تمکن مرنط وجو و رفن مصند دن عدمیک ز
15	وابضًا له
	ای ل چرمنت جان سنمجار نیار چذین چربری واری ارن ریج و
;	چلین چربی داری دین رج و تن را منصامسیار دارنت بها ر
	کین فت فر زبرنو اید از
16	وابضًا له
	برروی کال دارما بت سور نه سر
	وطع ووم بیل آلب سور ۱۶
-

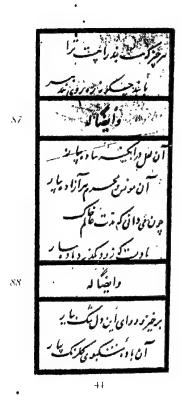

6--2

	•
	غُرُّوْر ، چاتشات کیک م عازهٔ ، چآب زد کایت بحر
1	ولينبأ لم
	نت ممره وبيها را ممرأ را
	وین نفسسه که دارنز محال زمرا
	غیت مرم دل کسی را ، زا ر
	درعدغ ان تان بنم او د ، پر
12	وابغيگا له
	ى منح كل و فدح كلا بست ممر
	د وج بورامان بسن محر
•	46

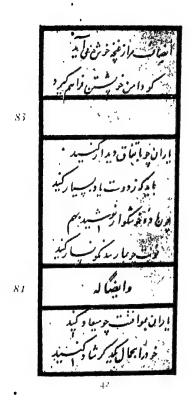

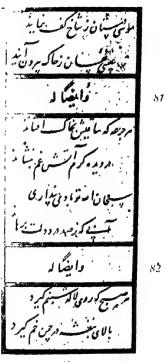

86 .

		,
	•	•

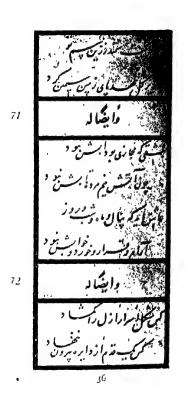

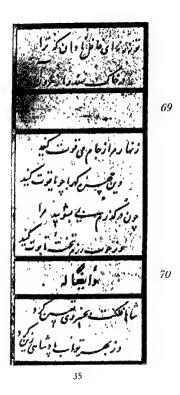

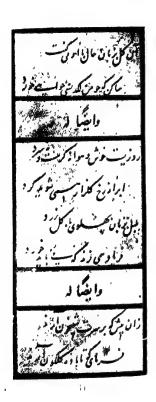

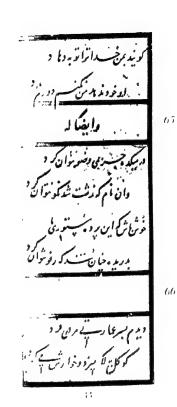

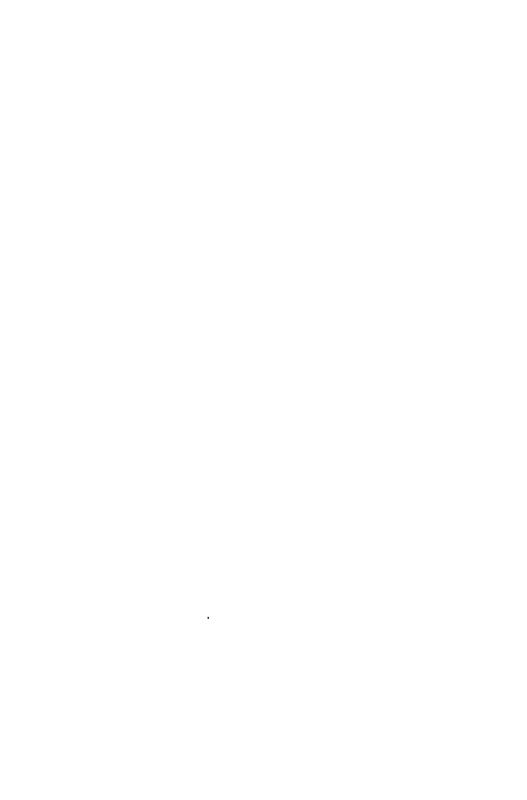

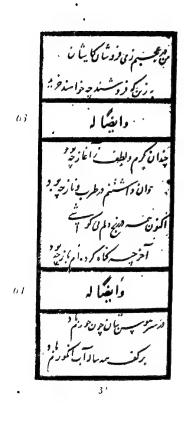

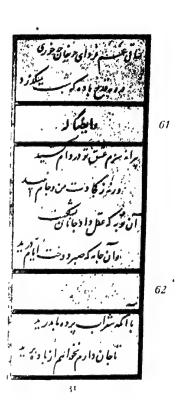

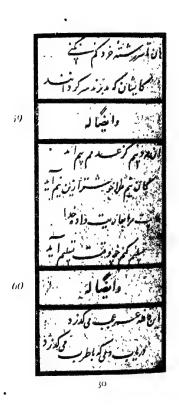

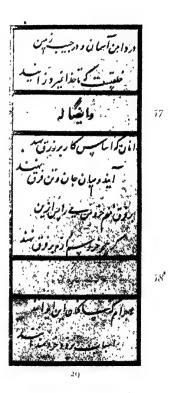

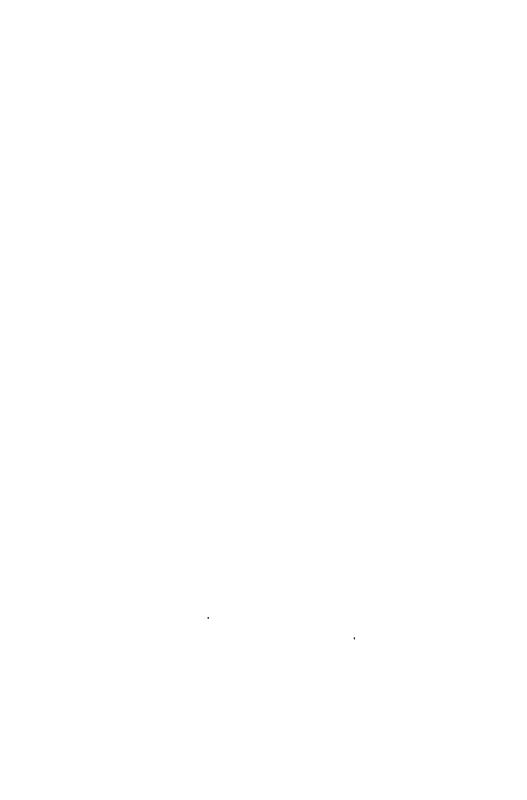

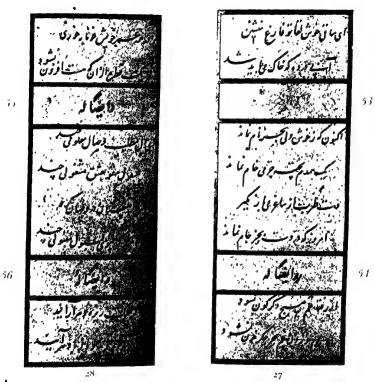

7---2

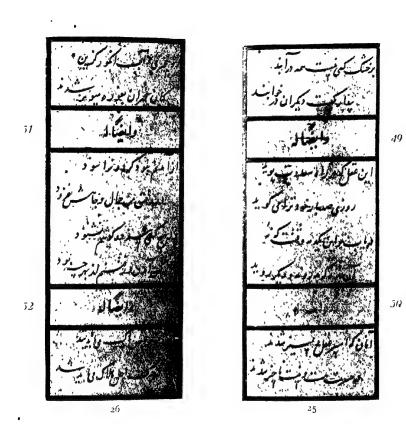

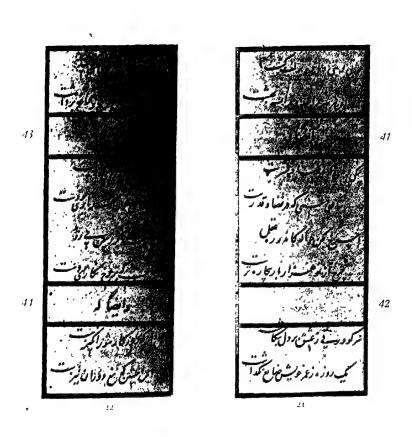

,
		•

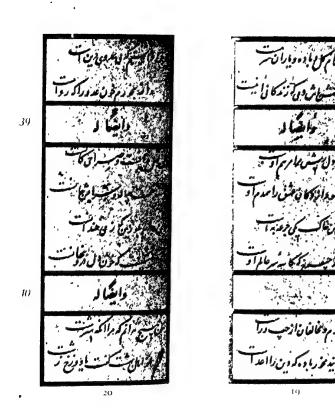

.15

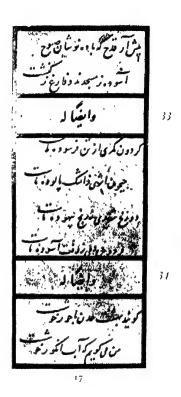

16

	م کاداره باراد از ور
5
	ه فرکر در کاری داری ب
	المين مون لوميندون منه مون زما کربير کو تواين از انسن المرلاد كورتر ونوا يرجمن
ĵ	وانينا لا
	ي نوشش عره اودا لانيت
i	فروطاميت أردو روان
	• •

×

	,

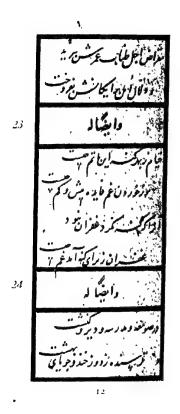

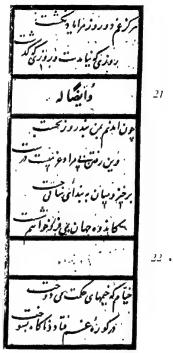

N - 2

	1
	سران داه زیاآ د. نانشهٔ مان کرکا دانی ب	انمپ گرزانرا رخدا ؛ فبرت درن تخرد المرون دکرینچ درن تخرد المرون دکرینچ
27	واینکاد		25
	ارخاک شه مراح د مذی	ورضيا بها راكزنىء رئيب
	المرفعات المربي المربية المربية المربية المربية	رى قى ئىن دەرىكىت رەپرىكى ئىدىش رەپرىكى ئىدى
	ار من	ره ربر چه این مدو به نارزاک برمام
28	دایشکا د	.4.1	26
	ولكت اعلب ورب	درایک ازروج حدا خوانسی
	المبارك الرزاوت رس	ور پردهٔ اسرار هذاخواسی ر ا
•	·	,

		•
	,)

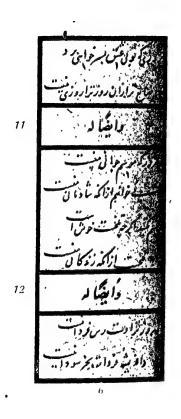

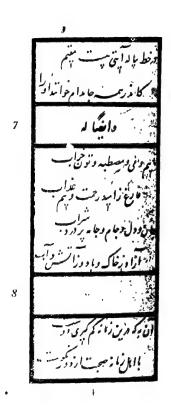

منای کماین دم ادوت شد آ کمان تو عسد راما سات کون کرجها زا بوشی که اس مریز شای طابع مواسوب مریز شای طابع موسی مریز شای طابع موسی مریز شای خواسوب مرایز شای خواسوب مرایز

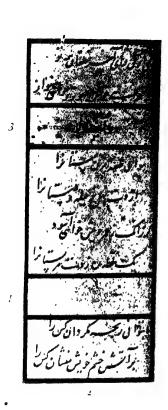

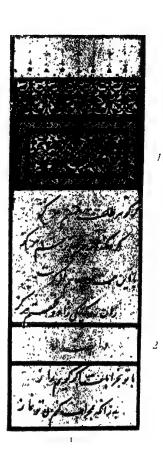

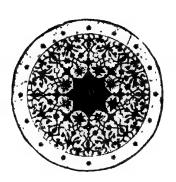

TEXT, TRANSCRIPT, TRANSLATION AND NOTES

BJBLIOGRAPHICAL REFERENCES

With the Abbreviations used in the Notes to the Text and Translation.

In order to save reiteration in referring to the translations, texts, and other authorities consulted in the construction of this work, they are referred to in the notes in the following manner:—

C.—The transcript of the MS. No. 1548 in the Asiatic Society's Library at Calcutta, which Prof. Cowell had made for Edward FitzGerald (vide Introduction).

P.—The MS. in the Bibliothèque Nationale in Paris. Supplement Persan, No. 823.

B. ii.—The Bankipur MS. described on page xi (Introduction).

L.—The Lucknow lithographed edition (1894).

S. P.—The edition lithographed at St. Petersburg in the year A.H. 1306 (A.D. 1888), which is copied from an edition lithographed at Tabriz, A.H. 1285 (A.D. 1868).

B.—The Bombay lithographed edition of 1880. It is almost identical with the Lucknow Edition.

Note, — The rubalyat are not numbered in any of the above, but I have numbered my copies for convenience of reference. The numbers in the hthographs may be taken as correct, those in the MS are as correct as ordinary care can make them, regard being had to the Oriental habit of writing extra quatrains in the margins—at least, they are very closely approximate.

N.—J. B. Nu olas. "Les Quatrains de Khèyam, traduits du Persan." Paris, 1867. Imprimerie Impériale.

W.—E. H. Whinfield. "The Quatrams of Omar Khayyam. The Persian text with an English verse translation." London, 1883. Trubner.

F. i. -Edward FitzGerald's poem, 1st edition. London, 1859. Quaritch.

F. ii.-Ditto, and edition. London, 1868. Quaritch.

F. iii.—Ditto, 3rd edition. London, 1872. Quaritch.

F. iv.—Ditto, 4th edite n. London, 1879. Quaritch.

F. v.-Ditto, 5th edition. London, 1890. Macmillan.

De T.--Garcin de Tassy. "Note sur les Rubaiyat de 'Omar Khaiyam." Paris, 1857. Imprimerie Imperiale. (Extract from the Journal Assatique, 1857.)

L. R.—" Letters and Literary Remains of Edward FitzGerald." London, 1889. Macmillan. 3 vols.

í

D.-N. II. Dole. "Rubáiyat of Omar Khayyam: English, French, and German translations. Comparatively arranged in accordance with the text of Edward FitzGerald's version. With further selections, notes, biographies, bibliq raphy, and other material." Boston, 1896. J. Knight.

E. C .- E. B. Cowell in the Calcutta Review, No. 59, March, 1858, p. 149. "A Review of the Algebra of Omar Wiayyam

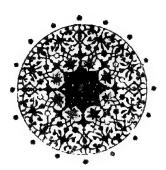

(Paris, 1851) and of Dr. Sprenger's Catalogue." 💃

S.-A. Sprenger. "Catalogue of the Arabic, Persian, and Hindustany Manuscripts of the libraries of the Kings of Oudh." Vol. I. Calcutta, 1854.

M.-Mantic ut tair, ou le langage des oiseaux, par Ferid ud din Attar, publié en persan par M. Garcin de Tassy. Paris, 1857. Translation, Paris, 1863.

- P.N.—" Pend Nameh, ou le livre des Conseils de Férid-eddin Attar, traduit et publié par M. le Bon. Silvestre de Sacy." Paris, 1819. Persian text and translation with variorum notes.
- Gulistan.-When referring to his work I have used the text printed from the Calcutta edition by Francis Gladwin in 1806, revised by Sir Wm. Gore Ouseley (London, 1809); the Translation privately printed for members of the Kama Shastra Society at "Benares" (London) in 1888; and the standard translation of Edward B. Eastwick (last edition, London, 1880, Trubner).
- Beharistan.-When referring to this work, I have used the two British Museum MSS. Add. 7775 and 18,579, and the translation privately printed for the members of the Kama Shastra Society at "Benares" (London) in 1887.
- Steingass.—"A Comprehensive Persian-English Dictionary . . . being Johnson and Richardson's Persian, Arabic, and English Dictionary," revised, enlarged, and entirely reconstructed, by F. Steingass, Ph.D Londo. (W. H. Allen & Co.), N.D. (1892).
- Note.—It may be taken as a general rule that, in the actual notes, where N. is mentioned S. P. is also implied, and where L. is mentioned B. is implied; that is, of course, when references are given to both authorities in the headnote to a quatrain.

NOTES.

I

This quatrain is C 271, P 4, B ii 302, L 423, S P 228, B 419, N 229, W 268, and (as also the following one) is out of its diwan order, and was probably placed at the commencement of this MS to satisfy some scruple of the writer, Mahmad Yerbūdaki – Ldward Fitz-Gerald (F v, Preface, pp 14/15) remarks concerning it "The scribes of the Oxford and Calcutta MSS seen to do their work under a sort of protest, each beginning with a tetrastich (whether genuine or not) taken out of its alphabetical order – The Bodleian Quatrain pleads Pantheism by way of justification

"'If I myself upon a looser Creed Have loosely strung the Jewel of Good-deed, Let this one thing for my Atonement plead, That One for Two I never did mis-read'"

The Calcutta MS begins with one of expostulation, supposed (says a notice prefixed to the MS) to have arisen from a dream, in which Omar's mother asked about his future fate. It may be rendered thus

"O Thou who bian'st in Heart for those who burn In Hell, whose fires thyself should feed in turn, How long be crying, 'Merry on them, God!" Why, who art Thou to ter h, and He to learn?"!

This is quoted by Dr. Sprenger as the first tetrastich of the MS in the library of the Kings of Oudh (S., p. 104), and may be literally rendered

"O drunken student deserving to be burnt,
Woe' that the fire of Hell shall blaze from you,
How long will you keep saying, 'Have mercy upon Omar'?
What claim have you to be a teacher of mercy to God?"

It also figures as B 11 537, L 769, B 755, N 459, W 488

- τ Note the error of the scribe, za'atat for $t\bar{a}'attt^3$. There are several such errors in the MS, but, excepting where they obscure the meaning, 1 do not think it worth while to call attention to them
- 2 The phrase gauhar suftra 4. "to thread pearls," and is used in Persian to mean "to write verses," or to tell a story Cf M, 1, 378. "Behold the pearls of the sword of my tongue, every pearl that falls from my mouth on thy path comes from the bottom of my heart" "Compare Hafiz's. "When thou composest verses, thou seemest to make a string of pear" come, sing them sweetly "16."
- 3 N's text reads, "And if I have never swept the dust of , ar path with my heart "5 In this line we have an echo of the expression in 1 v, 81, "the Sin wherewith the Face of Man is blacken'd," which he took from M, !! 225-227 Vide post, q 109
 - 4 The other texts read, "I am not hopeless of mercy at your tribunal." 6
 - 5 C, B n, L, N, and W begin zna hit = because that.
- 6. In this line Omar boasts that he has never questioned the Unity of God. tawhid heidah = to acknowledge One God of M, Il 116, "Keep steadfast in unity, and keep away from duality,"  and 3210, and chap xhi "The valley of the Tawhid '49

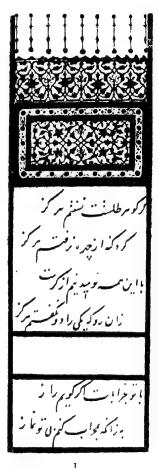

(Notes to page 119 continued on page 120)

گر گوهر طاعتت نسفتم هرگز گرد گنه از جهرد نرمتم هرگز با این همه نومید نبم از کرمت زان رو که یکیرا دو نگفتم هرگز

۲

با تو بصرابات ائر گویم راز به زانکه بحرات کنم بی تو نماز

T.

If I have never threaded the pearl² of Thy service,¹ and if I have never wiped the dust of sin from my face;³ nevertheless, I am not hopeless of Thy mercy,⁴ for the reason that⁵ I have never said that One was Two.⁶

2

If I talk of the mystery with The: in a tavern, it is better than if I make my devotions? before the Mihrab¹ without Thee

2

This quatrain is C 272, P 7, B ii 204, L 427, S P 221, I 423, N. 222, W $_{262}$ It is one of those that PitzGerald reproduced almost faithfully (F 1, No $_{26}$, F, v., No $_{27}$), and scarcely altered in his own four editions

And this I know—whether the one True Light Kindle to Love, or Wrath consume me quit, One I lash of it within the Tavern caught Better than in the Temple lost outright

The Wikiah is the spot in a mosque giving the exact direction of Mecca, towards which all Muslims turn in prayer

: The nonaz are the prayers prescribed by Muhammadan law to be repeated five times a day, the fant waht-t-nemaz" (vide fost, 99). They are respectively the nonaz-t-banded in morning prayers said before dawn, the nonaz-t-t-hand midday prayers, the nonaz-t-digar in a afternoon prayers, the nonaz-t-shant prayers immediately after sunset, and the nonaz-t-khuftan in prayers before bed. It reads the line, "Since then I do not make a pretence of prayer b fore the Mihrab."

(1) ای سونتمهٔ سونتمهٔ سونتمنی

وای ده آس دورج از دو افروسسی

ما كي اولي كه در عمر رحمت كن

حوراً دو دحلی رحمت اموسی

(°) طاعبت () طاعبت (۱) کوهر سفین () ور عاله رهب بدل برقییم هر کر (۱) بوصند بیم ر بازداه کرمیت (۱) ریزا که (۱) بوعید دردن (۷) بیج وقت بمین (۱۱) بمار بامیدان (۱۱) بمار بیسین (۱۱) بمار دکر (۱۱) بمار عقین (۱۰) رایکه بکیم روی بمجرات بمار (۱۱) خرل (۱۲) کیل کفتی و در سفی بیا و خوس بجوان خاط

(۱۲) کوهر بیع ریان من مکر می هر خوهر دان از ریان امسانده ام

در رهب از فعر حال افساددهام

(15) در نکی رو ور دوئی فکسوی فاس

(1º) الهمالة الباسة و الربعون عبي صف وادى البوصد

3 C/ the appellation of Muhammad, "first and last of prophets" 1 C/ M, 1 170 "Oh God! who but Thou is infinite? Who is sufficient Leginning or ending?"

1 Title note 5, q 122

3

I do not find this quatrain in any other text. L. 2 (B. ii. 13, S. P. 12, B. 2, N. 12, W. 11) begins like it, but is really quite different.

1 Literally, "Do not give from (your) hand "

This quantum is W 15, and is the first of those in de T, but I do not find it in C, B, n, P, L, or N

1 I it fally, "Upon the fire of your own anger do not cause anyone to sit

(1) اول وآعر سده بر اساً ا

(2) ای عَدای می بهاست حر نو دست چون نوئی می حد و عالب حر نو دست

اي اول و اي آغر خاتُنان همه تو حواهي نو مرا بسوز وخواهي بنوار .

با نسواني طعمه مدرن مستانرا از دست بهل نو عیله ودستانرا گر رانک رعمر غویش غواهی آسود بك لعطه مده ردست مر بستانرا

تا بسوائي ربچه مکردان کسوا بر آئش عسم حویش منشان کسوا

P

O Thou, the first and last of all created beings 15 burn me an Thou wilt, or cherish me an Thou wilt.4

3.

So far as in thee hes, reproach not drunkards, lay thou aside pretence and imposture; If, henceforth, thou des rest rest from this life of thine, do not for a moment shun! humble folk.

4.

So far as in thee lies, cause no pain to anyone, nor cause anyone to suffer from thy wrath;

Notes Notes

2 There is a parallel passage in M, 1 3195 "If thou art wounded, tell no one of it, add wound to wound and do not complain" "

5

This quatrain is C. 7, P. 219, B. u. 8, L. 5, S. P. 8, B. 4, N. 8, W. 7, E. C. 5, and is no doubt the source of FitzGerald's quatrain (F. 1. 74).

"Ah! Moon of my Delight, who know'st no wane The Moon of Heav'n is rising once again How oft hereafter rising shall she look Through this same Garden after me in vain."

The quatrain is altered, but hardly, I think, improved in F v=Cf Purgatone, xii S₁ "Pensa che questo di n, u non raggiorna"

- 1 C. B. H. P. N., and W. read ' secomes surety for "1
- z=C , B in , N , and W read "this" eart full of melancholy (or passion) " 2 L reads "passionate" heart 7
- 3. Here we have three meanings of the word mah 3. The moon (of heaven), a beautiful mistress, and a month. Cf. M., 1.74. "The moon wanes for love of thee, every month she swoons in her stupefaction."
- 4 N reads bigardad 1 "(many moons) shall revolve," etc. C reads bitabad kt3 "(many a moon) shall shine that (shall not, etc.)" W reads bitābad ū "shall shine and, etc. This is given as a good specimen of the kind of verbal variations to be found between the various texts and MSS. In future I do not propose to set out variations when so minute as this

6

This quatrum v.C. 6, P. 316, B. ii. 12, L. 22, S. P. 11, B. 20, N. 11, W. 10. 1. C., B. ii., P., and W. read bih $a^6 = best$

گر راحت جاودان طبع میداري مي رنج هميشه و مرنجان کسرا

٥

چون غهده نمي كند كسي فردارا حالي خوس كن تو اين دل شيدارا مي نوش بنور ماه اي ماه كه ماه بسيار بجويد و نيابد مارا

٦

قرآن که مهین کلام خوانند اورا که گاه به بردوام خوانند اورا , جاو دان طع م³اری وابضا ل 3

if thou hast a desire for eternal peace, fret thyself always and harass no one.4

5

Since no one will guarantee thee a to-morrow, make thou happy now this love-sick heart; drink wine in the moonlight, O Moon, for the moon shall seek us long and shall not find us.

6.

The Qur'an, which men call the Supreme 1 Word, they read at intervals but not continually,

Notes Notes

- 2. khatt may mean either a measuring mark or a written line, so, khatt-ipuālth 1 may mean either the lines engraved upon the inside of a goblet to measure the draughts, or the edge or rim of the goblet itself P reads "on the rim of the cup" 16
- 3 So, ayet 2 means either a mark or sign, or a verse of the Qur'an The whole line is an elaborate play upon these words
- 4 C and W, tūshani hast = "(a text) is clear or luminous" N reads rauishi ast = "there is a precept or (divine) law"
- 5 The word mudām having also the meaning "wine," this line might be rendered, "Which in all places they read as 'wine'" This form of pun is called tham. Verses in praise of wine were, and are, frequently engraved round wine-goblets in Persia. Allusion is made by Edward FitzGerald to Jamshy d's seventinged cup. The seven lines alluded to were called respectively the khatt-i-jaur, for mark of oppression, the khatt-i-Baghdād, for mark of plenty, the khatt-i-basvah, or mark of all wisdom, the khatt-i-siyah, for black mark, the khatt-i-āshk, for mark of tears, the khatt-i-kūsagar, or potter's mark; and the khatt-i-furūdīnah, or lowest mark

7

This quatram is C 17, P 241, B 11 17, S P. 19, B 28, N 19, W 22, in all of which lines 2 and 3 are transposed. It is also L 30, which is a good deal varied

- 1 C, B ii, L, N, and W read mutub 13 = singers P reads "mu'shūk" II = lovers
- 2 C, P, B ii., L, N, and W read In hung-t-kharāb 11 = this desolate corner, it a tavern, which in Persia is generally to be found in the waste outskirts of a town Cf M, ll 979-983 "I am weak, I was born among ruins and I am happy there, but not in drinking wine . He who would hive in peace must retire, like a drunkard among ruins" 11 9
- 3 P, N, and W read "in pawn for wine," ¹⁴ meaning that the speaker had renounced his future hopes for the forbidden pleasures of this world. L reads this, "Souls and hearts and faith and intellects in pawn for wine" ¹⁵ as the second line. The third and fourth lines in L are entirely different to the other texts. Compare Hafiz. "Virtuous Sufi, he who, like me, pawns his garments at the tavern to pay his score, will never be an inhabitant of Paradise." ¹⁸

8

This quatrain is C 102, P 70, B ii 32, L 65, S P 75, B 62, N. 75, W 77 i ahlt-zemānah means probably "people of this time"

(1) حط پیر له (ن) ایب (ن) روستی است (4) روستی هست (۱) عطّ حور (ا) عطّ حور (ا) عط بیر (ا) عظ مرودینه (ان) مطرب (ان) این کنج حراب (۱۱) در رهن سراب (۱۵) جان و دل و دبن عمل مرهون شراب (۱۵) بر کرد پیاله (۱۲) معشوق (۱۵) صوفي صاف دبشتي دبود آنکه چو من حرفه در مي کدها در کرو باده هست (۱۹) عاجزم من در حرابي زاده من در حرابي میروم دی باده من هر که در جمیعني خواهد نشست در حرابي بایدش رفتن چو مست

در خط پیاله آیسی هست مقیم کاندر همه جا مدام خوانند اورا

مائیم و مي و مصطبه و نون خراب مارع زامید رحمت و بیم عداب جان ودل وجام وجامه پر درد شراب آزاد زخاك و باد و زآنش وآب

> آن به که درین رمانه کم کیري دوم با اهل زمانه صحبت از دور نکوم

وانضًا لم

but on the lines² upon the goblet a text³ is engraved⁴ which they read at all times and in all places.⁵

7.

Here are we; and so is the wine, and the drinking bench; and the ruined furnace2; careless of hopes of merry, and of fears of punishment; our souls, and our hearts, and our goblets, and our garments full of the lees of wine,³ independent of earth and air, and fire and water.

8.

In this life it is best that thou shouldst make but few friends; distant intercourse with one's fellow men 1 is good;

- 2 C uses different phraseology to express the same meaning 2
- 3 Literally, "When thou openest the eye of wisdom," etc

q

This quatrain is C 48, P 108, B 11 28, L 81, S P 28, B 77, N 28, W 32, E C 5, and may be said to have inspired FitzGerald's quatrain (F i 35, F. ii 39, F v 36)

I think the vessel that with fugitive
Articulation answer'd, once did live,
And drink, and ah! the passive lip I kiss'd,
How many kisses might it take—and give!

C 426, ending in $b\bar{u}dch$, is identical, save for line 2, which reads. "and was lip to lip with a sweet sweetheart."

- r The other texts all read "and was enslaved by the curly head of a sweetheart" 1
 - 2. Other texts read "bar gird"3

This quatrain is P 193, B 11 44, L 216, B 213, and W 117, but I do not find it in C, S P, or N

انكس كه بهملگي ترا تكيه برومىت چون چشم خرد باز كني دشمنت اومىت

این کوزه چو من عاشق زاري بودست واندر طلب روي نگاري بودست این دسته که در گردن او مي بیني دستیست که در کردن یاري بودست

١.

ای وای بران دل که درو سوزی نیست مودازدهٔ مه^ئر دلـفـروزی نیست 5 that person upon whom thou leanest entirely,² when thou examinest him closely,³ he is thine enemy.

Q.

This jug was once a plaintive lover as I am, and was in pursuit of one of comely face; this handle that thou seest upon its neck is an arm that once lay around the neck of a friend.

10.

Ah, woe to that heart in which there is no passion, which is not spell-bound by the love of a heart-cheerer!

I B ii and L read " without wine " ?

11

This quatrain is C 30, B ii 26, L 133, S P 24, B 130, N 24, W 28, and in it we find the sentiment of Fitzgerald's quatrain (F v 8) that made its first appearance in F ii, and was never altered. The more direct inspiration of that quatrain came, no doubt, from the 47th quatrain of this MS (q v post)

- 1 C, B n, L, N, and W read nawbet, which conveys rather the idea of a passing period or crisis, than that of a lengthy season
 - 2 C, B 11, L, N, and W read "I drink," 2 for "I desire"
- 3 B 11, L, N, and W read kāmrāniye, 2 a synonym C reads for this line, "I make a wine-drinking, for that is my life", 4 but I think this must be an error of the scribe in my copy, his eye having wandered to the fourth line
- $_4$ C , B -ii , N , and W -all read " Do not reproach $\imath t_*$ " 5 $\iota\, e$, the wine, not me
 - 5 L reads "It is pleasant, because it is bitter" 8 Vide fost, note to q 89
- 6 The word "acrid" is not quite right. Binning (vide p. xxv., note 2) observes very appositely (vol. 11, p. 331, note). "The word met-khaosh" expresses a combination of sweet and acid flavour, common to the juice of many fruits and different wines, etc. It is singular that we have no English word to express this, for I suppose a mongrel term like 'dulco-acid' can hardly be called an English word."

12

This quatrain is C 91, P 124, B ii 37, L 41, S P 26, B 38, N 26, and W 30 There is a strong suggestion of Γ v 25 (F 1 24) in it

1 dast rust,6 - literally, "arriving of the hand at," it, power

(1) بوبست (2) نوسم (3) كامرآني (4) مي بوس كنم كه ريدگانيّ منسبت (4) عيبش مكنيد (6) دست رسي (7) بي باده (8) زانكة تلعمت خوشمست (9) مي خوش روزي که تو بي عشق بسر خواهي برد ضايع تر از آن روز ترا روزي نيست

11

امروز كه مسوسم جسواني منست مي خواهم از آنكه شادماني منست عيبم مكنيد اگرچه تلامست خوش است تلخست ازآنكه زندگاني منست

11

امروز ترا دمس رس فردا نیست واندیشه فردادس بیر مودا نیست

6

the day that thou spendest without love,¹ there is no day more useless to thee than that day.

II.

To-day being the season¹ of my youth, I desire² wine, for thence comes my happiness;³ reproach me not,⁴ even though acrid⁶ it is pleasant;⁵ it is acrid in that it represents my life.

12.

Thou hast no power to-day over the morrow, and anxiety about the morrow brings thee only melancholy;

 $_2$ $_{shaid\bar{u}^1}$ = literally, "love-sick" $\,$ In C $\,$ the line ends "for your heart cannot persevere" 2

3. C, B 11, N, and W all read "bakā" s for this, meaning "end, upshot, remainder," rather than as here, "value, beauty"

13

This quatrain is P 194, W 116, de T 2, and this and No 80 (q v post), but especially this one, give us the original sources of FitzGerald's quatrain (No 4 in all his editions)

Now the New Year, reviving old Desires, The thoughtful Soul to Solitude retires, Where the White Hand of Moses on the Bough Puts out, and Jesus from the ground suspires

It is one of the quatrains found only in the Bodleian MS and in P

- I Vide note I to q 12. W appends a note, "bakhūshī dast rass," 4 an aid to Joy, 1e, Spring. The line might be rendered, "Now that happiness is within reach of the world"
- 2. zendah delira means here the heart, alive in the spiritual sense of the mystic or initiated, as opposed to the pleasure-scekers of the world indicated in the first line. De Tassy (de T 2) translates it "le spiritualiste"; F's "thoughtful soul" is a good rendering. W's rendering, "And lively hearts wend forth, a joyous band," is, I think, infortunate
- 3 The White Hand of Moses is a reference to the sign of his election given to Moses on Mount Sinai (Exc dus iv 6) "And he put his hand into his bosom, and when he took it out, behard, his hand was leprous, white as snow" We find references to this also in the Qui'ān, in ch vii 205, and again in ch xxvi 32, where the miracle is stated to have been performed before Pharach. "And he drew forth his hand out of his bosom, and behold, it appeared white unto the spectators." The learned commentator Al Boidawi says that Moses was a very swarthy man, and that "his hand became bright like the sun" Cf M, 1 453, a reference to this same miracle
- 4 The revivifying properties of the breath of Jesus are alluded to alike in Christian and Muhammadan traditions. In the Qur'an, ch. 111., we find "I will make before you of clay as it were the figure of a bird, then I will breathe thereon and it shall become a bird." Jellal'ud-din, commenting on this passage, refers to Christ's miracles of the raising of Lazarus, the widow's son, and the daughter of the ruler of the synagogue. We find reference hereto also in the 43rd quatrain of Whinfield's text. "Since Isa breathed new life into my soul." There is a beautiful reference to this life-giving breath in the Masibat nāmah of Feril-ud din Attar Cf also M. 1. 451. "If someone was resuscitated by the breath of Jesus."

This quatrain is P 66, B it 135, L 64, B 61, W 115, and is found only in the Bodleian MS and the Lucknow https: aphed edition by W. The objective ān-ra that commences the first line makes the meaning of the Bodleian quatrain almost hopelessly obscure, or, tather, makes literal translation impossible, and the ā-ra* which begins the ruba't in P does not help us W has grasped the meaning, but his charming lines do not exactly represent the Persian B it reads gāyā, "as one might say," "as it were," which makes sense and has the authority of age

- r L reads "Torment grows not on every shoot of (the Tree of) Knowledge " $^{\circ}$
- $_2$ $^{\rm B}$ ii , L. and the Paris MS read "Because in this path no one is perfect." 7

خايع مكن اين دم ار دلت شيدا ليست كين بـاقي عـمـررا بـهـا پيدا ليست . .

اکنون که جهالرا بهوشي دست رسیست هر زنده دلی را سوي صعرا هَوَسیست

بر هــر شاخي طلوع موسي دستيست در هر نفسي خروش عيسي نفسيست

110

آلوا که بر نهال تعقیق نرست زانست که او نیست داین راه درست waste not thou this moment if thy heart be not mad,² for the value³ of the remainder of this life is not manifest.

13.

Now that there is a possibility of happiness 1 for the world, every living heart 2 has yearnings towards the desert, upon every bough is the appearance of Moses' hand, 3 in every breeze is the exhalation of Jesus' breath. 1

T4.

For him for whom the fruit of the branch of truth has not grown,¹ the reason is that he is not firm in the Road.⁴

- 3 The precise meaning of this line in this place is obscure. I take it to mean that men shake the loose bough that bears the fruit of knowledge in vain L. reads. "Everyone has struck the loose bough with impotent hand." The variant in the Paris MS takes us no further.
- 4 Meaning, life begins anew each day, and the Last Day will be identical with the Day of Creation

15

This quatrain is one of the few that seem to be linked with a preceding or subsequent one. This again only occurs in the Paris, Bankipur and Bodleian MSS and the Lucknow edition, it is P 114, B ii 69, L 59, and B 56, and is reproduced as W 114. It formed the original of F v 66, which did not make its appearance until F ii, in which it is No. 71, the two last lines differing somewhat

I sent my Soul through the Invisible, Some letter of that After-life to spell, And by and by my Soul returned to me, And answered, "I Myself am Heav'n and Hell"

Here we have an echo of PitzGerald's study of M Cf 1, 303 (Terminal Essay, p 310) Vulc in his own translation of that poem (L. R., vol. n., p. 451)

I was the Sin that from Myself rebell'd, I the Remorse that pw'rd Myself compell'd Sin and Contrition—Retribution owed, And cancell'd—Pilgrim, Pilgrimage, and Road, Was but Myself toward Myself and Your Arrival but Myself at my own Door.

r. The Lanh \vec{n} Kalam are the Tablet and Pen wherewith divine decrees of what should be from all time were written. Compare Qur'ān, ch. lxvni r. By the Pen and what they write, oh! Muhammad, thou art not distracted." Cf. M., 1. 262. "The Tablet of divine lecrees, and the Kalam appeared manifest."

16

This quatrain is not found elsewhere than in the Bodleian MS., and it is W 113, though W.'s translation of the first two lines is more transfere. We find an echo of it in F. v. 41, which made its appearance in its original form as F 11. 55

Perplext no more with Human or Divine, To-morrow's tangle to the winds resign, And lose your fingers in the tresses of the Cypress-slender Minister of Wine

1 Fuziyi man ast hterally, "is my sustenance, or daily bread "

هرکس زده است دست در شاغی مست امروز چو دی شناس وفردا چو نفست

10

برتر ز ميهيْر خاطرم روز نهست لوح وقلم وبهشت و دوزخ مي جست پس گفت مرا معلّم از راي درمست لوح وقلم وبهشت و دوذخ با تُسْت

14

بر خيز وبده باده چه جاي مضست كامشب دهن تنك تو روزي منست

Every one has feebly shaken with his hand the bough of truth.8

Know that to-day is like yesterday, and that to-morrow is like the First Day of Creation.⁴

15.

Already on the Day of Creation beyond the heavens my soul searched for the Tablet and Pen¹ and for heaven and hell; at last the Teacher said to me with His enlightened judgment, "Tablet and Pen, and heaven and hell, are within thyself."

16.

Arise and give me wine—what time is this for words? for to-night thy little mouth fills all my needs;1

Notes Notes

2 W reads nawbet, 1 se, "turn, condition, period", but as he only collates the Bodleian MS, one may assume that he was deceived by a clerical error in his copy

17

This quatrain is C 84, P 126, B ii 59, L. 193, B. 190, and W 112, and is one of those (No 6) translated by E C Vide post, note to q 20 There is an echo in it of F v 21.

- I misim-i-noritz literally, "the breath of the spring" no-ritz is the Persian New Year's Day (21st March), on which the Sun enters Aries and begins the Vernal Equinox of the old Solar year, as compared with the variable Luna year, which dates from the Hejia. It is commemorated to this day by a festival, said to have been instituted by Jamshya, whose calendar Omar Khay, ain rectified, and to which he refers in F. v. 57.
 - 2 dil-furūz literally, "heart enlighte 1g, 'ride 1 1 2
 - J L reads "upon the lawn "2

18

This quatrain is C 113, P 201, B ii 7, L r B 211, . 111 Cf Inferno, 1x, 97 "Che giova nelle fata dar di coz.

- The meaning of this is "How long shall 1. ... form, empty ceremonies?" The futility of the operation is referred to in F v 47, q v sub q. It is a reference to the game of "Ducks and Diakes," which was known to the micient Egyptians, and also to the Greeks under the name ἐποιττρακισμός it was played with oystershells. The curious are referred to the record of Minutius Ft. x (* D. 207), who describes the game in his preface.
- 2 kinisht = a fire-temple, or Jowish synagogue Any place of worship, idolatrous from the Muhammadan point of view.
 - 3 L reads "I am not hopeless like the," etc 3

مارا چو رخ خويش مي گلگونده کين توبه من چو زلف تو پر شکنست .

14

بر چهرهٔ گـل نسيم نوروز خـوهسد. در زير چمن روي دلفروز خـوهسد. از ديكه گذشت هر.چه گوڻي خوش بيد خوش باش وزدي مـدوكه امروز حوش بـــ

(1

تا چند زنم بنروي دوناهنا خشت بيزار شدم ريت پارستان كيشت

give me wine, rose-coloured as thy cheeks, for this penitence² of mine is as full of tangles as thy curls.

17.

The spring breeze¹ blows sweetly upon the face of the rose, in the shade of the garden plot³ a darling's² face is sweet; nothing thou canst say of yesterday that is past, is sweet, be happy and do not speak of yesterday, for to-day is sweet.

18.

How long shall I throw bricks upon the surface of the sea?¹ I am disgusted with² the idol-worshippers of the pagoda.²

> In L and with a slight variation in B ii these two lines read: "To-night I am occupied with fair youths,

I desire wine and a loved one-what are heaven and hell?"?

This quatrain is C 64, P. 95, B ii 77, L 40, SP 37, N 38, W. 42, and is the original of Fitzgerald's quatrain (F i 62, 11 92, v. 85)

Then said a second-"Ne'er a poevish boy Would break the bowl from which he drank in joy, And He that with his hand the vessel made Will surely not in after wrath destroy "

- C. is identical with this, but B ii , N., and W. read kuja ravā $d\bar{u}r\bar{u}d^{2} =$ "Why should he permit," etc
 - 2. B in and N. read $s\bar{a}k^2 = "legs"$ for pai, and L. reads dast = "hands."
- 3 N. and W read \(\tilde{u}\) hef \(\tilde{u}\) dast \(^3 = ''\) and palms and hands." C. and B ii read sar == "head" for kef, which is neater than this, which can only be rendered "from (his) finger tips." Sir William Jones, in his delightful "Grammar" (London, 1771 and 1809, p 91), justly observes. "The noun sur has a number of different senses, and is therefore the most difficult word in the Persian language, it signifies the head, the top, the point, the principal thing, the air, desire, love, will, intention, etc., and sometimes its meaning is so vague that it seems a mere expletive "
 - 4 C. reads uz berāt 4 = "on what account," etc.
- 5. P. and L. use the synonym scaling. I am not sure that "the ingredients of a drink that he has compounded " would not be a better rendering of this line

The references to this quatrain are somewhat confusing, compare C 23 and 55, B 11 24 and 88, L 84, N 22 and 42, S P 22, B 80, the nearest to it, as a whole, is P 162

Line 1 is the same as L 84, line 1, and W 26, line 2 This line is not at all in C or N.

Line 2 is the same as C. 23, line 1 (var.), L. 84, line 2 (var.), N 22, line 1 (var), and W. 26, line I (var)

Line 3 is the same as in C. 23, L 84, N 22 (var), and identical with N. 42.

Line 4 is the same in all the texts, and is repeated in N 42.

It contains the germ of F v 28-9 "I came like water, and like wind I go," etc., and this quatrain and No. 17 doubtless suggested F. 1 37, which he climinated in its complete form from all subsequent editions

Ah! fill the Cup what boots it to repeat How Time is slipping underneath our Feet, Unborn To-morrow, and dead \ esterday, Why fret about them if To-day be sweet!

Compare also the notes to q 121.

1. juybar means a great river formed of many small ones, or a place abounding in streams, as opposed to juy,5 a small stream.

2 This line in C, B ii., S P, N, and W reads, "These two or three days of the period of my existence pass by "6

3 This line in C, B ii, S P, and N reads "They pass as passes the wind in the desert "9

(1) كجا روا دارد (2) ساقُ (3) و كف و دست (4) ار براي (5) جوي (8) إين يك دو سة روزه نوبت همر گدشت (1) امشت من و سيبچېر جوانان كنشت مي خواهم و معشوق چه دوزع چه بهشت (۵) آخزاي (۹) بگذشت چنانکه نگذرد ناد بدست

تركيب پياله که در مي پيومست بشکستن آن روا نمي دارد مست چندين سر و باي نازنين ازمر دمست از مهر كه پيومست وبكين كه شكست

۲.

چون آب بجویبار و چون باد بدشت روزی دگر از نوبت عمرم بگذشت نیام کات دوزی والد بود کررت دوزی والد زشت وا مینی که زکیب باد کر دری پرست زکیب باد کر دری پرست بای مرد بای از نزاز رد بای مرد بای از نزاز رد وا مینا ا وا مینا ا وا مینا ا وا مینا از مرک مرت کمی کشت وا مینا از مورد و درا برا

10

Khayyām! who can say that he will be a denizen of hell, who ever went to hell, and who ever came from heaven?⁴

19.

The elements 5 of a cup which he has put together, their breaking up a drinker cannot approve, 1 all these heads and delicate feet 2—with his finger-tips, 8 for love of whom did he make them?—for hate of whom 4 did he break them?

20.

Like water in a great river 1 and like wind in the desert, 2 another day passes out of the period of my existence; 3

4 This line in C, P, B ii, and N reads "So long as I live I will not grieve for two days," etc.

21

This quatrain is C 49, B is 86, L 94, B 90, and W 110, without variation. We hear its echo in F v 29, and it forms the original of F i. and v 30, is 33. E C translates it also (No 8)

What, without asking, hither hurried whence?
And, without asking, whither hurried hence!
Oh, many a Cup of this forbidden Wine
Must drown the memory of that insolence!

Cf Inferno, xxiv. 119 "O giustizia di Dio, quant' è severa!"

- 1 Compare I's "First Morning of Creation"
- 2 No doubt, in composing his two first lines, FitzGerald had also in his mind C 235, which is N 117 and W 145, which may be rendered thus 2

In the beginning, to my surprise, he brought me into existence, what do I gain from life save my amazement (at it)?

We come to an end of it, and do not know what was the purpose of this coming, and going, and being

22

This quatrain is C 59, I' 205. B ii 94, L 74, S P 81, B 70, N 81, W 83, and FitzGerald himself gives a translation of it in his preface (F v, p 8), an unrhymed translation made by Prof Cowell, and forming part of a quotation from his Calcutta Review article, and therefore literally exact. The original Persian is very clear and simple, and no variation of Prof Cowell's translation is necessary or desirable.

r An allusion to his father's trade, tent-making, from which he took his Takhallus or poetic name, and at the same time to his own philose, meal labours.

(1) تا من باشم غم دو رور معورم (2) آورد اناضطرابم اول بوحود جرب نفرود جرب عبات چیرې نفرود رفتیم با کراه و ندانیم چه نود زین آمدن ورفتن وبودن مقصود

هرگز خم دو روز مرا یاد نکشت روزي که نیامدست و روز که گذشت

41

چون آمدنم بمن نبد روز نخست وین رفتن بیمراد عزمیست درمست برخیز ومیان به بند ای ماقی چست کاندوه جهان بمی فرو خواهم شست

44

خیّام که خیمهای حکمت می دوخت در گوره ٔ خم فتاد و ناکاه بسوخت grief has never lingered in my mind—concerning two days,4 the day that has not yet come and the day that is past.

21.

Seeing that my coming was not for me the Day of Creation, and that my undesired departure hence is a purpose fixed for me, get up and gird well thy loins, O nimble Cup-bearer, for I will wash down the misery of the world in wine.

22.

Khayyām, who stitched at the tents of wisdom,¹ fell into the furnace of sorrow and was suddenly burnt;

2 C, B 11, and W read $dall\bar{u}l$ -1-kas \bar{u}^1 ="the broker of destiny," and N reads $dall\bar{u}l$ -1-'ayl² ="the broker in a hurry," as a pendant doubtless to $mikr\bar{u}z$ -1-'ayl² - the shears of Fate in line 3. We have in this line an echo of the concluding line of F v 93, "and sold my reputation for a song"

23.

This quatrain is C 90, P 204, B ii 96, L 82, S P 42, B 78, N 43, W 46, and is the third of de T's examples. It is one of a not infrequently recurrent class of ruba'i which inspired FitzGerald's remarkable quartette of quatrains, I'v 78-81. Those quatrains, however, were directly inspired by one of the finest passages in the Mantic-ut-tair, (M., Il. 215-218 and 218 bis (error of numbering) = 220.) Compare, also, the Epitle to the Romans, chi v 20. "Where sin abounded grace did much more abound." FitzGerald had also before him another ruba'i (C 65), whose concluding lines closely resemble this quatrain

"If I do not sin, what is Mercy to do (with itself)?
His Mercy is called into existence by my sins ""

W 120 is a variant of this latter quatrain

24

This quatrain is C 75, P 21, B it 103, L 181, S P 45, B 178, N 46, W 49, and we find an echo of it in the first line of F v 63 "Oh, threats of Hell and Hopes of Paradise" It is also the fourth of de T 's examples

t sauma'ah is distinctively a Christian cell or monastery, madrasch, the school attached to a mosque; dair, a collective monastery or cloister, and kinishi, a Jewish synagogue

(1) دائل قشا (2) دائل عجل (8) گــر مـن نكـم گـنــاه رحمت كه كند آرايش رحمت از كنه كردن ماست مقراض اجل طناب عموش برید دلاّل امــل برایگانش بفروخت

۲۳

غیّام ز بهر گنه این مانم چیست وزخوردن غم فایده بیش وکم چیست انرا که گنه نکـرد غـفـران نبود غفران زبراي گنه آمد غم چیست

46

در صومعه ومدرسه ودیر وکنشت ترمنده ر دوزغند وجویای بهشت

12

the shears of doom cut the tent-rope of his existence, and the broker of hope' sold him for a mere song.

23.

Khayyām, why mourn thus for thy sins? from grieving thus wha' advantage, more or less, dost thou gain? •Mercy was never for him who sins not, mercy is granted for sins—why then grieve?

24.

In cell, and college, and monastery, and synagogue 1 are those who fear hell and those who seek after heaven;

2 Literally, "in the stomach of his heart" C., B ii, P, N, and W. read andrūn-1-hhūd, 1 t e, "in his own bowels (or heart)" W appends a note. "Meaning souls reabsorbed into the Divine essence have no concern with the material heaven or hell" I think the simplicity of the original, sufficiently conveys the writer's meaning 25.

In this precise form this quatrain is, as far as my researches go, only to be found in this MS, in B, ii 115, and in L, where it is No 96, with trifling verbal variations, and B 92, but a variant so close in general form and meaning as to be readily referred to as identical is P 328, N 82, and W 84, and, with slight variations which bring it nearer to our Bodleian MS, C 67 This quatrain (C, P., N, and W) may be rendered

In the season of Spring with a houri-shaped idol,
If there be one jar of wine on the edge of the field,
However much, according to doctrine, this may be bad,
I am worse than a dog if I remember heaven?

We have in this quatrain the sent ment of F v 12, 13, but a closer parallel is found to them in qq 149 and 155 of this MS $(q \ v \ fost)$

I "Thenceforth" is perhaps a liberty, but in many places in this MS it seems indicated as the correct rendering of $\bar{a}z$ $\bar{a}nht$, or of $\bar{a}z$ $\bar{a}ng\bar{a}h$

26

This quatrain, which hardly varies in the texts I am using for reference, is C 83, B ii 110, L 192, S P 85, B 189, N 85, and W 87. We have here the sentiment of the first two lines of F v 47

When you and I behind the Veil are past, Oh, but the long long while the World shall last.

and the last two lines of F v 74, which made its first appearance as F ii 80

Drink! for you know not whence you came, nor why, Drink! for you know not why you go, nor where

Vulc note to q 29

(1) اندرون خود (3) در فصل بهار با بسه حور سرست یك كوزهٔ مي اگر بود بر لب گششه هر چند بنزد علم بد باشد این از سك بترم اگر كنم یاد بهشت آنکس که زاسرار خدا با خبر است زین تهم در اندرون دل هیچ نکشت نهر ۲۵

در فصل بهار اگر تني حور سرشت . پر مي قدحي بمن دهد برلب کشت گرچه بر هرکس اين مخن باشد زشت مگت به زمن ار زانك برم نام بهشت

74

دریاب که از روح جدا خواهی رفت در پردهٔ اسرار خدا خواهی رفت الم کرزامرار خدا بخرت زین قرر اذرون دکری دمیرایا راکرتی و رسزت پی مق می من ده برک ره بر مرکب این شور موایفا له موایفا له دایر ده امرار مداخرای د در برده امرار مداخرای د

13

he who has knowledge of the secrets of God sows none of such seed in his heart of hearts.

25.

If in the season of spring a being, houri-shaped, gives me on the green bank of a field a goblet full of wine, (though to everyone this saying may seem uncouth) a dog is better than I am if thenceforth I pronounce the name of heaven.

26.

Know this—that from thy soul thou shalt be separated, thou shalt pass behind the curtain of the secrets of God.

I The other text's begin, line 3, "mai khūr," and line 4, "khūsh bāsh". The meaning is not affected

27

This is quatrain C 79, P 228, B ii 112, L 200, S P 47, B 197, N 48, and W 51, which are identical as to the first three lines, save for unimportant synonyms, such as $b\bar{u}dum$ for shudam in the first line, and $k\bar{u}n^{1}$ for $ch\bar{u}n$ in the third

1 W notes here κωτίγνητος θανατοῖο. Compare the opening lines of Shelley's "Queen Mab"

How wonderful is Death - Death, and his brother Sleep!

2 C, B 11, L, N, and W all read for umrahat, be-zir-i-khāk² = "beneath the earth," and begin the line "mai khūr," as fassim

28

This, one of the most mystic and interesting quatrains known to me, occurs only in this MS, and is reproduced as W $_{109}$ A remote echo of it is to be found in F $_{\rm V}$ $_{59}$

"Yes, and a single Alif were the clue,
Could you but fied it—to the Treasure house,
And peradventure to THE MASTER too"

خوش باش نداني از کجا آمده مي نوش نداني که کجا خواهي رفت

2

در خواب شدم مرا خردمندي گفت کز خواب کسي را گل شادي نشکفت چيزي چکني که با اجل باشد جفت مي نوش که عمرهات مي بايد خفت

21

دل گفت مرا علم لدني هوس است تعليم كن اگر ترا دست رس است

14

Be happy—thou knowest not whence thou hast come: drink wine 1—thou knowest not whither thou shalt go.

27.

I fell asleep, and wisdom said to me:-

"Never from sleep has the rose of happiness blossomed for anyone;

why do a thing that is the mate of death?¹ Drink wine, for thou must sleep for ages."² 28.

My heart said to me:—"I have a longing for inspired knowledge; teach me if thou art able."

Mr Whinfield, instead of dividing the line after "Alif," reads: "I said the Alif kafat," 1 and dispenses with the verb guft (="it said"), and appends a note: "The One (God) is enough, probably a quotation. Hafiz (Ode 416) uses the same expression 'He who knows the One, knows all'" With all respect, I differ, for guft seems the necessary verb in the line, governed by dul = "the heart" The Allf kafat is, however, a recognised oriental idiom, meaning "Alif sufficeth," se, the one necessary letter, meaning "the One God," referred to again in the fourth line as kes, literally "Some-one = The One" and "One letter," i.e., the Alif representing God, as well as the numeral "one" The whole quatrain is mystical and doctrinal.

This quatrain is C 56, P 63, B ii 103, L 61, S P. 43, B 58, N 44, and W. 47, and we get the echo of it in F v 32, 34, and 47

> There was the Door to which I found no Key; There was the Veil through which I might not see, etc

Cf. M., 11. 3891-2. And again

When you and I behind the Veil are past, etc F infused into this quatrain the sentiment of M., ll. 146-153. (Terminal Essay, p 308.)

- Literally, "there is not a way for anyone" I
- 2 ta'biyah (or ta'biyat), an Arabic word signifying "an array set out," as of soldiers or furniture, etc For this worl C has shu'badeh-yi jun 2 - "juggling about of the soul" It will be observed that the coupling of these words gives quite a new construction to the whole line
- C and W for hich read tirah,3 obliterating the double negative and giving us "save in the dark heart," etc B il and N are identical with this
- 4 C and B. ii are identical with this, but L, N, and W begin afsiis ki in fusionaha 4 = " Pity (it is) that these fables are not short" The line translates literally, "Drink wine, for such fables are not short," meaning, "It will take long to expound the fable (or illusion) of human life" The Paris MS reads, "Hear thou that such fables," etc. Cf. M., Il. 152-3. "They have harassed themselves much, and reap in the end but feebleness and astoundment,"?

This quatrain is C. 108, P 155, L. 49, S P 51, B 46, N. 51, and W 54 It is B ii 497, ending in he, and, in it we find the germ of more than one of F's quatrains dealing with the Secret The whole verse is a protest against the mystery made of holy things by the self-styled "initiates"

- I. C, B ii, P, N, and W for raz read surv 5 Note in these two lines the words sirr and its broken Arabic plural asrār, and its synonym ras raz-i-nīhān means idiomatically a profound secret, such as the place of one's death, future events, etc.
- 2 S P and N (alone) begin the line "raz az hemeh bulbulan," etc, "the secret must be hidden from every nightingale." P. B it, and L. begin "rīz az hemeh ablahān," etc., a slight variant of this MS

(6) سر (6) راز ار هم، طلان (7) جان حودرا هين حسرت ساحتند هم رة جان هجز و حيرت ساختند

گفتم که آلف گفت دگر هیچ مگو درخانه اگر کساست یك حرف بساست

49

در پـرده ٔ اسرار کسيرا ره نـيست زين تعبيه جان هيچکس آگه نيست جز در دل خاك هيچ منزلگه نيست مي خور كه چنين نسالها كوته نيست

٣.

راز از همه ناکسان نهان باید داشت واسرار نهان زابلهان باید داشت المنته المنت المرابح و المنتال المنت المرابح و المنتال و المنتال

15

I said the Alif. My heart said: 1—" Say no more. If One is in the house, one letter is enough."

29.

No one can pass¹ behind the curtain that veils the secret, the mind of no one is cognizant of what is there; save in the heart of earth we have no haven.

Drink wine,⁴ for to such talk there is no end.

30.

The mystery 1 must be kept hidden from all the ignoble, and the secrets must be withheld from fools.2

- 3 This line in C, P., N, and W. has the same meaning, but is constructed differently 1 B ii, L and N for bejāt read bejān-i-mardamān, 2 giving us, "Consider how you yourself act towards the souls of men" L, "men and souls," $\vec{u}$ for the $i\infty \tilde{a} fat.
- 4 chashm means "eyes" and "hope" (vide post, q 80, note 2). This passage might be rendered, "Our regard (for them)," etc, sed quare Cf. Dante, Convivo, iii 8

31

This quatrain is P. 25, C. 87, B ii. 60, L. 195, S. P 31, N. 31, and W. 35. Compare q No 95 (post). This quatrain inspired F v. 71

The Moving Finger writes, and having writ, Moves on, nor all your Piety nor Wit Shall lure it back to cancel half a Line, Nor all your tears wash out a Word of it

And the same idea reappears in the parallel quatrain F. v 73:

With Earth's first Clay they did the Last Man knead, And there of the Last Harvest sow'd the seed And the first Morning of Creation wrote,

What the Last Dawn of Reckoning shall read

N quotes in a note a parallel passage from Anwary — "If the affairs of this world are not governed by Fate, why do the projects of men turn out contrariwise to their desires? Yes, it is Fate that 'eads men irresistibly towards good and bad, and that is why their endeavours come always to naught "3 Compare Ephesians iii 9 "The mystery which from the beginning of the world hath been hid in God" Cf Paradiso, xx 52 "'I guidizio eterno non si trasmuta"

- 1 C, B n, L, N, and W for zīn pīsh read bar lūh 4 =upon the Tablet Compare lūh ū kalam m q 15
 - 2 C, B 11, L, N, and W read asudah, meaning the same.

32.

This quatrain is B ii 129, L 105, B 101 I do not find it in C, N, or W, but it is the fifth of the examples given in de T's pamphlet

- 1 fusl-1-gul, the time of flowers (esp roses) = the Spring
- 2 kisht—a sown field as opposed to a wild prairie, so F in F v ii, "the sown," vide qq 40 and 45 The lab-i-kisht is the raised embankment of grass round a cultivated field. Compare the passage in Jami's Behanstan (6th Garden). "We went out one spring day with a company of friends and acquaintances to enjoy the air of the fields and obtain a view of the desert."
 - 3 Literally, "With one, two, three people, 'atc
- 4 strisht means either "shaped" or "natured L for ...hl reads taxeh,? giving us "with a few young houri-shaped playmates"

بنگر که چه مي کني بجاي مردم چشم از همه مردمان نهان بايد داشت

17

زین پیش نشان بودنیها بودست پیوسته قلم زنیك وبد نامبودست در روز ازل هر انچه بایست بداد غم خوردن وكوشیدن ما بیهوده ست

44

فصل گل وطرف جویبار ولب کشت بایك دو سه اهل ولعبتنی حور سرشت

16

Consider thine actions towards thy fellow men: our hopes must be concealed from all mankind.

31.

From the beginning was written what shall be; unhaltingly the Pen writes, and is heedless of good and bad; on the First Day He appointed everything that must be—our grief and our efforts are vain.

32.

In the spring, on the bank of the river and on the edge of the field, with a few companions and a playmate houri-shaped, 4

5 Independent alike of Islam and Judaism, the two principal creeds followed in Iran

33

This quatrain is C 90, P 148, L 199, S P. 90, B 196, N 90, W 92, and inspired F v 67

Heav'n but the Vision of fulfilled Desire, And Hell the Shadow from a Soul on fire, Cast on the Darkness into which Ourselves, So late emerged from, shall so soon expire

He got his verse mainly, however, from M, 1 1866 (Terminal Essay, p 311)

- I N and V for ten read 'umr = existence—a frequent interchange in the MSS.
- 2 Jihun the river Oxus Compare line 399 in "Prometheus Bound". δακρισίστακτον ἀπ' ὅσιτων ῥαδινῶν δ' εἰβομένα ῥέος παρειὰν νοτίοις ἔτεγξα παγαῖς "shedding from tender eyes a trickling river of tears, I wet my checks with fountains of rain."
 - 3 C. P., L., and W. read chasam, 1 giving us "my strained eyes."
- 4 It is interesting to note the interchange of "f" for "p" in Persian Firdus = paradise, First = Persian, Pen = fairy, Farsang = parasang (Gr), etc

34

This quatrain is C 51, P 323, L 95, B, 91, and W 108, and contains the original inspiration of F i 12

"How sweet is mortal sovran'ty!" think some Others, "How blest the l'aradise to come!" Ah, take the Cash in hand and wave the Rest, Oh, the brave music of a distant Drum!

As F ii 13, it practically reached its final form.

Some for the glories of this World, and some Sigh for the Prophet's Paradise to come, Ah, take the Cash and let the Credit go, Nor heed the rumble of a distant Drum!

- r L and W read mara chu sur^2 for behisht-i-'Adan, meaning " for me like a nuptial banquet with houri- " etc Paris MS has a synonymous variant
- 2 The second line in C reads, "And that that after-life will be pleasant with music and brightness" 1

(1) چشم (2) مرا چو سور (8) و آن عالم ما نوا و با دور حوش سب

پیش آر قدح که باده نوشان صبوح آموده ز مسهدند وفارغ زکنشت --

mm

گردون کبري از تن فرسودهٔ ماست جيهون اثري ز اشك پالودهٔ ماست دوزخ شرري ز رنج بيهودهٔ ماست فردوس دمي ز وقت آسوده ٔ ماست

mp

گویند بهشت عدن با حور خوشست من می گویم که آب انگور خوشست بر آر ندج که به دو مان مع آسوه و رسیمد نه و فارغ رست واخیا فی بردن کمری از آن فرسوه ۲۰۰۰ جیون ابری زاشگ بارده ۲۰۰۰ دونغ شردی زینج بهوده ۲۰۰۰ واخیا که واخیا که واخیا که واخیا که

17 bring forth the cup, for those that drink the morning draught are independent of the mosque and free from the synagogue.⁵

33.

The heavenly vault is the girdle of my weary body, I Jihun is a water-course worn by my filtered tears, hell-is a spark from my useless wornies, Paradise is a moment of time when I am tranquil.

34

They say that the garden of Eder 1 is pleasant with houris: I say that the juice of the grape is pleasant.

- 3 This is W s line, which cannot be improved upon. It is a common Persian proverb. Compare the last line of q 40 (post). L for be-day reads be-shu, synonymous
 - 4 C. L. and W for birader read shinudan 1 = to hear
- 5 Compare q 125, l 4 This line refers to the kettledrums suspended at the gates of oriental palaces to summon soldiers, etc. Compare Gulistān, ch. v, story 20 .

Till thou hearest the morning call from the Friday mosque, Or the noise of kettledrums on Atabek's palace-gate ²

Compare also the distich in FitzGerald's translation of M in L R, vol. ii , $^{\circ}$ P $_{4}^{G_{3}}$

Or lust of worldly Glory-hollow more Than the Drum beaten at the Sultan's Door

Cf M, ll 2162 and 2753 (Terminal Essay, p 312)

35

This quatrain is C 80, P 284, L 188, B 185, and W 107 In the first two lines we recognise the sentiment of F i 23, v 24, which remained unaltered in all the editions

Ah! make the most or what we yet may spend,
Before we too into the Dust descend,
Dust into Dust, and under Dust to lie,
Sans Wine, sans Song, sans Singer, and—sans End!

And in the last line we recognise the last lines of F v 63, which alone remain as the last lines of F i 26 This (F i 26) is undoubtedly inspired by this ruba'i

Oh! come with old Khayyām, and leave the Wise, To talk, one thing is certain, that life flies.

One thing is certain, and the Rest is Lies—
The Flower that once has blown for ever dies

It occurs also as in the last line of F ii, 23, which was omitted in F iii and iv Cf Purgatorio, xiv 86 "O gente umana, perchè poni il core là 'v' è mestier di consorto divieto?"

I It is open to conjecture whether this word should be read gil! = clay, or gul! - roses, and in C there is a zammah, making it yal.! and W affixes a kasrah, making it gil! Non nostrum tantas component lites

36

This quatrain is B 93; it is found by W only in this MS and the Lucknow edition, where it is 97, and it is reproduced as W 106

I Literally, "This is your very interest from the period of your youth."

L reads "your very self"?

ایی نقد بگیر و دست ازان نسیه بدار کاواز دهل برادر از دور خوشست

می خور که بزیر گل بسی خواهی خفس بی مونس وہی حریف وہی همدم وجفت زنهار بکس مگو تو این راز نهفت هـ لاله پژمـرد نهواهد بشكفت

می نوش که عمر جاودانی اینست خود حاصلت از دور جواني اينست

Hold fast this cash and let that credit go,3 for the noise of drums, brother,4 is pleasant from afar.5

35.

Drink wine, for thou wilt sleep long beneath the clay 1 without an intimate, a friend, a comrade, or wife; take care that thou tell'st not this hidden secret to anyone:-The tulips that are withcred will never bloom again.

36.

Drink wine, for this is life eternal, this is thy gain from the days of thy youth;1

- $_2$ W's text reads (from the Lucknow edition). "It is the season of roses and wine and drunken friends." $^{\rm 1}$
 - 3 10, " for that is the only thing worth living for "

37

 $1\mbox{ do not find this quatrain in } C$, L , N , or W , nor does F appear to have used it

- I Note the objective ni governing all that goes before it
- 2 Literally, "after my heart," e, "in my heart's opinion"

38

This quatrain is C 81, P 261, L 189, S P 93, B 186, N 93, and W 95, and we find in it the sentiment of F v 61, which made its first appearance as F ii 63, and was never altered, though F had C 81 before him when he made his first edition

Why, be this Juice the growth of God, who dare Blaspheme the twisted tendril as a Snare?

A Blessing, we should use it, should we not?
And if a Curse,—why, then, Who set it there?

Mr Dole (D, p 118) derives this from a quatrain N 226 and W 265, but he had not studied the Calcutta and Bodleian MSS. It is true that F had N before him when he made his second edition, but this C and E quatrain is nearer the sentiment of his own, and N is translation takes unwairantable liberties with his text.

هنگام کل و باده ویاران سر مست خوش باش دمی که زندگانی اینست mv

مي ده گه دل ريش مرا مرهم اوست مودازدگان عشق را همدم اوست پيش دل من خاك يكي جرعه به است از چرخ كه كاسه مر عالم اوست

٣٨

مي ميغورم ومغالفان از چپ و راست گويند مغور باده كه دين را اعداست مسئلام وابده واران سر وشائل و المغاله وابغاله مه و کردل پش راریم او موداز دکان عنی را مدم او پن له ناک پی جمعه ا

19 a season of roses, and wine, and drunken companions^a—be happy for a moment for This is life!^a 37.

Give me wine which is a salve for my wounded heart, it is the boon companion of those who have trafficked in love; to my mind² the dregs of a single draught are better than the vault of heaven which is the hollow of the world's skull.

38.

I drink wine, and my enemics from left and right say:—"Do not drink wine, for it is the foe of religion."

I A reference to the permission given to Muhammadans in ch ii of the Our an and elsewhere to slay all foes of Islam

39

This quatrain is B 55, and is found by W only in this MS and in the Lucknow edition, where it is 58, and it is reproduced as W 105

The Lagran, "Wine! thou art a melted ruby" All the texts teem with references to the ruby that "kindles in the vine" (Fiv. 5), and the idea of the "molten ruby" is commonly recurrent in oriental verse. Compare the passage in the Beharistän (7th Garden)

Wine is said to be a molten ruby,

Whoever beheld that cornelian wine Cannot discern it from melted cornelian. Both are of one essence, but in nature, The one is solid, the other fluid

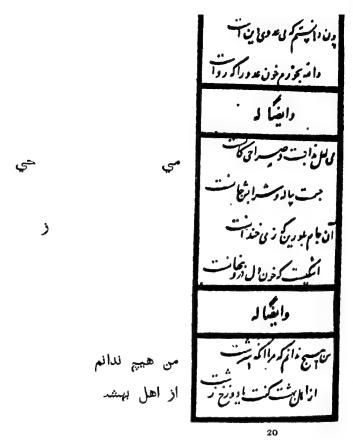

The one powdered colours the hand, the other tasted mounts to the head

- 2 Literally, "that is laughing with wine"
- 3 L begins, "Cup, thou art a charm" 2 (or hope) The change in these two lines from the second to the third person is noteworthy

40

This quatrain is C 107, L 89, S P 92, B 85, N 92, and W 94, and we get again in it the images of the earthly cash and heavenly credit (F. v 13), and the sensuous repose of the desert verses (F. v 11 and 12) before referred to.

1 N begins bud—" was an inhabitant of Heaven", whilst C and W read "Made an inhabitant of pleasant Heaven or," etc. 3 L reads kerd for guft, "Made me to dwell," etc

When I knew that wine was the foe of religion,

I said:—"By Allah! let me drink the foe's blood, for that is lawful."

39.

Wine is a melted ruby and the cup is the mine thereof; the cup is a body and its wine is the soul thereof; that crystal cup that is bubbling over with wine is a tear in which the heart's blood is hidden.

40.

I know not whether he who fashioned me appointed me to dwell in heaven or in dreadful hell,

- 2 Literally, "an idol"
- 3 C, L, N, and W for "food" and "wine" read "goblet" and "lute," from which F doubtless got his "Thou beside me singing in the wilderness"
- 4 ic, "These are what I am enjoying (as ready cash) in this life, whilst you are only expecting them (credit) in Heaven"

41.

This quatrain 15 C. 62, P 45, L 80, S P 95, B 76, N 95, W 96, and contains the inspiration for F v 72 (F 1 52)

And that inverted Bowl they call the Sky, Whereunder crawling coop'd we live and die, Lift not your hands to It for help, for It As impotently moves as you or I

- Cf M, l 24 "The sky is like a bird that flutters in the direction commanded by God" (Terminal Essay, p 308) Compare q 154
 - I N reads "Everything good" 8
 - 2 mhād is "a thing placed," therefore mhād-i-bashas = human nature.
- 3 kazā and kadar. "The decree existing in the divine mind from all eternity, and the execution and declaration of the decree at the appointed time; the Recording Angels." (Steingass, Dict.)
 - 4 C and N read dar rah-i-'ishk, in the way of (divine) love.

42

This quatrain is C. 114, P 149, L 215, S P. 98, B 212, N 98, and W. 99. We get in it an echo of q 10, ante

1 waraki-zi-'ishk is eminently symbolical. It may be interpre id "a love story", so in French, "une page d'amour". N and W read for this tavabi-zi-'akl, s "a joy from wisdom", whilst C. and L. have rakami-zi-'akl, s "the study of wisdom," and the verb is in the negative.

(1) جامي (2) بربطي ۽ (3) هر نيکي (4) در ره هشت (5) طربي ز عقل (6) رقبي ز عقل (7) بيکاشت

قــوتي وبتي وبادة برلب كشت اين هرمه مرا نقد وترا نسيه بهشت

19

نیکي وہدي که در نهاد بشرست شادي وغمي که در قضا وقدرست با چرخ مکن حواله کاندر ره عقل چرخ از تو هزار بار بیچاره ترست

27

هر کو ورقی زعشق بر دل بکامنت یک روزه زعمر خویش ضایع نگذاشت ر آوی و با و برایک ایر سراند و رانیه و افینا اله برد بری که دریس و بشرت با هاعنه ی درخها و تدر برسیخ می داد کا در ده پرخ از توهم زار به رکار و رز برخ در فرخ و شرک و رفتا و تدر برخ از توهم زار به رکار و رز مرکووسیة زغین دول بکا

21 but some food, and an adored one, and wine, upon the green bank of a field—

all these three are cash to me: thine be the credit-heaven! 4

41.

The good and the bast that are in man's nature,² the happiness and mistry that are predestined for us—do not impute them to the heavens, for in the way of Wisdom those heavens are a thousandfold more helpless than thou art.

42.

Whosoever has engrafted the leaf of love¹ upon his heart, not one day of his life has been wasted;

 2 C , P , N ,, and W for ten read khud , i.e , his own comfort $\,$ L reads idn , i.e , "the comfort of his soul"

43

This quatram is C 47, B II, 105, L. 110, and W 104 (W does not collate C), and it is included as C C 4. It is the original of one of F is most beautiful verses, F $_{\rm V}$ 19 (F 1 18)

I sometimes think that never blows so red The Rose as where some buried Cæsar bled, That every Hyacinth the Garden wears Dropt in her Lap from some once lovely Head

Compare Herrick's verse (Hesperides)

In this little Urne is laid Prewdence Baldwin (once my maid), From whose happy spark here let Spring the purple volet

- 1. B 11, L and C read, "In every desert where there is a tulip-bed "1
- 2 $\,$ B $\,\text{u}$, L $\,$ and C $\,$ read, "Those tulips have come there from the blood of a king" 2
 - 3 L and W for shahh read barg 3 = leaf
- 4 This admiration for moles is universal in the East Compare Behaustan, 4th Garden "He fell madly in love with her attractions, distracted by her curls and her mole" And so Hafiz:

If that lovely maid of Shirāz would accept my heart,
I would give for the black mole on her check the cities of Samarcand and Bokharā 4

44.

This quatrain is C 109, P 165, L 83, B 79, and W 103

1 Literally, "Sit not secure"

(1) در هر دست كه لاله راري بود است (2) ان لاله از حون شهرياري (8) بركت (4) اكر آن تراه شرازي بدست ارد دل مازا بركت بحال هندوش بغشم سمرقند و بجازا

یا در طلب رضای یزدان کوشید یا راحت تن گزید وماغر برداشت

PM

هر جا كه گلي ولاله زاري بودمست از سرخي خون شهرياري بودمست هر شاخ بنفشه كز زمين مي رويد خاليست كه بر رخ نگاري بودمست

66

هُش دار که روزگار شورانگیزمس ایمی منشین که تیغ دوران تیزمس بادهب رضای بردان به ایرات من کرد در اخر بردا و روات من کرد در ماغر بردا و بردا

20 either he strives to meet with God's approbation, or he chooses bodily 2 comfort and raises the wine-cup.

43.

Everywhere that there has been a rose or tulip-bed,¹ there has been spilled the crimson blood of a king;² every violet shoot³ that grows from the earth is a mole that was once upon the cheek of a beauty.⁴

44.

Be prudent, for the means of life are uncertain; take heed, for the sword of destiny is keen.

45

It will be observed that this quatrain, which is not to be found in \mathbb{C} , \mathbb{N} , or \mathbb{W} , is practically a paraphrase of \mathbb{q} 40 (ante). Line 2 is practically identical with line 4 of \mathbb{q} 40, whilst line 4 is identical with line 4 of \mathbb{q} 18 (ante). The quatrain is probably spurious. Compare also \mathbb{q} 32 (ante) and \mathbb{q} 76 (fest). P 221 is almost identical, and L has a corresponding quatrain, No 37 (B 34), the first three lines of which read

A goblet, and wine, and a cup-bearer on the bank of the field, Let all these be mine, and mayst thou enjoy all heaven, Hearken not to discourse concerning heaven and hell from anyone!

- I See note 2, q 32, ante
- 2 Compare q 40, l 4 "Cash" == present enjoyment, "credit" future bliss. It will be observed that, though the Persian is here practically identical, the rendering is different. The laws of Persian propody, to which Omar ever paid strict attention, require that lines 2 and 4 should not end with a word identical in sound and meaning be-hight, therefore, at the end of line 2, is the third person singular of the agrist tense of the verb hightan 2 = to rob
 - 3 Compare q 18, 1 4

46

This quatrain is P 183, B 225, and W 135 (taken by him from this MS and the Lucknow edition, where it is No 228), and is one of the pair (with q 94, fost) from which F derived his allusion to chess in F v 69 Cf also C. 336

- To the Persian the Chinese type of countenance was singularly beautiful chin means also porcelain (or a porcelain idol) Compare Beharistan (7th Garden)
 - "When my love arranged the entangled hyacmth lock of held."

 She placed the stamp of envy upon the heart of Chinese painters."

(1) جامي و مي و ساقى در لب كشب (2) هشتن اين حمله مرا وهم ترا كشتي تيسب مشو سفن بهشب و دورج از كس

در گام تو گر زمانه لوزینه نهد زنهار فرو مبر که زُهر آمیزست

100

یك شیشه شراب ولب یار ولب كشت این جمله مرا نقد وترا نسیه بهشت قومي به بهشت و دوزخ اندر گروند كه رفت بدوزخ وكه آمد زبهشت

54

ای عارض تو نهاده بر نسرین طرح روی تو فگنده بربتان چین طرح دکام وکرزه: درنب مند دنه رسد در کرز را بیز واینها که کی شهر شراب دب اردی و این جد دراند در این بیشت قری بیشت دد درنج آمد مر رفت دورخ در آمد ش واینها که دری و کمند و برنج روی کا دری و کمند و برنج روی کا

23

If fortune place almond-sweets in thy very mouth, beware! swallow them not, for poison is mingled therein.

45.

One jar of wine and a lover's lips, on the bank of the sown field 1—

these have robbed me of cash, and thee of the credit.² Some are pledged to heaven or hell, but who ever went to hell, and who ever came from heaven?

46.

O thou, whose cheek is moulded upon the model of the wild rose, whose face is cast in the mould of Chinese idols,1

- 2 W says the Lucknow edition for Babil reads $m\bar{a}il$ (= "ford") It may do so in his copy, but it certainly does not in mine, where it reads distinctly $m\bar{a}il$ -ra, which neither I, nor anyone I have been able to consult, understand. shah- $m\bar{a}t$ means "check-mate" at chess, but the termination forbids us to seek for an interpretation in this analogue Mr Ellis of the British Museum suggests that the m is inserted in error, and that the scribe meant to say Mtl, the ancient name for the province of Astrakhan. The suggestion is an interesting and valuable one M the same time, I think it not improbable that the error is in my (later) edition of M to which M to which M at M in M is which was taken from the 1878 edition of M to which M refers.
- 3 The Persian chessmen referred to are respectively, asp = horse = knight, rukh = cheek = castle, whence our term rook (?), pil elephant = bishop, bixak == flag -pawn, and farzin = queen. The pawns are often called piādehgān 1 = footmen. P and W give pil, which is the Persian, instead of fil, which is Arabic Owners of the familiar ivery chessmen that come from the East will recognise the above terms. The game is called in Persian shatrang,3" the hundred cares," or shah-i-rang,1" the pyal care," or shash rang,4" the six colours, or ranks."

47

This quatram varies a good deal in the texts. It is C. 123, P 51, L. 229, S. P 105, B 226, N 105, W 134, and F C 2, and it inspired F v 8, which made its first appearance as F ii 8, and was no cr altered

Whether at Naishapu. or Babylon, Whether the Cup with sweet or bitter run, The Wine of Life keeps oozing drop by drop, The Leaves of Life keep falling one by one

This was doubtless one of the quatrains of which F was "reminded' by N's edition, for "Naishapúr" occurs only in that text (of those before F) C and L, like this, have "Baghdad."

I W for then 'umr hem: ravad reads thun jan ba-lab āmad' -- " since the soul comes to the hps," a familiar oriental figure for the approach of death. Note I ii 46, v 43

And, proffering his Cup, invite your Soul Forth to your Lips to quaff—you shall not shrink, and hundreds of quotable passages from the Persian poets, as, for instance, in the Gulistan, chap i story 16, "Many a man was at the point of death," 6 Cf M, ll. 340, 3031, 2501, et passim

- 2 The texts we are using are equally divided The texts 'N and W give us Nishapur, and L and the MSS Baghdad
- 3 Balkh was one of the capitals of Khurasán Being a rhyme word, it never alters; but it is not surprising that F discarded it for the more euphonious Babylon Babil (Babylon) and Baghdad are often interchanged as synonyms in oriental literature
- 4. The readings of these two first lines vary very much, beyond indeed the power of perfect collation in a note. The first line of C. L., and N runs. "Since life passes what is sweet and what is bitter" Line 2 of N is line 1 of W. There is a parallel passage to be found in the Gulistan, chap i story I

دي غمــزه ً لو داده هه بابلرا اسپ ورخ وپيل وبيلق وفرزين طرح

PV

چون عمر همي رود چه بغداد وچه بلخ پيماله چو پر شود چه شيرين وچه تلخ ميخور که پس ازمن وتو اين ماه بسي از ملخ بغرّه آيد از غرّه به ملخ

3

انها که کشنده نبید نابعد وانهاکه بشب همیشه در مصرابند

2.

yesterday thy amorous glance gave to the Shah of Babylon² the moves of the Knight, the Castle, the Bishop, the Pawn, and the Queen.³

47.

Since life passes; what is Baghdad and what is Balkh? When the cup is full, what matter if it be sweet or bitter? Drink wine, for often, after thee and me, this moon will pass on from the last day of the month to the first, and from the first to the last.

48.

Of those who draw the pure date wine 1 and those who spend the night in prayer, 2

When the pure soul is on the point of departure, What if one dies on a throne or on the face of the earth.8

5 Here will be observed an echo of F's concluding quatrains The P MS for "Drink wine!" reads the equally recurrent "Be happy!"

48.

This quatrain is P 214, B 283, and W 222, derived from this MS, and No 287 of the Lucknow edition.

- 1. L reads sherāb for nabīz = "pure wine" P reads "continual draughts of date wine" 11 = mudām Vide note 2, q 117
- 2 Literally, "and those who by night are always at the Mihrab" (Vide $q \ z$, note r) L for hemīsheh gives the synonym mudām 9 There are other equally unimportant variations in L

- 3. 11, "Not one is sure, all are at sea" Cf M, 1 387 "I trust that Thou wilt rescue me from this dark water, and re-establish me in Thy path" 2 Cf Shahbistari, Gulshan 1702, 1 27
- 4 $i\,\ell$, God Compare F v 51 "They change and perish all but He remains"

49.

This quatrain is C. 140, P 127, B $\scriptstyle\rm II$ 153, L 264, B 260, W 217, and is a good specimen of the quatrains that have "carpe diem" for their text. There is a suggestion also in it of q 68

- 1 pūyidan means literally "to run to and fro, to search"
- 2. B. ir and L read "this single moment of companionship "1
- 3. Cf Paradiso, xxvi 137, "l'uso de' mortali è come fronda in ramo, che sen va, ed altra viene"

50

This quatrain occurs only in this MS and L. 602 (in which there are unimportant variations), and is reproduced in W 216. It contains, I think, the inspiration of F v 54.

Waste not your Hour, nor in the vain pursuit Of this and that endeavour and dispute. Better be jocund with the fruitful Grape, Than sadden after none, or bitter Fruit

1 timyiz, literally "discernment."

(۱) یکدمهٔ صعبت

(2) چشم آن دارم کرین آب سیاه دست من دُمری و بار آری براه

,

بر خشك كسي نيست همه درآبند بيدار يكيست ديگران در خوابند

Po

اين عقل كه در ره سعادت پويد روزي صد بار خود ترا مي گويد درياب تو اين يكدمه وقتت كه له ً آن تـرّه كه بدروند وديخـر رويد

٥.

آنان که امیر عقل وتمییز شدند در حسرت هست ولیست ناچیز شدند برفت کی بت سه درا به

بوارکت دیمان درا به

وابضا که

این عمل که دراه سه دت پوید

درزی صد برخو د ترای کویه

درزی صد برخو د ترای کویه

درزی حد برخو د ترای کویه

در بی تراین کویه و ترای کویه

آن تر که بر روند در کمر رویه

در صر ت بت بنیت بخرشه ند

25

not one is on the dry land, all are in the water.³ One is awake:⁴ the others are asleep.

49.

This intellect that haunts¹ the path of happiness keeps saying to thee a hundred times a day:—

"Understand in this single moment of thine existence,2 that thou art not like those herbs which when they gather them spring up again."

50.

Those who are the slaves of intellect and hair-splitting,¹ have perished in bickerings about existence and non-existence;

- 2 W. reads bākhabarān = " wise ones," but this is not in this MS., to which alone he refers in his note
 - 3 The obscurity of the meaning here baffles satisfactory translation.

51

This quatrain is C 129, P 55, B. ii. 158, L. 232, S. P 157, N 157, W. 176, de T 17, and doubtless inspired F. v. 47

When You and I behind the Veil are past,
Oh, but the long long while the World shall last,
Which of our Coming and Departure heeds,
As the Sea's self should heed a pebble cast

It varies considerably in the texts under consideration, excepting in B ii, which is identical FitzGerald's last line contains an echo of the first line of q 18 (vide ante).

- 1 N reads for this line, "From my creation the Age (derived) no advantage "1 C and P are identical with N, preserving gardunrā for dawrānrā
- 2 C, P., N, L, and W read "burdan" for "raftan," which gives a passive rather than an active meaning to the process of departure
- 3 C, P, L, N, and W read jāh i jalālisho for jemāl wa jāhash, which conveys the same idea
- 4. N reads this line (in conformity with his line 1), "What might be the object of my creation or extinction" ⁸ C, L, and P retain the expression az bahr="on account of," as in this MS

52

This quatrain varies a good deal in the texts. The parallel quatrains are C 117, B ii, 148, L 358, S P. 112, and N 112, and it forms the sixth of de T's examples from this MS L 371 and B 367 are corresponding qq

i ie, "The Path of (Divine) Love leads to destruction," ie, to spiritual annihilation C and N for andar iah-i-ishk read ax defter-i-umr = "from the Book of Existence." Compare Hafiz

The path of love is a path to which there is no end, In which there is no remedy for lovers but to give up their souls ⁵

- 2 C, B ii, L, and N. for chang read the weaker form dast="hands" Cf M, ll 1059-1062 "If thou becomest as I say, thou wilt ... be God, but thou wilt be annihilated in Him "?
 - 3 Literally, "we must perish"

(1) رّ اوردن من نبود دورانرا سود (2) بردن (3) کاوردن وبردن من آیاز چه بود (4) از دفتر همر (5) راهست راه هشق که میچش کناره نیست (نجا جز آنکه جان بسپارند چاره نیست

(b) جاة و جالش

. (7) كر تو كشتى أبيه كفتم نه حفى ليك در حق دابماً مستعرقي رو بیهبری وآب انگور گزین کان بیهبران بغوره میویز شدند

01

از آمدنم نـبـود گـردونرا مود وز رفتن من جمال وجاهش نفزود وز هیچ کسي نیز دو گوشم نشنود کین آمدن و رفتنم از بهر چه بود

٥٢

اندر ره عشق پاك مي بايد شد در چنگ اجل هلاك مي بايد شد

ده چنری د آب اکفورکزین

عان خوان بعوره سویریش نه

دارا من بنو و کرد مراسو د

وز من بن جال دجاشن و د

در بیج کی بهند در کوشش و د

رز بیج کی بهند در کوشش و د

مرا آهن و فرنسنم از بربید و د

وابنگاله

الم دره متم تا کب وا برید

در خی اجرا کاک دا بیت

26 go, thou ignorant one,² and choose rather grape-juice, for the ignorant from eating dry raisins have become like unripe grapes themselves.³

51

My coming was of no profit to the heavenly sphere,¹ and by my departure² naught will be added to its beauty and dignity;³

neither from anyone have my two ears heard what is the object of this my coming and going.⁴

52.

We must be effaced in the way of love,¹ we must be destroyed³ in the talons of destiny;³

- 4 B is and N for farigh manushin read khush khush mara!=gaily to us. This line in C reads, "Whenever your head rises superior to wisdom":
- 5 B ii and N are idensical with this, but C reads, "The end is that we must go below the dust," in which we recognise the line F. v 24, 1 3, "Dust into Dust and under Dust to he."

53

This quatrain is P 310, L 296, S P 122, B 292, N 122, and W 149 It contains, like many other quatrains, the key-note of the whole poem

- r Note the ironical contrast between hamdam-s-pukhta, "the mature friend," and may-s-khām, "the new wine" L reads the line, "To-day that is the end of existence nothing remains but the cup" 4 This line of B is line 4 in L Vide Q 117, note 3
 - 2 Literally, "in our hand" or "to our hand"

54

I do not find this quatrain elsewhere than at B ii 144, which is identical with it—Its first line, coupled with $q g_5$ (q v), gave FitzGerald the inspiration for his F v 71, and the rest of the quatrain suggested no doubt to him q 107 of F ii , a quatrain that appeared in that edition only.

Better, oh better, cancel from the Scroll Of Universe one luckless Human Soul, Than drop by drop enlarge the Flood that rolls Hoarser with Anguish as the Ages roll

It will be observed that F missed the significance of the original

- 1 Literally, "does not become of another colour". Compare the Arabic expression, "It is Written $^{10.6}$
- 2 jigar khun means literally, "liver-blood," a universal orientalism to signify profound grief

(1) خوش خوش مرا (2) هـر چند نو سرفراز عالم سدة (3) اجر نه نزیر خاك صى باید شد (4) امروز كه دردست بجر جام نمانده (5) مكتوب اي ماقي عوش لقا تو فارغ منشين آبي درده كه خاك مي بايد شد

٥٣

اكنون كه زخوش دلي بجز نام نماند يك همدم پخته جزمي خام لماند دست طرب از ساغر مي باز مگير امروز كه در دست بجز جام نماند

90

از رفته قلم هیچ دگر گون نشود وزخوردن غم بجزجگر خون نشود

27

O sweet-faced Cup-bearer, sit thou not idle,⁴ give to me water, for dust I must become.⁵

53.

Now that nothing but the mere name of our happiness remains,

• the only old friend that remains is new wine;¹ withhold not the merry hand from the wine-cup to-day that nothing but the cup remains within our reach.²

54.

What the Pen has written never changes,1 and grieving only results in deep affliction; 4

- 3 A somewhat similar expression, khūn khūrdan, "to eat blood", se., to suffer affliction
- 4 : e, "You do not influence any part of your destiny" Compare Matthew vi 27. "And which of you by being anxious can add one cubit unto his stature" (or "age")—Revised Version

55

This quatrain is not to be found in any of the texts under consideration, and it is not surprising that it has been avoided in the European editions, for it is one of the most obscure and involved quatrains in the collection. I am indebted to Mr Whinfield and Dr E. Denison Ross for my rendering

- 1 ma'lūl significs "sick peopl.," here taken to refer to the morally diseased. It might be translated "the love-sick."
- 2 There is a play upon words here mashgult, besides meaning "occupation" or "commerce," is also a Sufi term, meaning "having spiritual concentration."
- 3 The Darvish is a religious mendicant; the word (like that denoting fakirdom) has a secondary meaning—"poor, indigent " (Vide q 119, post)
- 4 Another instance of Omar's affection for the use of words of similar sound makbūli is a term applied to Darvishes and the Faithful generally, i.e., the accepted (of God)—the Elect

56

This quatrain is P 79, B 241, and is W 215, drawn from this MS, and No 244 of the Lucknow edition. There is an echo of F v 40 in it, but this was, no doubt, inspired by a quatrain in Nicolas' text (N 137, W. 161), as F. himself suggests. I think that the poet intends in this quatrain to compare mortals (carthly bodies) with the planets (heavenly bodies)

r Literally, "and come again with time."

کر در همه عمر خویش خونابه خوری یك قطره ازآن که هست افزون نشود

٥٥

اي دل مطلب وصال معلولي چند مشغول مشو بعشق مشغولي چند پيرامن آمتان درويشان گـرد باشد که شوي قبول مقبولي چند

04

آنها که نلث ریزه ٔ دهر آرایند آیند و روند وباز با دهر آیند رد رئيسدوش و ا روري المروق ال

even though, all thy life, thou sufferest anguish,³ not one drop becomes increased beyond what it is.⁴

55.

O heart, for a while seek not the company of the frail ones; cease for a while to be engrossed with the commerce of love. Frequent the thresholds of the darvishes.—

perhaps thou mayest be accepted for awhile by the accepted people.

56.

Those who adorn the Heavens for a fragment of time, come, and go, and come again as time goes on; 1

2 L, for "in the pocket of," reads "beneath the "?

3 L reads "who in God's own time will rise up." ³ P reads "who until they are annihilated will come again" ⁵

57

This quatrain is P 298 L 313, B 309, and W 236 The meaning is very obscure, and is involved in verbal gymnastics

- 1 Literally, "fallacies"
- 2. This contracted "if" comes from the beginning of the next line
- 3 Literally, "after this"
- 4 These latter two lines depend upon the double meaning of khuris = "cock" and "jar" W reads azjah 1 (meaning "lime") for arra in the last line, and renders the two lines

If they will shut their mouths with lime, like jars, My jar of grape juice I will then forego.

He appends the following note "B reads arra, of which I can make no sense bar fark niham, 'I will put aside', bar fark (line 4), 'on their mouths'". I think he stretches the translator's licence too far here. I cannot hear of any authority for his rendering. In the Paris MS and the Lucknow edition also, it is quite clearly arra, which means simply a cock's comb or a saw. We have here two double puns (so to speak), each word playing on both its meanings in both places. L simplifies line 3 greatly by using "sabū-i-mai" for "khurūs". In line 4 we get hamchu khurusem, the second meaning of khurus, "like a jar," or "like a cock".

5 ie, They wish to kill me (by striking my head with a saw) Dr Denison Ross sends me the following rendering from St. Petersburg "Those who set the foundations of faith upon hypocrisy, who come and draw a distinction between soul and body, if they wish to place a saw upon my head (ie, kill me), 1, after this, will (none the less) place on my head the wine-jar" (ie, will continue to drink wine)

58

This quatrain is P. 141, L. 270, B 266, and W 214, and it is one of the quatrains that inspired F v 26. (The others were C 236 (N 120, W 147) and No 140 of this MS, q v fost)

- We says this quatrain is a hit at the astrologers of the period. Omar plays on the word aswan, which may mean also "a palace"; he refers at once to the inhabitants of earth and to the planetary bodies.
 - 2. Literally, "Are the cause of hesitation to wise men"

اژه (²) در زیر (³
$$)$$
 با حدای دهر آسایند ($)$ سبوی می ($)$) که تا ($)$) که تا بمیرند دگر آیند

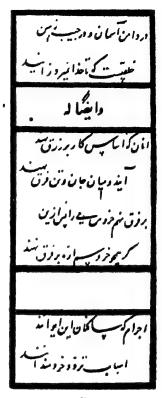

در دامن آسمان و در جیب زمین خلقیست که تا خدا نمیرد زایند

٥٧

آنان که اماس کار بر زرق نهند آیند و میان جان و تن فرق نهند بر فرق نهم خروس مي را پس ازين گر همچو خروسم ارّه بر مرق نهند

٥٨

اجرام که ماکستان این ایوانند استباب نردّد شردمندانند

29 in the skirt of Heaven, and in the pocket of 2 earth, are creatures who, while God dies not, will yet be born.3

57.

Those whose beliefs are founded upon hypocrisy,¹ come and draw a distinction between the body and the soul;

I will put the wine jar on my head, if,² when I have done so,³ they place a comb upon my head,⁵ as if I were a cock.⁴

58.

The bodies which people this heavenly vault,¹ puzzled the learned.²

3 ishan ki muddeber-and - "those who regulate"

59.

This quatrain is C 249, P. 112, B ii 156, L 253, B 250, W. 213, E. C. 16, and contains (inter alia) the germ of F. v. 79, which made its first appearance as F ii 85

What! from his helpless Creature be repaid Pure Gold for what he lent him dross-allay'd— Sue for a Debt he never did contract And cannot answer—Oh, the sorry trade!

- "I am not that man (to whom) fear comes at the idea of my non-existence." Note the use of nim and bim in these two first lines
- 2 C, L, and W read bim for nim, making it "that fear is pleasanter to me than this fear" E C translates practical r as I have from this MS. As we have it here, life here and life hereafter are considered as one vast whole, divided into two halves, existence and non-existence.
 - 3 P reads, "It is a life lent to me in this world." 1

бо

This quatrain is C 135, P 223, B 11 146, L 245, S P 106, N 106, W. 136, and E C 12, and contains the inspiration of F 1 38

One Moment in Annihilation's Waste,
One Moment of the Well of Life to taste—
The Stars are setting, and the Caravan Draws (F 11 49) to the Dawn of Nothing—Oh. make haste!

which is much closer to the original, and finer, I think, than the final form F v 48

A Moment's Halt, a momentary taste
Of Being from the Weil amid the Waste,
And lo! the Phantom Caravan has reach'd
The Nothing it set out from—Oh, make haste!

هان تا سر رهنته خرد گم نکني کایشان که مدبّرند سر گردانند

09

آن مرد نَیم کز عدمم بیم آید کان نیم مرا خوشتر ازین لیم آید جالیست مرا بعاریت داده خدا تسلیم کنم چو وقت تسلیم آید

٦.

این قافله عمر عجب مي گذرد درياب دمي که با طرب مي گذرد

ان آمریشند فرد کمنسیخ کاینان کم قرر ندر کردان
وابنيا له
آن دو بم گزعب می بها م کان بیم را دوشترا زن بیما یُه مناب سر سر مذا
جانت را ماریت دا ده ^{زا} سر تیمرکنزه و متت تیم ایم دا نشا له
وامنیا له ارهٔ مدعب رئیب ی کدر د
درايب ديكه إطرب كارز د

30

Beware lest thou losest the end of the string of wisdom, for even the controllers³ themselves become giddy.

59.

I am not the man to dread my non-existence,¹ for that half seems pleasanter to me than this half;² this is a life which God has lent me,⁸
I will surrender it when the time of surrender comes.

60

This caravan of life passes by mysteriously; mayest thou seize the moment that passes happily!

- 1 harifan = companions, fellow-workers
- 2 B ii., C, P, L, and W, read pish ar pialch, which means the same.

61

This quatrain is W 212 and de T 7 I have not identified it in C, P., or L, which surprises me It is the original of F i 70 (F v 94), which never varied

Indeed, indeed, Repentance oft before
I swore—but was I sober when I swore?
And then and then came Spring, and Rose-in-hand
My threadbare Penitence a-pieces tore

- I Referring to " thee " of the first line
- 2 The "old barren Reason" of F v 55

62

This quatrain is C 196, P 311, B 11 167, L 350, B 346, N 463, W 208, E C 11, and is the original of F v. 15, which varied but inappreciably in the several editions

And much as Wine has played the Infidel
And robb'd me of my Robe of Honour Well,
I wonder often what the Vintners buy
One half so precious as the stuff they sell

The first two lines in all the other texts (C, P, B in, L, N, and W) vary greatly from this, but are, into se, practically identical. The same reading as theirs is found in the Atash Kadah of Azr II is as follows

As long as Venus and the Moon revolve conspicuously in the sky, No one shall see anything better than ruby wine 4

N reads $n\bar{u}b^8$ = pure, for la'l = ruby, and C reads $kh\bar{u}shter$ = sweeter, for behter = better In N this quatram is the last but one, out of its diwan or alphabetical order, by way of apology

- 1 This "veil" of modesty, temperance, or reputation figure largely in Persian belles-lettres. In this MS, we find it in quatraine 61, 62, 65, 101, and 125 Compare also the passage in the Introduction to Sa'adi's Gulistan
 - "He tears not the veil of reputation of his worshippers even for grievous sins, And does not withhold their daily allowance of bread for great crimes "4

ماهي خم فرداي حريفان چه خوري درده قدح باده که شب میگذرد

41 پیرانه سرم عشق تو در دام کشید ورنه زکجا دست من وجام لبید آن توبه که عقل داد جانان بشکست وآن جامه که صبر دوخت ایام درید

77

با آنکه شراب پرده ما بدرید تا جان دارم نخواهم از باده برید

ما ق عنسم فردای دنیا چیزد مدور قدم در در کوشسیکورد ما بنبگا ل
پرانه سرم من تو در دام سید در زر کا دت سرد جام ۲
آن توبه کو عناد اوجاء ن مد وان جار کرصبره وخت!ام
با مکه شراب پرده ما بدر می ناهان دا به خوام از با دیم شر

31

Cup-bearer, why grieve about the to-morrow of thy patrons? 1 give us a cup of wine, 3 for the night wanes.

61.

Being old, my love for thee led my head into a snare; if not, how comes it that my hand holds the cup of date-wine? My sweetheart 1 has destroyed the penitence born of reason, 2 and the passing seasons have torn the garment that patience sewed.

62.

Although wine has rent my veil,¹ so long as I have a soul I will not be separated from wine;

2 This "they belongs, as indicated, to the fourth line

63

This quatrain is only to be found in B ii, where it is No 173, and in this MS, and it is reproduced as W 235. Its sentiment is recognisable in F v 61, and in the great quatuor F v 78.81, but F made no closer use of it.

64.

This quatrain (in varied forms) is C 242, B. ii. 163, L 340, S P. 151, B 336, N. 151, W. 172 In it, as in q 63, we find the sentiment of F. v 79 and perhaps 94 Line 1 of this quatrain is No 2 in B ii, L, N, and W, which begin with line 2 of this quatrain

- r C, B ii, N, and W (ll 2) read dar sar (as at the beginning of line 1), "in my head," a rare expression, though as W. notes, the Persians generally regard the head as the seat of all human passions Compare the line in N 139 (L 386, B 386, a quatrain neither in W, C, nor in this MS), "That hollow head that you see is so sensual"! Note in ll. 1 and 2 the conjunctive pronoun "m" (my) separated from sar and from hef, as is frequent in Persian poetry. L reads "dast" for "hef"
 - 2 B ii , N. and W read "always" for "all the year round"

من در عجبم زمي فروشان کايشان به زين که فروشند چه خواهند خريد ۹۳

چندان كرم ولطف ز آغاز چه بود وان داشتنم در طرب ولاز چه بود اكنون همه در رلج دلم مي كوشي آخر چه گناه كرده ام باز چه بود

40

در سر هوس بتان چون حورم باد بر کف همه ساله آب انگورم باد رَبِي مَرْدِ مِنْ مَا يَا اَنَّ اَلَّهِ مِنْ مَرَا يَا اَنَّ الْمَا اِلَّهِ مَا يَا اَنَّ الْمَا اِلَّهِ مَا ل وانجا له چذان کرم دلطف اعازی ا وان دکشنم دطر و نازی و به اکون سه درخ د می کو بیشی افزی سه درخ د می کو بیشی وانجی کا مکر د. آم از دی و وانجی این می درخ د این از دی و وانجی این می درخ د این از دی در در می می درخ د این درخور در این درخور درخور

32

I am in perplexity concerning vintners, for they²—what will they buy that is better than what they sell?

63.

So much generosity and kindness at the beginning, why was it? and that maintenance of me with delights and blandishments, why was it?

Now Thine only endeavour is to afflict my heart; after all, what wrong have I done—once more, why was it?

64.

In my mind may there be desire for idols houri-like, in my hand may there be, all the year round, the juice of the grape;

- 3 W alone) reads for khuda, izadat, 1 your God L. reads "Certain people tell me God will give repentance"
- 4 N and W. read "gives" 2 for "will not give"; ie, "(even if) he gives it, I will none of it."
 - 5. duram bad answers here to the exclamation "procul esto!"

65.

This quatrain is C 172, L 312, S P. 142, B. 308, N 142, and W 165, and it contains the germ (inter alia) of F. v. 93-95, inculcating the vanity of regrets over soiled reputation or lost honour, and the futility of repentance.

- 1. The Wuzu ablution, or ceremonial washing before prayers, which consists in washing first the hands, then the in ide of the mouth, then throwing water on the forehead, washing the whole face, two arms, and lastly the feet (Steingass)
 - 2. Vulg, "to whitewash" = nikū kerdan 8
- 3. N. and W for "Be happy" read "give wine, for now this veil," etc 4 L. is identical with this MS, and C begins "Drink wine, for this veil," etc 5
- 4 N appends a note to the effect that this is an epigram against the fatalism of the Qur'ān with regard to pre-ordained punishment, which the Sufis deny as being contrary to the infinite mercy of God 66.

This quatram in this identical form occurs only in this MS. Q. 89 $(q \ v, post)$ is, however, so closely allied to it as to suggest that one or the other has been added by a later scribe Compare also q. 146

- I A Persian acquaintance of mine reads this gul (rose) instead of gil (clay) Both readings are within the spirit of the poem, but the weight of evidence is, I think, on the side of gul. Vule note 1, q. 35.
 - 2 khvär kerdan = to despise.

(1) ايزدى
$$(2)$$
 بد مد (3) نكو كسردن (4) مي ده كة كنون پرده (5) مي نوش كة اين (6) كويند كسان مرا خدا توبة دهاد

گویند بین خدا تـرا تـوبه دهـاد او خود ندهد من نکنم دورم باد

40

در میکده جز بمی وضو نتوان کرد وان نام که زشت شد نکو نتوان کرد خوش باشکه این پرده ٔ مستورثی ما بدریده چنان شد که رفو نتوان کرد

44

دیدم بسر عمارتی مردی فرد کو گل به لکدمیزد وغوارش می کرد

33

they say to me, "May God 3 give thee repentance!"

He himself will not give 4 it; I will none of it; let it be far off! 5

65.

In the tavern thou canst not perform the Ablution save with wine, and thou canst not purify a tarnished reputation; be happy, for this veil of temperance of ours is so torn that it cannot be repaired.

66.

I saw upon the terrace of a house a man, alone, who trampled upon the clay, holding it in contempt; 2

- 3 This expression, which occurs similarly in qq 89 and 146, refers to the language of the unknown world. Steingass gives as a rendering "language expressed by one's condition," therefore "as well as it could," but the rendering given here is more correct in this poem
 - 4 lakad khūrdan, literally "to eat kicks "

67

This quatrain is P 230, L 291, S P 153, B, 287, N 153, W. 174, and is the original of F v 6

And David's lips are lockt, but in divine High-piping Pehlevi with "Wine! Wine! Wine!
"Red Wine!" the Nightingale cries to the Rose
That sallow cheek of hers to' incarnadine

The reference to "David's lips" comes not from this MS, but from M, l. 625, and C 89 (et passim), David being, in Oriental poetry, the type of a sweet singer, as is Joseph of male beauty Cf M, l 3813. Compare the Gulistän (ch v, story 10), "That David-like throat had changed, his Joseph-like beauty had faded "I Persian poetry is filled with references to the love of the Nightingale for the Rose Cf M, ll 742 o Vud q 135, note 2 (Terminal Essay, p 310) Binning (vude p xxv, note 2) observes that the Persian nightingale arrives from its migration with the roses in April, and disappears with them at the end of the summer (Vol 11, p 312)

- I Literally, " the cloud "
- 2 Literally, "from the cheek of the rose-garden"
- 3 Pehlevi (or Pahlawi) was the language of the ancient Persians F calls it in a note, "the old heroic Sanskrit," but this is a philological error L, N, and W read ba zabān-i-hāl, as in the preceding quatrain Vide q 66, note 3
- 4 Yellow is the colour indicative, in Persian literature, of illness, answering to our word "sallow" Compare q 69, line 2 Cf. Vita Nuova, viii "Lo viso mostra lo color del core"

68

This quatrain is C 151, P. 336, L 277, S P 156, B 273, N 156, W 175, E C 31 The last two lines give us the origin of the last two in F v 15

And those who husbanded the Golden grain, And those who flung it to the winds like Rain, Alike to no such aureate Earth are turn'd As, buried once, Men want dug up again

- r E C translates "my," but sar-at can only mean "your head " P, C., L, N, and W, for bar sar-at, read ghammahāt 2 = "your sorrows"
 - 2 Literally, "a night attack," leading to the inference in line 4.
 - 3 P, L, and W are identical with this; C. and N read the line: "Order, oh Idol, some rose-coloured wine"
- (1) أن حلق داودي متغير مذهدة وجممال يوسفي بربان آمدة (2) عمهات (3) فرماى بتا تا مى

آن کِل بزبان حال با او مي گفت ماکن که چو من لکد بسي خواهي خورد

. 40

روزیست خوش وهوا نه گرمست نه مبرد ابر از رخ گلزار همی شوید گرد بلبل برنان پهلوي با گل زرد فریاد همي باید خورد

41

زان پیش که بر سرت شبیخون آرند فرمای که تا باده گلگون آرند آن کلیز بان حال اور سند ماکر کو من کدی خواسے خوا وابیعاً له بوزیت نوش موان کرنش شرا برزیت نوش موان کرنش و مرد برزیت نوش موان کرند و میرو بان میسا مون در وابیعاً له وابیعاً له زان پش کم رسرت شیخون را زان پش کم رسرت شیخون را زان پش کم رسرت شیخون را

34 that clay said to him in mystic language:8—

"Be still, for like me thou wilt be much trampled upon."4

67.

It is a pleasant day, and the weather is neither hot nor cold; the rain has washed the dust from the faces of the roses; the nightingale in the Pehlevi tongue to the yellow rose cries eyer:—"Thou must drink wine!"

68.

Ere that fate makes assault 2 upon thy head, 1 give orders that they bring thee rose-coloured wine; 3

- 4 Literally, "gold" These two lines refer to the practice in the East of burying treasure to hide it when a night attack (line 1) of dacoits or robbers is anticipated Omar whimsically compares this practice with the resurrection of the body after death, which he doubts
- 5 E C translates "poor brain-sick fool!" which would aptly translate I's variant, which, however, the had not seen

69

This quatrain is C 158, I 212, B ii 199, L 308, S P. 109, N. 109, and W. 139

It is the original of F v 91

Ah! with the Grape my fading life provide, And wash the body whence the life has died, And lay me, shrouded in the living Leaf, By some not unfrequented Garden-side; which made its first appearance as F 1 67, with the last two lines

And in the Winding-sheet of Vine-leaf wrapt, So bury me by some weet Garden-side

Cf the story of Hippocrates in M, Il 2360-2364. "When Hippocrates was at the point of death one of his pupils said to him, 'Oh Master, when we have washed and shrouded thy body, where shall we bury thee?""⁵

- 1. zinhar = Beware! C, L, N, and W begin, "Oh Friends! sustain me," etc 1
- 2 Compare q 67, note 4 C, B it, L, N, and W read "cheek" for "face" kah-ruba means, literally, "attracting straws"; hence "amber," the ηλεκτρον of the Greeks Cf Gulshan i $r\bar{a}z$, l 194 "The Truth, as amber, attracts thee like a straw" β
- 3 N and W. read chun murdah shavam, and C and L. read chun fawt shavam, which mean the same. B. 11 is identical with this

70

This quatrain occurs only in this MS (of those under consuc ation) It is probably a casually interpolated address to Malik Shab

(1) اي همنفسان مرا ز مي (2) چپره (3) چون مردهٔ شوم (4) چون فوت شوم (5) گفت چون بقراط در برج او فتان (6) حقیقت کپر با ناات تو کاهست بود بهاگردي بگفت اي اوستاد چون کفن سازيم و تن پاکت کبيم در کدامين جاي در خاکت کبيم تو زر له ای خافل نادان که ترا در خاك نهند وباز بیرون آرلد

্ ។৭

رنهار مرا زجام مي قوټ کنيد وين چهره کهربا چو ياقوت کنيد چون در گذرم بني بشوئيد مـرا وز چوب رزم لخته تابوت کنيد

٧

شاها فلکت بهسروي تعیین کرد وز بهر تو اسپ پادشاهي زین کرد

35 thou art not treasure,⁴ O heedless dunce,⁵ that thee they hide in the earth and then dig up again.

69.

Take heed 1 to stay me with the wine-cup, and make this amber face 2 like a ruby; when I die, 3 wash me with wine, and out of the wood of the vine make the planks of my coffin.

70.

O Shah! destiny appointed thee to sovereignty, and saddled for thee the horse of empire;

I to in line 3, and na-nihād in line 4, go together Literally, "until he did not place "

71.

This quatram is 1 119, B ii 208, L 294, S P 164, B 290, N 164, W. 182, and is No 8 of de T's examples Cf M, 1 3316

> The true lover must be like fire There can be no second thoughts to the true lover, etc 1

- I Literally, "it has no water" One of the many figurative uses of $\bar{a}b$ "It has no splendorr," vulgarly speaking, of "it doesn't hold water." Cf M, 1 1749 "I am helpless," literally, "My liver holds no water "2
 - 2 khābish, the third pers sing termination sh governs all the antecedents
- 3 Cf. M, 1 3167. "Can be who stares the torment and passion of love find rest by day or night?"8 Cf also I, Il 3499-3509, the story of "The Sleepy Lover," and Purgatorio, xvin 103 "Ratto, ratto, chè il tempo non si perda per poco amor"

72

This quatrain is C 176, B ii 211, L. 357, S P 175, B 353, N 175, and W. 190 In it we recognise the sentiment of F v. 27 (concerning which, however, vide post, q 121), and also I v 32

> There was the Door to which I found no Key: There was the Veil through which I might not see, etc.

Compare Tennyson's lines in "In Memoriam"

So runs my dream, but what am I? An infant crying in the night. An infant crying for the light, And with no language but a cry

1 10, the orbit of human understanding

- (2) هيه آبي در جکر (3) هر که درد عشق دارد سوز هم سب کجا یابد قرار و روز هم

تا در حرکت سمند زرین سم تو ہر گل لنہد پای زمین سیمین کود

عشقی که مجازی بود آبش نبود چون آتش ليم مرده تابش لبود عاشق باید که سال وماه و شب وروز آرام وقرار وغورد وخوابش نبود

٧٢

کس مشکل اسرار ازلرا نکشاد کس یك قدم از دایره بیرون نبهاد 36

when thy golden-hoofed charger moved,1 setting foot upon the clay, the earth became gilded.

A love that is imaginary has no value; 1 like a fire half-dead, it gives no heat. A true lover, throughout the month, and year, and night, and day,8 takes neither rest, nor peace, nor food, nor sleep.2

No one has solved the tangled secrets of eternity, no one has set foot beyond the orbit,1

- 2 Literally, "when I look " C., B ii, L, N., and W read man mi-nigaram, 1" I see."
- 3 Literally, "impotence is in the hand of," etc. Cf. Paradiso, vii. 62: "Molto si mira e poco si discorne"

73.

This quatrain is C 179, L. 256, S P 176, B 253, N 176, W. 191, and we find in it the germ of F v 41, which made its first appearance as F. ii 55.

Perplext no more with Human or Divine, To-morrow's tangle to the winds resign, And lose your fingers in the tresses of The Cypress-slender Minister of Wine.

Cf. Paradiso, xv 146. "il mondo fallace il cui amor molte anime deturpa."

- I N and W, for "live thou," read "that thou mayst be" 2 L. reads schan benure, 3" worldly empire"
- 2 Vide the original MS The transcription of this word is doubtful, but the best sense is made with begusil C, L, N., and W. so read it, and I have so transcribed it
- 3 This line varies considerably in the texts. N. and W read "Be happy in that thou art (for) this revolving sky "4 C reads "Be happy, for bereft of me and thee, these months and years." L. reads "Be happy a moment, inasmuch as this revolving sky "6
 - 4 C. and L. follow this MS. N. and W. for "days" read "revolutions."?

74.

This quatrain occurs only in this MS, and is reproduced as W. 211, and this and q 82 contain that flower-sentiment which one traces in F. v. 40, which made its first appearance in a slightly modified form as F ii. 43

1. nestrin has many flower-meanings, one finds it used to mean narcissus principally, but also dog-rose, white rose, and clover.

(1) من مینگرم $\binom{2}{2}$ که باشي $\binom{8}{2}$ جهان بمیري $\binom{4}{2}$ خوشباش چنانکه هست این دور فلك $\binom{5}{2}$ خوشباش که بور از من و تو این مه و سال $\binom{8}{2}$ خوش باش دمی چنانکه این دور فلك $\binom{7}{2}$ دوري

چون بنگرم از مبتدی واز استاد عهزمست بدست هرکه از مادر زاد

٧٣

كمكن طمع ازجهان ومي زي خرسند وز نيك وبد زمانه بگسل پيوند مي بركف و زلف دلبري گير كه زود هم بگذرد ونمانند اين روزي چند since, so far as I can see,2 from tyro to teacher, impotent are the hands3 of all men born of woman.

VP

گردون زمحاب نسترن مي ريزد گوڻي که شکوفه در چس مي ريزد پون بکرم زسدی داز کها و بخرت بهت سرکداز اور کرن طها زجان دی زی ترکید وزیک و درز، نیک پری مرکب و زمان داین روزی مرکبز دو را داین روزی وایشا له وایشا له کرد و دن دی بریکرکرو

37

73.

Set limits to thy desire for worldly things and live 1 content, sever 2 the bonds of thy dependence upon the good and bad of life, take wine in hand and play with the curls of a loved one; for quickly 3 all passeth away-and how many of these days4 remain?

74.

The heavens rain down blossoms 1 from the clouds, thou mayest say that they shed blossoms into the garden;

2 W reads this to mean a violet jug, but I fail to find his authority

75

This quatrain is C 202, P 324, B ii 234, L 356, S P 182, B 352, N 182, and W 197 It contains a humorous protest against the doctrine of predestination, whose highest expression we find in F v 80 There is also here a strong suggestion of F v. 61, which made its first appearance as F ii 63

Why, be this Juice the growth of God, who dare Blaspheme the twisted tendril as a Snare?

A Plessing, we should use it, should we not?

And if a Curse—why, then, Who set it there?

- I ie, "sensible"
- 2. N and W for man binazd read \bar{n} nazd-1-khuda, that (wine-drinking of mine), etc
- 3 With the exception of B ii the other texts read az azal,2 from earliest eternity, for bi azal, on the Day of Creation. Concerning azal, vide post, q 107, note 1.

76

This quatrain is C. 173, P 189, B ii 233, L 315, B 311, and is No 9 of dc T 's examples We find in it the idea conveyed by F v 24.

Ah! make the most of what we yet may spend, Before we, too, into the Dust descend; Dust into Dust, and under Dust to lie, Sans Wine, sans Song, sans Singer, and—sans End

Compare Herrick's verse "To Sappho," which might also be appended as a parallel to qq 5, 35, 73 and 97

"Let us now take time and play,
Love and live here while we may;
Drink rich wine, and make good cheere,
While we have our being here:
For once dead, and laid i'th grave,
No return from thence we have."

در جام چو سوسن مي گلگون ريزم کز ابر بنفشه گون سبن مي ريزد

۷٥

مي ميخورم وهركه چو من اهل بود مي خوردن من بنزد او سهل بود مي خوردن من حق بازل مي دانست گر مي نخورم علم خدا جهل بود

٧4

مگذار که غصه در کناری گیرد واندوه مصال روزگاری گیرد 38

in a lily-like cup I pour rosy wine, as the violet clouds 2 pour down jessamine.

75.

I drink wine, and every one drinks who like me is worthy of it; my wine-drinking is but a small thing to Him; ² God knew, on the Day of Creation, that I should drink wine; if I do not drink wine, God's knowledge was ignorance.

76

Do not allow sorrow to embrace thee, nor an idle grief to occupy thy days;

1. Vide q 32, note 2, and compare also q. 45. Line 3 in L reads, "Drink wine! on the verge of the verdure and of the flowing stream" P reads, "Forsake not, for a moment, the bank of the river and the margin of the stream." B, 11 combines these two readings. 5

77.

This quatrain is C 165, P. 283, L 305, B 301, S P 179, N 179, W. 194, and is the original of F v. 59:

The Grape that can with Logic absolute
The Two-and-seventy jarring Sects contute;
The sovereign Alchemist that in a trice
Life's leaden metal into Gold transmute

- I Literally, "bear away." P. reads, "the calamities of time "4
- 2 ie, wine.
- 3 Literally, "you drink"
- 4 P, N, and W. read, yek men, one measure As to men, vide q. 155, note 2.

78.

This quatrain is C. 174, P 282, B ii. 228, L 243, S P 180, B 240, N 180, W. 195 Compare Herrick's verse.

"... I love to have it smirke and shine,
'Tis sin I know, 'tis sin to throtle Wine
What Mad-man's he, that when it sparkles so,
Will coole his flames, or quench his fires with snow?'

مگذار کتاب ولب یار ولب کشت زان پیش که خاك درکنادت گیرد

٧V

مي خور كه زنو كثرت علّت ببرد والديشه هفتاد و دو ملّت ببرد پرهيز مكن زكيميائي كه ازو يك جرعه خوري هزار علّت ببرد

V۸

مي گرچه حرامست ولي تاکه خورد آنگاه چه مقدار ودگر با که خورد کذارگاب وب ایروات زان بشرک خاک درکارترکر، وافعاً له وافیات عتب برد وافیت منا در دولت برد رحب یک زکمیا ب کازد برحب یک زکمیا ب کازد کی جده خدری برا رعنب برد ای کرچه حواست و آن کوفر د ایکا چه متب دارود کرافرد ایکا چه متب دارود کرافرد ایکا چه متب دارود کرافرد

39 forsake not the book, and the lover's lips, and the green bank of the field,¹ ere that the earth enfold thee in its bosom.

77.

Drink wine, that will banish¹ thy abundant woes, and will banish thought of the Seventy-two Sects; avoid not the alchemist,² for, from him, thou takest³ one draught,⁴ and he banishes a thousand calamities.

78.

Even though wine is forbidden, for all that it depends upon who drinks it, and then in what quantity, and also with whom he drinks it;

- I This line varies very much in the texts. C and P and B ii, slightly varying, read, "Whenever you have collected these four conditions" L is the same, substituting $\bar{a}n$ - $g\bar{a}h^2$ for har $g\bar{a}h$. N. ends the hine $\bar{a}mad\ jam'$, "are collected"
- 2 In L the fourth line is the second repeated In B ii and N this line reads, "After that who would drink save wise men" 4 79.

This quatrain is P 281, B 11 227, L 293, B 289, and is not elsewhere It recalls the lines in the Gulistan (ch 1, story 2)

- "Many fame is men have been buried underground,
 Of whose existence upon earth not a trace has remained,
 And that old corpse which had been surrendered to the earth
 Was so consumed by the soil that not a bone remains"
- Note the double preposition by Arāk dar, etc.
- 2 L reads khumrah 6 a synonym
- 3 L reads 'umr = existence

80

This quatrain is C 204, P. 157, L 272, S P. 186, B 268, N. 186, and W. 201, and has been referred to as one of the originals of F v 4, in the notes to q 13, ante

- I Literally, "zephyrs" C, L, N, and W. read sebzah, verdure.
- 2 This is line 4 in the other texts, and varies considerably C. reads, "In the eyes of the clouds (or, in hope of rain) the veils are parted "8 L, N, and P read dida," synonym for chashm-ha. The use of the word chashm, meaning "hopes" and "eyes," imparts obscurity to this line L and N make their meaning clear

```
(1) هر گاه که این چهار سرط حمع آید (2) امکاه (3) آمد جمع (4) بس مي بعزاز مردم داما که خورد (5) بس مامور که زیر زمین دفن کرده امد کر هستیش برويّ زمین یك نشان نمامد و ان پیر السفرا که سپردند زیر خاك خاکش چمان بغورد کزو استخوان نماند (8) در چشم سحاب پردهها بکشایند (9) دیده
```

هرگاه که این مه شرط شد رامست بگو پس مي لغورد مردم دانا که خورد

٧9

مي خور كه تنت بغاك در ذرّه شود خاكت پس ازان بياله وجرّه شود از دوزخ واز بهشت فارغ مي باش عاقل بچنين خبر جرا غرّه شود

٨

وقتست که از صبا جهان آرایند وز چشم سحاب چشمها بکشایند

رکا ، کو آین سرط شدر آبجو بی پیخرد در در در اناکور در واخیا له نخور که ت بخاک در ذرجود خاکت پرازان پادخوب شرد از دوزخ وازشت فارغ کا عا قابحت پرخرداغ نی شو و عا قابحت پرخرداغ نی شو و عا قابحت پرخرداغ نی شو و ما خیا له در نرجم عاب پرخمانجا نید

10 these three conditions being as they should be; say! who drinks wine if a wise man does not do so?

79

Drink wine, for thy body becomes atoms in the earth, thine earth, after that, becomes goblets and jars; be thou heedless of hell and heaven, why should a wise man be deceived about such things?

80.

Now is the time when by the spring-breezes the world is adorned, and in hope of rain it opens its eyes,2

3 C, L, N, and W for "hands" read saftān, 1 te, "Moses-like," so that kef retains its commoner meaning, "hand" This is line 2 in the other texts.

4 kef means froth, or white scum, as well as "the palm of the hand," and in this MS seems to require the former meaning Sed quare.

5 Compare the passage in Sa'adi's "Badīya". "It is the breath of Jesus, for in that fresh breath and verdure the dead earth is reviving"

6 This probably refers to what is known in eastern and southern Europe as the "arbre de Judée," or Judas tree, which suddenly breaks out in early spring in an eruption of pink or white blossom, like the almond, rather than the hawthorn as suggested by Fitzgerald Compare Binning, vol. i, p. 223

81

This quatrain is C 180, P 231, B ii 241, L 367, B 363, S P 188, N 188, and W 203, and the first two lines suggested F v 39, that made its first appearance as F ii 42 in a slightly varied form

And not a drop that from our Cups we throw For Earth to drink of, but may steal below To quench the fire of Anguish in some eye There hidden—far beneath, and long ago

In line 4 we get the suggestion for F v 60, where he describes wine as

The mighty Mahmud, Allah-breathing Lord, That all the misbeheving and black Horde Of Fears and Sorrows that infest the Soul, Scatters before him with his whirlwind Sword

In F I a note is appended to the effect that this refers to Mahmoud the Gaznavi, who conquered India, which was peopled by swarthy idolaters Fitz-Gerald took the imagery of this quatrain as a whole from a story in M (II 3117-3138)

- r N and W for be-khāk read be-jām² reading "pours into the cup," which robs the distich of much of its poetic force. I cannot trace their authority in the MSS. As to the custom of throwing a little wine upon the earth, like the Greek libation, before drinking, see F's note. F had also before him C 296 (N 247, W 286, and not in this MS), whose last two lines read. "If your hand holds a cup of ruby wine, spill one drop and drink to the dregs." 8
- 2 C reads "in the eye of someone," 4 and B ii and L "in my eye" Cf M, 1 2342 (Terminal E-say, p 312)
 - 3 bad, poetic form, variation of badeh = wine

82

This quatrain is only to be found in the Paris MS, where it is 152, at B. ii 244, and in L, where it is 271 (B 267), and whence it was reproduced as W. 210, and in the opening lines of this and q 74 we find the echo of the opening lines of F 40

As then the Tulip for her morning sup Of Heav'nly vintage from the soil looks up, etc

1. Literally, "the face of the tulip holds the dew" Compare Hāfiz "The dewdrops trickle over the faces of the tulips", 5 and, again, "Come, Sāki, for the cup of the tulip is full of wine" 6

(1) صفتان (2) بجام (3) جامي ً ز مثي لعل گرت دست دهد يكعطره رها كن و تمامس مينوش (4) كسي (5) ميچكد زاله ىر رح لاله (6) ساقي بيا كه سد قدح لاله ىر رمي (5)

موسي دمتان ز شاخ كف بسايند عيسى نفسان زخاك بيرون آيند

٨١

هر جرعه که ماقیش بهاك افشاند در دیدهٔ گـرم آتش غـم بنشاند مبعـان الله تو باد می پنداری آبی که زصد درد دلت برهاند

44

هر صبح که روي لاله شبنم گيرد بالاي بنفشه در چس خم گيرد

the hands of Moses appear like froth upon the bough, the breath of Jesus comes forth from the earth.

81.

Every draught that the Cup-bearer scatters upon the earth 1 quenches the fire of anguish in some afflicted eye.²

Praise be to God! thou realizest that wine 3 is a juice that frees thy heart from a hundred pains.

82.

Every morning the dew bedecks the faces of the tulips,¹ the crests of the violets in the garden are bent downward;

2 Literally, "from the rosebud pleasure comes to me"

. ie, "whose petals are closed" W, copying L, begins the line, "(Even) if i gathers," etc., which is better than this $k\bar{u}$, which is a contraction of ki, \bar{u} .

83

Nota — The first line of 83 is line 1 of W 205, the rest of which is 84, and vice versa.

This quatrain is only to be found in this MS, whence it became W 234. This and 84 are the originals of F. v 101, which varied in all the editions F v, however, is as good as any, for us.

And when like her, oh Saki, you shall pass Among the Guests Star-scattered on the Grass, And in your joyous errand reach the Spot Where I made One—turn down an empty Glass

The first two lines come more especially from q 84

84

This quatrain is P 226, B ii 245, L 290 (as here), S. P. 191, B 286, N 192, and W 205 (with line 1 of W 234) Here again we remark the coincidence of two apparently connected quatrains coming together in a diwan arrangement

انصاف مرا ز غنچه خوش مي آيد کــو دامن خويشتن فــراهم گيرد

۸۳

یاران چـو باتفاق دیدار کــید باید که ز دوست یاد بسیار کنید چـون بادهٔ خوشگوار نوشید بهم نوبت چو بما رسد نکونسار کنید

46

یاران بموافقت چو میعاد کنید خودرا بجمال بکدگر شاد کنید انیاف راز فی خرش کی یه کو دامن خرستی فرام کرد اران چه آمان دید اکر سبد بایک زورت، دیب بارکید بایک فرورت، دیب بارکید فرف و نوکم و نوب بید برم فرت مرما رسد کمون کرنید واخی اد فران بوانت چسیا و کپد فرورا بحال کمی کرش و کبید فرورا بحال کمی کرش و کبید

42 verily, most pleasing to me is the rosebud ² which gathers its skirts close around itself.³

83.

Friends, when ye hold a meeting together, it behoves ye warmly to remember your friend; when ye drink wholesome wine together, and my turn comes, turn a goblet upside down.

84.

Friends, when with consent ye make a tryst together, and take delight in one another's charms,

- r mughanah means anything connected with the Mughs or Magians (i.e., the Guebres, or Fire-worshippers), and came to be a synonym for age, superiority, excellence, in which sense it is used here. S. Rousseau has a very interesting note upon the history of this word at p. 176 of his "Flowers of Persian Literature" (London, 1801)
- 2 du'a means here the invocation, or salutation before drinking (Cf. "Your health!" and "toasts" in general)

85

In this identical form this quatrain is not in any of the texts under consideration, but in a more or less varied form it is C 171, P. 332, L 310, S P. 193, and N 194 A quatrain identical in sentiment, but quite different in expression, is C 221, B ii 143, L 389, and N 191, and I do not find either of these in W Compare q 139

- 1 C, P, and L read this line, "One Cup is worth a thousand men and their religions 1 dit-\(\bar{u}\)-din = "heart and faith," is a common Eastern phrase Cf. M, 1 1707, "the value of an hundred lives "5
- 2 Whether the scribes who made my copies of C and P erred or not, I cannot tell, but they read members thunned "(a thousand) such empires." Perhaps the nun is interpolated. Sed quare, it being in both MSS
- 3 In C , L , and N this line reads, "What is there on the face of earth sweeter than wine "?

86

This quatrain is P 20, B ii 250, B 410, and W 256, taken from this and L 414. The first line of L is the second of this, the second of L being the first of this slightly altered

I L reads, "Sever thyself from the bonds of wife and children." 4 Cf. Gulshan 1 + āz, Il. 944-956, an absolutely identical passage Also Qur'an, ch 64, v 15 "Oh ye believers! your wives and children are nothing but dangerous enemies to you, against which ye must be on your guard" (PN, p 229)

(1) یک جام هزار صرد با دین ارزد (2) مملکت بسین (3) در روی زمین جیست ز باده حوشتر (4) خودرا تو ز بند رن (5) صد جان ارزد این

ساقي چو مي مغانه بر كف گيرد بيهاره فالانارا بدعا ياد كنيد

۸۵

يك جام شراب صد دل و دين ارزد يك جرعه مي مملكت چين ارزد جز بادة لعل نيست در روي زمين الذي كه هزار جان شيرين ارزد

اورا خـواهي از زن و فرزند ببر مردانه در از خويش و پيوند ببر

14

4

when the Cup-bearer takes round in his hand the Mugh¹ wine, remember a certain helpless one in your benediction.²

85.

One cup of wine is worth a hundred hearts and religions, one draught of wine is worth the empire of China, saving ruby wine there is not, on the face of earth, any acrid thing that is worth a thousand sweet souls.

86.

If thou desirest Him, be separated from wife and children, bravely move thine abode from thy relations and friends;

2 L uses the word $sadd-t-r\bar{u}h^{-1}$ for $band-t-r\bar{u}h$ Compare New Testament (Matthew viv. 21, et passim). "If thou wouldst be perfect, go, sell that thou hast and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven."

87.

This quatrain is B it 258, L. 403, S P 202, B 399, N 203, and E C 9

- I $\bar{u}z\bar{u}da$, which means "free, noble, venerable," is often used in poetry to mean the hly, and also the cypress, which is quite within the sentiment of the poem
- z=a'ahm-i- $kh\bar{u}k$ means equally the earth or the human body L and N, read, "since thou knowest that all creatures are earth" ²
- 3 N reads, "that passes in two days" 5 One may compare these lines with the Gulistan (Introduction)
 - "The intention of this design was that it should survive, Because I see no stability in my existence"4

Cf Vita Nuova, xxiii "frale vita, 'I suo durar com' è leggiero!"

88

I have not found this quatrain in any of the texts under consideration. It contains something of the sentiment of F v. 60, quoted sub q. 81

(۱) سد راء (^۱) چون میدانی که عالمی امده حاك (^۱) که دو روز بگذرد (4) فرض نقشیست كر ما باز ماند . كه هستيرا نمي بينم بفائي هر چیز که هست بند راهست ترا بابند چگونه ره روی بند ببر

۸۷

آن لعل در آبگینهٔ ماده بیار آن مونس و محرم هر آزاده بیار چون مي داني که مدّت عالم خاك باديست که زود بگذرد باده بیار

۸۸

بر خیز و دوای این دل تنگ بیار آن بادهٔ مشکبوی گلرنگ بیار

رچرکات بدرا پت ترا باندیکه: ره رده نیک
واینگا د
آن مو دابجیت ما دباید آن موزر دمحسد مرآزا دبایر پرن دوان کو خت فکا اوریک زود کمذر داو و دانیگا د
برخیزد دوای آین و که کسیایه آن دو در داری این و کارکسیار آن دو در در در کارکسیار

44 whatever is, is an hindrance on the road for thee, how canst thou journey with these hindrances?—remove them!

87.

Bring me that ruby in a clear glass, bring me that companion and intimate of all excellent people: 1 since thou knowest that the duration of this earthly world 2 is a wind that quickly passes by, 3—bring me wine.

88.

Arise! bring physic to this oppressed heart, bring that musk-scented and rose-coloured wine;

I Literally, "the ingredients of the antidote" It is interesting to note that Steingass defines mufarrih" a species of exhibitating medicine in which rubies are an ingredient", this accords with line 4, and the whole sentiment of Omar 89.

This quatrain is C 261, P 100, B ii 274, L 411, S P 210, B 407, N. 211, and W. 252 Compare with it q 66, and also q 140 It is the original of F v 37, the first version of which, F i 36, is even closer to the Persian

For in the Market-place one Dusk of Day

I watch'd the I'otter thumping his wet clay

And with its all obliterated Tongue

It murmur'd "Gently, Brother, gently, pray!"

F in his note tells the story told by the Taj-i-dar in the Mantik-ut-tair of Ferid-ud-din 'Attir of the prophet who found that the same spring water that was sweet in itself became bitter in an earthenware cup (M, Il 2345-2359) To whom the cup spoke as follows

The Clay that I am rude of, once was Man, Who dying, and resolved into the same Obliterated Earth, from which he came Was for the Potter dug, and chased in turn Through long vicissitude of Bowl and Urn But howsoever moulded, still the pain Of that first mortal Anguish would retain, And cast and re-cast, for a Thousand years Would turn the sweetest Water into Tears

Fitzgerald's Translation, L. R., vol. 11, p. 467

- r N for "fresh" read, " $l\bar{a}nk$ " = a heap or lump L read, $p\bar{a}nah$ ", a piece
 - 2 Vide note 3, q 66
 - 3 L for "well" reads garāmi a -- reverently

90

I find this quatram only in P 200, S P 196, and N 100, which are identical with it

ا تارله (") پاره (3) کرامي

اجـزاي مفرح غــم ار ميغواهي ياقوت مي و بريشم چنگ بـيار

. ۸۹

دي كوزهگري بديدم اندر بازار بر تازه گلي لكد همي زد بسيار وآن گل بزبان حال با او مي گفت من همچو تو بوده ام مرا نيكو دار

9.

زان مي كه حيات جاودانست بهور مرمايه الدّت جاوانيست بهور

45

if thou desirest the elements 1 of sorrow's antidote, bring ruby wine and the silk stringed lute.

89.

I saw a potter in the bazaar yesterday, he was violently pounding the fresh¹ clay, and that clay said to him, in mystic language,² "I was once like thee—so treat me well." ³

90.

Drink of that wine that is eternal life, it is the stock-in-trade of youthful pleasure, drink!

91

This quatrain is C 260, B ii 275, L 410, S P 199, B 406, N 200, and W 244 All vary more or less In L lines 2 and 4 are transposed. Cf Qur'an ii 172 "There is no piety in turning your faces to the east or west, but he is pious who believeth in God and disburseth his wealth to the needy." Cf Dante, Contito, iv 28 "Iddio non vuole religioso di noi se non il cuore"

- τ . The $\it sunnat$ are the Traditions of Muhammad supplementing the Qur'an, and held in almost equal reverence
- 2 The farcant are the ordinances of God. Therefore the word hakk, which in the other texts takes the place of the objective $r\bar{a}$, is pleonastic. N reads the line, "Of religious exercises perform (only) those commanded by God." ²
 - 3 Literally, "mouthful," ie, share your goods with others.
- 4 N and W read, "and do not seek to afflict anyone"? C reads, "and do not afflict (your) fellow-mortals" 4 In B ii and L the line reads, "Do not make designs upon the life or property of anyone" 5
 - W. for dar 'uhda reads hem wa'da,6 a synonym implying obligation
- 6 Compare P N chap 55 "Offer to the poor, oh my son, a portion of what thou possessest, whether thy possessions be small or great " 7

92

I do not find this quatram in C, P, L, S, P, N, or W, but it is B ii. 280 identically

- 1 magar expresses doubt, and answers to the phrase "sed quare"
- 2 ic, the Cup

موزنده چو آتش است لیکن غمرا مارنده چو آب زندگانیست بهور

91

منّس مکن وفریضهارا بگزار وین لقمه که داری زکسان باز مدار غیبت مکن ودل کسیرا مازار در عهده آن جهان منم باده بیار

94

مي سرخ کل وقدح کلابست مگر در درج بلور لعل نابست مگر 46

it burns like fire, but sorrows it makes like the water of life-drink!

91.

Follow not the Traditions,¹ and leave alone the Commands,² withhold not from anyone the morsel³ that thou possessest:⁶ neither slander, nor afflict the heart of anyone,⁴

I guarantee you the world beyond—bring wine!

92

Wine is rose-red, and the cup is filled with the water of roses,

—maybe,1

in the crystal casket 2 is a pure ruby,-maybe,

93

This also I do not find in the texts under consideration, with the exception of B ii, where it is No 283 It contains the inspiration of F v 93-4.

Indeed the Idols I have loved so long Have done my credit in this World much wrong Have drown'd my Glory in a shallow Cup, And sold my reputation for a Song

Indeed, indeed, Repentance oft before I swore but was I sober when I swore?

1 Compare Hāfiz "Let us break again our vows of repentance in the midst of the roses" And also the passage which occurs in his first ode "All my actions, the outcome of my desire to satisfy my yearnings, have dragged me down to an evil reputation"

94

This quatrain is C 280, P 31, B 11. 291, L 443, S P 230, B 439, N 231, W 270, and 18 No 27 of E C 's specimens It is the original of F v 69

But helpless Pieces of the Game He plays Upon this Chequer-board of Nights and Days, Hither and thither moves, and checks, and slays, And one by one back in the Closet lays

The first two lines in F i 49 read

Tis all a Chequer-board of Nights and Days Where Destiny with Men for Pieces plays.

In all the other texts under consideration, except the Paris MS and B n, the first two lines are transposed. Vide note to q 108, fost τ Literally, "In the manner of truth, and not in the manner of metaphor"

(i) تا مشكىيم توبة دگر درميان گل

(2) همه کارم رحود کامی به بد بامی کشید آخر

یاقون گذاخته در آبست مگر مهتاب حجاب آفتابست مگر

94

هـر توبه که کردیم شکستیم دگر بر خود در نام ولنگ بستیم دگر عیبم مکنید اگـر کنم بیخودگی کز باده عشق مست هستیم دگر

90

از روي حقيقتي نه از روي مجاز ما لعبتكانيم وملك لعبت باز یق کداخه مرآبت کم مناب جاب ناب کر مرزور در ام و کند به به مرکز برخور در ام و کند به به به کر میسه کمند اکر کنم نور به میسه کمند اکر کنم نور به میسه کمند اکر کنم نور به میسه کمند از روی باز از روی به بینی از روی باز امروی به بینی از روی باز امروی به بینی از روی باز امیسه کمایی دفک به بینی از امیسه کمایی دفک به بینی از امیسه کمایی دفک به بینی از

47 a melted ruby is in the water,—maybe, moonlight is the veil of the sun,—maybe.

03.

Every vow we make, we break again,!
we shut once more upon ourselves the door of fame and
fair repute;

blame me not if I act as a fool, for once more am I drunken with the wine of love.

94.

To speak plain language, and not in parables,¹ we are the pieces and heaven plays the game,

95

This quatrain is P 59, B ii 292, L 430, S P 215, B 426, N 216, and W. 257 Together with q 54 $(q \ v$, ante), it supplied the inspiration for F v 71 and 98.

The Moving Finger writes, and, having writ, Moves on nor all your Piety nor Wit Shall lure it back to cancel half a Line, Nor all your Tears wash out a Word of it.

Would but some winged Angel, ere too late, Arrest the yet unfolded Roll of Fate, And make the stern Recorder otherwise Enregister, or quite obliterate!

- r $\,$ P , N , and W read, "Why grieve so much about this protracted affliction" 11 B ii presents a slight varial t compounded of both readings
 - 2 P, L, N, and W read "suffering" for "the times"
 - 3 Vule note 1, q 15, ante
 - 4 Literally, "does not come back"

96

This quatrain is P 264, B 11 296, L 439, S P 223, B 135, and N 224

- 1. Literally, "a veil of cloud"
- 2. B ii, L and N omit this \bar{u} , connecting nature and heart with the $iz\bar{a}fat$

بازیچه همي كنيم بر نطع وجود رفتيم بصندوق عدم يك يك باز

90

اي دل چو حقيقت جهان هست مهاز چندين چه بري خواري ازين رنج ونياز تن را بقضا سپار وبا وقت بساز کين رفته قلم زبهر تو نايد باز

بر روي گل از ابر نقابست هنوز در طبع ودلم ميل شرابست هنوز از پر ممکن بهم مربط دجه د رفن برمیند وق عدم کیک از واخیا اله ای ل چرف به به ای ت بجار چذین چربی فراری این رخ و د تن را شماسها روا و ت با ز می فت قر زبر تواید از وا میما اله برروی کال دا برما بست موز در که و د م بین را بست سوز

48 we are played together in a baby-game upon the chessboard of existence, and one by one we return to the box of non-existence.

05

Oh, heart! since in this world truth itself is hyperbole, why art thou so disquieted with this trouble and abasement?¹ resign thy body to destiny, and adapt thyself to the times,² for, what the Pen has written,³ it will not re-write for thy sake.⁴

96.

On the face of the rose there is still a cloud-shadow,¹ in my nature and heart ² there is still a desire for wine;

3 L reads "time" 1 for "place"—1 e, "What time is this for sleep?"
Vide q. 97, note 2

- 4 P, L, and N read "Drink" for "Give"
- 5 Compare Hafiz

It is morning, oh Sūki, fill the cup with wine, The rolling vault of heaven does not linger, make haste! The Sun of Wine rises from the east of the cup, If thou seekest the pleasure of mirth, bid farewell to sleep!

97

This quatrain is C 271, P 262, B ii. 299, L 425, S P 227, B. 421, N 228, and W 267, and in the last line we find the inspiration of F v 64

St ange, is it not? that of the myriads who Before us passed the door of Darkness through, Not one returns to tell us of the Road Which to discover we must travel too

- r "To throw dust upon" is a common Persian idiom for expressing contempt, or for counting as nothing
 - 2 Literally, "There is time (or place) yet for," etc.
- 3. For 'abūdat C reads 'itūb ūmad'=" rebuke comes," and N 'atū būshad,⁶ "favours there may be," and for nemūz (vide note 2, q 2) both read mŋūz = longing
- 4 B ii., N and W read "travellers" 6 Cf M, I 3206, which F probably had in his mind. (Terminal Essay, p. 316.)
 - 5 P reads "moon-faced" for "fair of face"

98

I do not find this quatrain in any of the texts under consideration

(1) وقعه (2) خور (3) خاك اندختن (4) عتاب آمد (4) عطا ناسد (5) وقعه الله (6) روندگان (7) صحصت ساقیا قدحی پر شراب كن دور طلف درنگ ندارد شتاب كن حورشید مي رمشرق سافر طلوع درد كر برگت عيش مطلبي ترك حواب كن (9) ماه روبان (9) ماه روبان (9) ماه روبان (9) ماه روبان (9)

درخواب مرو چەجاي خوابست ھنوز جــانا مي.ده كه آفتـابست ھنوز

9٧

رو بر سر افلاك جهان خاك انداز مي سي خور و گرد خوبرويان سي تاز چه جاي عبادتست وچه جاي نماز كز جمله ٔ رفتگان يكي نامد ناز

91

ماغر پر کن که برف گون آمد روز زان باده که لعل هست ازو رنگ آموز درخاب رود وافی بت منوز وا بینا که درگرا تا بت منوز دوبرسا فلاکه جافاک اواز کی خور دکر د خوب رویان از چرمهای ها و تت وج جایا ز چرمهای ها و تت وج جایا ز کرنجد رئستگان کی د باز ساخ برگر برف کون آیروز ساخ برگر برف کون آیروز دان دارور

49 sleep not, what right hast thou to sleep yet? 3 give me 4 wine, sweetheart, for it is still daylight.5

97.

Go! throw dust upon 1 the face of the heavens, drink wine, and consort with the fair of face; 5 what time is this 2 for worship? and what time is this for supplication? 8 since, of all those that have departed, 4 not one has returned?.

98.

Fill the cup! for the day breaks white like snow, learn colour from the wine that is ruby;

99

Notes

This quatrain is C 276, P 346, B. ii 301, L 435, S P 229, B 431, N 230, and W 269, practically without variation

r takbir zadan is to make renunciation of self and all things worldly, by means of the formula Allah akhbar, before beginning prayer. Hence the takbir comes to signify any renunciation, thus, to pronounce the takbir of anyone is to renounce his friendship. Here Omar indulges in an irreverent jest, and renounces the nemāz themselves, it being orthodox to renounce something.

2 gardūn darāz kerdan to stretch the neck means in Persian idiom "to passionately desire"

100

This quatrain is C 283, P 99, B ii 303, L 446, B 442, W 274, and is No 25 of E C 's examples It forms the original of F v 35

Then to the Lip of this poor earthern Urn I lean'd the Secret of my Life to learn, And Lip to Lip it murmur'd, "While you live, Drink! for, once dead, you never shall return"

- C reads üz ghāyat-1-nāz,1 with great persuasiveness
- 2, Literally, "the cause or means of long life"

^ه (¹) از فایسه ناز

بردار دو عبودرا ومجلس بفبروز یك عود بساز وآن دگر عود بسوز

99

کردیم دگـر شیوه ٔ رندي آغـاز ٹکبیر هـمـي زنیم بـر پنج نـمـاز هرجا که پیاله ایست مـارا بیني گردن چو صراحي سوي او کرده دراز

1..

لب برلب كوزه بردم از غايت آز تا زو طلم واسطه عسر دراز ردار د مو درامیب برو ز میدو دب از دان کرعود ز واخیا د گریم برکسین نها ز گریم برکسین نها ز مراکه پادایت از بهی مراکه پادایت از بهی مراکه پادایت و از بهی وابینا د وابینا د براب کوز برانایان

50

take two fragrant aloe logs, and brighten the assembly, make one into a lute, and burn the other.

99.

We have returned to our wonted debauch, we have renounced the Five Prayers! wherever the goblet is, there thou mayst see us, our necks stretched out like that of the bottle.

100.

In great desire I pressed my lips to the lip of the jar, to enquire from it how long life might be attained; 3

3 Literally, "and said in secret" B. ii. and L. read this line, "In mystic language it told me this secret "2 P reads.

"The cup said to me in mystic language,
I was a soul like thee, enjoy the moment like me "1

4 Compare Gulistan, ch i, story 9

I spent my life in precious hopes, alas!
That every desire of my heart will be fulfilled,
My wishes were realised, but to what profit? since
There is no hope that my past life will return.

101.

This quatrain is C. 294, P 154, B. ii. 315, L 468, S P 239, B 464, N 240, and W 280. It contains the sentiment of the shortness of life and duration of eternity which signalises many of F's finest verses (Cf M, ch. xxvii.) P. 172 repeats this ruba'i with very slight verbal change.

- I L reads "days" 4 for "hours"
- 2 Compare P N., ch Issi, and de Sacy's notes upon it.

102

This quatram is C 291, P 202, B ii. 322, L 454, S P 241, B 450, N 242, and W 282, and we find in it the germ of F v 42

And if the Wine you drink, the Lip you press, End in what All begins and ends in—Yes, Think then you are To-day what Yesterday You were—To-morrow you shall not be less

It will be observed that the original form of this verse was much closer to the original Persian, F i 47, the last three lines of which run

End in the Nothing all things end in—yes—
Then fancy while Thou art, Thou art but what Thou shalt be- Nothing—Thou shalt not be less

- τ = C for "wine" reads "love," 5 and D in, and L for "with wine" read "full of wine " 6
- 2. The familiar $lala\ rukh$, L. and N. read "with a smooth-cheeked one", 7 C reads "fresh-cheeked" b
- (1) را ص ريان حال صابعت سنو همري چو تو بوده ام دهي را من سار همري چو تو بوده ام دهي را من سار (2) با من بزيان حال ميگفت اين راز (8) درين اميد بسر سد دريغ عمر هرير که انهه در دلمست از درم فراز آيد اميد بستة بر آمد ولي چه فايده زاتکه اميد نيست که عمر گذشته باز آيد اميد نيست که عمر گذشته باز آيد (4) روزه (5) عشق (6) باده پر مستي (7) را ساده رحي (5) با تاره رحي

لب برلب من نهاد ومي گفت براز مي خور که بدين جهان نمي آيي باز

1.1

پندي دهمت اگر بمن داري گوش از بهر خدا جامه تزوير مهوش عقبي همه ساعتست ودنيي يګدم از بهر دمي ملك ابدرا مفروش

1.7

غیّام اگر زباده مستی خوش باش با لاله رخی اگر دشستی خوش باش برب مغ دوئ سراز ع فرکدین جان به به فار پندی من کربن دائوی شس بزی من کربن دائوی شس از برف دا جارت ریوس حتی مریاعت در پی یمی می از بروی مک آبر را مورس وایشا د بالا دری کرز و به به به دش ش

51 it joined its lip to mine and whispered :-"Drink wine, for, to this world, thou returnest not."

IOI.

I will give thee counsel if thou wilt give ear to me, for the sake of God do not wear the garment of hypocrisy, the hereafter will fill all hours, and the world is but a moment, do not sell the kingdom of eternity for the sake of one moment.

102.

Khayyām, if thou art drunk with wine, be happy, if thou reposest with one tulip-cheeked, be happy,

3 C reads this line, "Since in this world of nothingness you must pass away"; 1 and P. L., and N., "Since the end of this world's business is annihilation" 2 B 11 reads "Do not slumber thus, for thou wilt be nothing to-morrow" 6 Compare lines 3 and 4 of q 150, which are almost identical

1

103

This quatrain is C 301, P 102, B ii 323, L 470, S P 242, B 466, N 243, W 483, and E C 26 It gave to F three verses of the section, called in F 1 husa nāmah, "The Book of Pots." They are F v 82, 83, and 87

As under cover of departing Day Slunk hunger-stricken Ramazán away, Once more within the Potter's house alone 1 stood, surrounded by the Shapes of Clay

Shapes of all Sorts and Sizes, great and small, That stood along the floor and by the wall, And some loquacious Vessels were, and some Listen'd, perhaps, but never talked at all

Whereat some one of the loquacious lot— I think a Sufi pipkin— axing hot— "All this of Pot and Potter—Tell me, then, Who is the Potter, pray, and who the Pot?"

The quatrain in C is practically identical with the lines transposed thus 1, 4, 3, 2

τ B u, L and N read this line, "Every one of them said to me in mystic language" (ba zabān-1-hāl)

104

I do not find this quatrain in any of the texts under consideration, excepting the Paris MS, where it is No 248, and in B. it, where it is No 324

- I Here we have a play upon the words $r\bar{a}h$ = wine and $r\bar{u}h$ = "the incorporeal spirit, the breath of God, the Qur'ān, ic, Revelation" (Steingass) Paris MS. reads, "that wine which they call pure spirit" 4
- 2 Compare q. 7, note 2 B. ii. and Paris MS be; in the line, 'A restorer (architect) of a runed heart "
- (1) در عالم نیستي چو مي باید رفت (2) چون عاقبت کار جهان نیستي است
 - (³) هر يك بزبان حال با من گفتند
 - (4) ان باده که روح ناب میخوانندش (5) معمار .
 - $(^{6})$ این غفیهٔ مخور که نیاست کردی فردا

چون آخر کار نیست خواهي بودن انگارکه نیستي چوهستي خوش باش

1.1

در کارگه کــوزهگــري رفتم دون دیدم دو هزار کوزه گویا وخبوش ناگاه یکي کـوزه بر آورد خروش کو کوزهگــر وکوزهخر وکوزهفــروش

1.19

زان روح که راح ناب مي خوانندش تيمار دل خراب مي خوانندش

52 since the end of all things is that thou wilt be naught; a whilst thou art, imagine that thou art not,—be happy!

103.

I went last night into the workshop of a potter,
I saw two thousand pots, some speaking, and some silent;
suddenly one of the pots cried out aggressively:—
"Where are the pot maker, and the pot buyer, and the pot seller?"

104

Of this spirit, that they call pure wine,1 they say:—"It is a remedy for a ruined heart";2

- 3 P for "cups" reads "half-men measures" Vide note 2, q 145
- 4 Here we have another of the ingenious puns which are typical of the poem. khair = "good," sharr = "wicked," and so he gets the juxtaposition of khair āb = "good water," and sharr-āb = "wicked water," or sharāb, which means "wine"
- 5 It must be borne in mind that in the East wine is sold by weight, i.e., by the men or maund (vide note 2, q. 155).

05

This quatrain is 1' 26, B. ii. 329, L. 469, S. I' 248, B. 465, N. 249, and W. 288. It does not vary

- n hasbatan lillah, a common Arabic interjection
- 2 Literally, "By the head of the Tomb of the Prophet of God"

100

This quatrain is B. ii. 330, L 473, S P 249, B 467, N 250, and W 291 It does not vary, save infinitesimally

جامي دو مه منگين بنن آريد مبك غيراب چرا شراب مي خوالندش

1.0

یك یك هنرم بین وگنه دهده بخش هر هر كه رفت حسبة لله بخش از باد و هوا آتش كین وا مفروز ماوا بسر خاك رصول الله بخش

1.4

مي در قدح انصاف كه جانيست لطيف در كالبد شيشه روانيست لطيف

53 set quickly before me two or three heavily⁵ filled cups,³ why do they call a good water "wicked water"?⁴

105.

Regard my virtues one by one, and forgive my crimes ten by ten, pardon every crime that is past, the reckoning is with God!¹ let not the wind and air fan the flame of thy rancour, by Muhammad's tomb! forgive me.²

106.

Verily wine in the goblet is a delicate spirit, in the body of the jar, a delicate soul reposes,

- I The other texts read the last word man = "my friend" (B. ii reads "its friend," supra.)
 - 2. In which case hich firan should be rendered "no dull person"

107

This quatrain is C 312, B ii 341, L 489, B 484, and W 304 It contains the sentiment that appears in many of F 's quatrains, but nowhere more strongly than in F v. 54

Waste not your Hour, nor in the vain pursuit Of This and That endeavour and dispute, Better be jocund with the fruitful Grape, Than sadden after none, or bitter Fruit

The whole quatrain suggests one of Sa'di's "Maxims" "Life is in the keeping of a single breath The world is an existence between two annihilations." (Gulistān, ch. viii, maxim 33)

i dzal in Persian dogma is eternity without beginning, ie, "from all time" as opposed to dbad, eternity without end, ie, "to all eternity"

108

This quatram is C 342, P 40, B ii 356, L 505, S P 266, B 501, N 267, W 310, de T 10, E C 28, and is the original of F i 46

For in and out, above, about, below,
'Tis nothing but a Maga Shadow-show,
Play'd in a Box whose Candle is the Sun
Round which we Phantom Figures come and go

In its final form, F v 68, it runs as follows

We are no other than a moving row Of Magic Shadow-shapes that come and go, Round with the Sun-illumin'd Lantern held In Midnight by the Master of the Show, and it is coupled with F v 69, quoted sub q 94 Cf M, l. 7, as to the vault of Heaven and the story of $\overline{A}y$ iz (l. 3368-3405), from which F. took "the idea of" his verse, F v 70.

- I E C's "at-which we gaze bewildered" is, I think, too free
- These lanterns are of varying shapes. In Persia, says Nicolas, it is made of two copper basins separated by a shade of waxed calico about a yard high. The lower one contains the candle, and the upper one has a handle for the arm of the ferrásh who carries it. The shade is folded like the familiar "Chine: lantern" Ornaments are painted on the cloth, and it is to the vacillation of these as the carrier shifts it from one hand to another that Omar refers. The editor of the Calcutta Review appends a note at the foot of E.C. as follows "These lanthorns are very common in Calcutta. They are made of a tall cylinder, with figures of men and animals cut out of paper and pasted on it. The cylinder, which is very light, is suspended on an axis, round which it easily turns. A hole is cut near the bottom, and the part cut out is fixed at an angle to the cylinder, so as to form a vane. When a small lamp or candle is placed inside, a current of air is produced which keeps the cylinder slowly revolving."

(۱) جان در حمایت یکدمست و دنیا وجودی میان دو عدم

لایق لبود هیچ گران همدم می جز ماغر باده کان گرانست لطیف

1.4

تا كي ز ابد حديب وتا كي ز ازل هنگام طرب شرابرا نيست بدل بگذشت ز اندازه من علم وعمل هر مشكل را شراب گرداند حل

1.1

ابن چرخ فلك كه ما درو حيرانيم فانوس خيال ازو مثالي دانيم

54 nothing heavy 2 is worthy to be the friend of wine 1 save the wine-cup, for that is, at the same time, heavy and delicate.

107.

Where is the limit to eternity to come, and where to eternity past?

now is the time of joy, there is no substitute for wine: both theory and practice have passed beyond my ken, but wine unties the knot of every difficulty.

108.

This vault of heaven, beneath which we stand bewildered,' we know to be a sort of magic-lantern:

١

1

- 3 E C exactly conveys the meaning "The sun is the candle, the world the shade" (or globe)
- 4. C and P read, "that are bewildered in it," repeating the hatranim of line 1, which makes me think it is an error of the copyist. There are several signs of weariness on the part of the scribe in the verse in my copies Sed quare

100

This quatrain is C 331, B ii 365, L 503, S P. 281, B 499, N 282, W 322, and does not vary It accounts for many such lines as in F v 93 and 94, q v sub Q 93 ante, and, what is more interesting, it contains a strong suggestion of the quatrain F v 81, which has baffled so many commentators

Oh Thou, who Man of baser Earth didst make, And ev'n with Paradi 2 devise the Snake, For all the Sin wherewith the Face of Man Is blacken'd—Man's forgiveness give—and take!

(Vide, however, note 3 to q 1, ante; and cf M, ll 3229-3253, and the passage beginning at l. 225 (Terminal Essay, p. 309)

110

This quatrain I do not find in any of the texts under consideration

- I 'azm kerdan is "to make intention "
- 2 $n\bar{a}b$, here and elsewhere in this poem, means "pure" in the sense of being "undiluted"
- 3 The Zisyphus vulgaris, or common Syrian jujube-tree. Its fruit is made into sweetmeats, and its juice is used for coughs, but the British jujuhe-lozenge takes nothing from it but its name.

خورشید چراغ دان وعالم فانوس ما چون صوریم کاندر و گردانیم

1.9

بانفس همیشه در نبردم چکنم وز کرده ٔ خوپشتن بدردم چکنم گیرم که زمن در گذرانی بکرم زین شرمکه دیدیکه چه کردم چکنم

11.

بر خیزم و عزم باده اناب کنم رنگ رخ خود برنگ عنّاب کنم

55 know thou that the sun is the lamp-flame and the universe is the lamp,⁸

we are like figures that revolve in it.4

109.

I do not always prevail over my nature,—but what can I do? and I suffer for my actions,—but what can I do?

 I verily believe that Thou wilt generously pardon me on account of my shame that Thou hast seen what I have done,—but what can I do?

IIO.

Let me arise and seek pure wine, make thou the colour of my cheek like that of the jujube fruit, 228 Notes

4 Literally, "professing exuberance"

III

This quatrain is C. 356, P 118, B, ii. 372, L 554, S P 276, B 547, N 277, and W 320

- I Literally, "intellect "
- 2 B ii, L, N, and W read "sad" 1 = " 100 years"
- 3 dahr means also "eternity" C reads jum,2" in the body"
- 4 The other texts begin this line, "Pour thou wine into the cup," etc 8

112

This quatram is C 344, B. ii 373, L 537, S P 283, B 532, N 284, and W 324 The first line suggests F v 48 "A moment's halt, a momentary taste of Being," etc

- 1 Compare $mak\bar{u}m$, a halting-place, and mukim, which signifies a more permanent abode
 - 2 Literally, "tood is painful"
- 3 L for sāht reads mai wine C, N, and W end the line, "is a great error," a reading which I have found in an isolated transcript of this ruba'i written upon the flyleaf of a diwan of Emad (dated 920 A.H.) in a contemporary handwriting. (Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris)

این عقل فضول پیشهرا مشتی می بر روی زلم چنانکه در خواب کنم

111

تا چند اسیر عقل هر روزه شویم در دهر چه یکساله چه یك روزه شویم درده قدح باده ازان پیش كه ما در كارگ كوزهگران كوزه شویم

117

جون نيست مقام ما درين دير مقيم بى ساقي ومعشوق غذابيست اليم

این حق صنول بشدراشنی می بررده می زنم خابک فرابسسم
وابنياله
نا پندامپرعب ل مرور . مویم در در در کیپ ار دیک روز دم
د د و مقع ؛ • . ازان شیک ، د کارگر کوز ، کران کون شویم میگارگر کوز ، کران کون شویم
وابنیا د برزنت تعام، درین دیریم
بن المبارك ومتونى المبارك المبارك المبارك المبارك ومتونى المبارك المبارك المبارك المبارك المبارك المبارك المبارك

56 as for this meddling 4 intellect, a fist-full of wine will I throw in its face, to make it sleep.

III.

How long shall we continue slaves to every-day problems? what matter whether we live one year, or one day, in this world? pour out a cup of wine, before that we become pots in the workshop of the potters.

112.

Since our abode in this monastery is not permanent 1 without the Cup-bearer and the beloved, it is painful to support life; 2

230 Notes

- 4 N translates "c the creation or eternity (end) of the world '
- 5 C, B 11, L, and N read mard 1 salim, 1 simpleton

113

This quatrain is C $\,$ 372, P $\,$ 147, B $\,$ 1i $\,$ 381, L $\,$ 514, S P $\,$ 286, B $\,$ 509, N $\,$ 287, and W $\,$ 327

- I te, "Thy service is fraught with reproaches" L. for sadd reads ze = "from", te, on account of (sins I incur reproaches)
- 2 C repeats the malāmat be-kashim, which makes sense, but is probably a clerical error
- 3 ic, "If life and thy severity are faithful to one another" ("If thy severity continues all my life" -wnfa kerdan=te perform a promise)
- 4 N reads hem az $\bar{a}n$ $g\bar{a}h = "less than that time," for <math>hem$ az $\bar{a}nhi$, but the latter is more probably correct C for "till" reads "upon" $(b\bar{a})$
 - 5 B is for "please God" reads "after all" (ākhir)

114

This quatrain is C 369, P 234, B 11 380, L 522, S P 288, B, 517, N 289, and W 329 We find again an echo of F v 94 in this quatrain which expresses the poet's scoin of penitence

- 1 Literally, "science or doctrine" Λ synonym of 'ilm," in conjunction with which it occurs frequently in Persian
- 2 Literally, "I only practise the science of," etc. The other texts for $r\bar{a}i$ read $y\bar{a}d$,2 "I only remember," etc.

M. -

تاكي زقديم و مهدى اي مود حكيم چون من رفتم جهان چه مصدى چه قديم

111

در عشق تو صد گونه ملامی بکشم ور بشکیم این عهد غرامت بکشم گر عمر وفا کند جفاهای ترا باری کم ازانکه تا قیامت بکشم

1110

دنیا جو فناست من بعز فن نکنم جز رای نشاط ومی ٔ رؤشن نکنم

57 how long of ancient creeds or new, 4 O philosopher? 5 when I have left it what matter if the world be old or new?

113.

In loving Thee I incur reproaches for a hundred sins, and if I still in this obligation I pay a penalty: his if my life remain faithful to Thy cruelty, here god, I shall have less than that to bear till the Judgment Day.

114.

The world being fleeting, I practise naught but artifice, I hold only with cheerfulness and sparkling wine;

232 Notes

- 3 L. reads this light in different words "They say, God will grant thee pardon for wine (drinking)" B is has a combination of the two readings
 - 4. Compare q 64 line 4.

This quatrain is C 374, P 340, B ii 382, L 532, B 527, S P 284, N 285, and W 325

- 1. myāz means here "with humihty, fawning" N reads it to mean, "Though I come to the mosque from a sense of duty," sed quare
 - 2 P, L, N, and W begin hakka 2 = "really," also "O God!"
- 3 The other texts read the stronger form, "I stole," s for this, which equals "I abstracted" (literally, made less)
- 4 The $sep\bar{g}dch^4$ is the Muslim prayer-mat upon which the $sep\bar{g}dc^5$ or ceremonial prostration is performed
 - 5. ie., that prayer-mat
 - 6 ie, to steal others

116

This quatrain is C 345, P 227, B 11 385, L 539, S P 289, B 534, N 290, and W 330 F. has taken one of his Kuzz Nameh verses from this, F v 89

"Well," murmur'd one, "Let whoso make or buy, My Clay with long Oblivion is gone dry But fill me with the old familiar Juice, Methinks I might recover by-and-by"

There is a quatrain in the texts N 115, etc., ending in d, which has an almost identical meaning, though the phraseology is much varied

1 N and W read this line, "In the hand of destiny I become like a bird's feather (floating away)." C reads "And by the hand of destiny I im rooted up "?

(1) گویند خدا ترا ز مي تونه دهاد (2) حقّه (3) درديدم (4) سحّاده (5) سحّاد (5) در دست اجل چو مرع پّر کنده شوم (7) وز دست احل ز بيځ کنده شوم

گویند مرا که ایزدیت توبه دهاد .
او خود ندهد وگر دهد من نکیم

110

در مسهد اگرچه با نیاز آمده أم والله که له از بهر نماز آمده أم روزي اینجا سجاده کم کردم آن کهنه شدست وبازباز آمده أم

114

در پای اجل چو من سرانگنده شوم وز بیخ أمید عمر بر کنده شوم

58

they say to me:—"May God grant thee penitence." Be He himself does not give it, and if He gives it, I will none of it.

115.

Although I have come with an air of supplication to the mosque, by Allah! I have not come to pray;

• I came one day and stole³ a prayer-mat⁴—that sin⁵ wears out, and I come again and again.⁶

116.

When I am abased beneath the foot of destiny and am rooted up from the hope of life,

2 N and W read "May it be that with the perfume of the wine I may revive for a moment" 1 C read, "So long as it is full of the perfume of wine I may live", 2 and L reads "May it be that when it is very moist (or 'moist with wine," 4 the hthograph is bad) I may live "3 B in has another variant, but I' is the same as here

117

I do not find this quatrain in any of the texts under consideration. We get in it an echo of F v 77, q v ante sub q 2

- i dāna = grain or seed scattered to attract birds, also science, learning
- 2 mudām gives a meaning of perpetuity, it has also the meaning of "wine drunk all day long," as opposed to subāh,5 the morning draught (vule q 32, 1 3), or ghābuk,6 the evening draught (Steingass)
- 3 i.e., "Wise or strong in a tavern, than ignorant or weak to a sauma'ah," which means, especially, a Christian cell or hermitage. Vide q 24, note 1, and cf. M, 1 1356. "Thou wert formerly r. in love, but now that thou hast acquired experience, thou are cooked... salaam!"
- 4 C/ M., 1 1887 "At one moment my passionate heart urges me towards the tavern, at another my spirit urges me to prayer"

118

This quatrain is B ii 391, L 571, S. P 293, B 564, N 294, and W 332, and is invariable. In this we have echoes of F ν 93-5, and also of F ν 41, which made its first appearance as F ii 55

Perplext no more with Human or Divine, To-morrow's tangle to the winds resign, And lose your fingers in the tresses of The Cypress-slender Minister of Wine

1 10, "inhale the fumes of," literally, "strike"

زنهار گلم بجز صراحي مكنيد شايد كه چو پر بادة شود زندة شوم

111

دل فرق نمي كند همي دانه زدام رائيش بهام رائيش بمسجدست و رائيش بهام با اين همه ما ومي ومعشوق مدام در ميكدة پهته بهكه در صومعه خام

111

صبعست دمی بر می گارنگ زنیم وین مئیشه ٔ نام وننگ بر مننگ زئیم

- 59

take heed that thou makest nothing but a goblet of my clay, haply when it is full of wine I may revive.²

117.

My heart does not distinguish between the bait and the trap, one comisel urges it towards the mosque, another towards the cup;

nevertheless the wine-cup, and the loved one, and I continually a together, are better, cooked, in a tavern, than raw, in a monastery.3

118.

It is morning: let as for a moment inhale 1 rose-coloured wine, and shatter against a stone this vessel of reputation and honour;

- 2 11. "Let us ceased to strive to earn salvation." Literally, "Let us withdraw our hands from our long hope."
 - 3 Literally, the "skirt," or "fringe," of the lute

IIC

This is also, as far as I have found, only in this MS We recognise the sentiment of F v. 11 and 12 It is No 14 of E C's examples.

- I cf "We have renounced the pomps and vanities of the world"
- 2 ic "at the price of " Cf M, 1 2599 "Does one buy poverty?" (Adhem) replied "I for one chose it voluntarily, and I bought it at the price of the kingdom of the world," etc etc.²
- 3 cf Gulshan i rāz, 1 699 Chap 77 of PN is a perfect reflection of this ruba'i De Sacy in his notes (p 304) quotes an Arabic quatrain which may be translated "Poverty is substance, everything outside poverty is but an accident poverty is health, everything outside poverty is but malady The whole world is but illusion and fals.y; poverty alone in all the world is an excellent possession and real wealth"

This quatrain is P 265, B ii 409, L 523, S P 299, B 518, N 300, and W 336, and it is the original of F v 56

For "Is" and "Is NOT." though with Rule and Line And "UP-AND-DOWN" by Logic I define, Of all that one should care to fathom, I Was never deep in anything but—Wine, which is a great improvement upon F i 41, its original form. The quatrain is of course a sneer at his own algebraical and astronomical studies. Cf Dante, Rims C xviii "Ah com' poca difesa mostra signore a cui servo sormontal"

- 1 zāhir is "exoteric," as opposed to bātin, "esoteric," in line 2.
- 2 N reads, "all that is powerfully exalted "1

دست از امل دراز خود باز کشیم در زلف دراز ودامن چنگ زلیم

119

کنچی ودو قرص از جهان بگزیدم وز دولت وحشبتش طبع ببریدم درویشی را بهان ودل بضریدم در درویشی توانگریها دیدم

11.

من طاهر نيستي وهستي دانم من باطن هر فراز وپستي دانم

let us cease to strive after what has long been our hope,² and play with long ringlets and the handle³ of the lute.

IIO.

We have preferred a corner and two loaves to the world, and we have put away greed of its estate and magnificence; we have bought poverty with our a heart and soul—in poverty we have discerned great riches.

120.

I know the outwardness of existence and of non-existence, I know the inwardness of all that is high and low;

- 3. Literally, "with all his" Cf q 1, 1 3
- 4 The other texts read, "I am weary of my knowledge" Compare Gulistān, ch i, story 9:

"My life has lapsed in ignorance,
I have done nothing, be on your guard!"

121

This quatram is B ii 420, L 544 (and B 538), whence it becomes W. 353; it is the source of F v 27 and 28

Myself, when young, did eagerly frequent Doctor and Saint, and heard great argument About it and about; but evermore Came out by the same door wherein I went

With them the seed of Wisdom did I sow,
And with mine own hand wrought to make it grow,
And this was all the Harvest that I reap'd
"I came like Water, and like Wind I go"

- I L and W reads "hear" 3
- In L this line reads, 'We care up from the earth and depart upon the wind," which even more closely suggests the observation attributed by Attar to Nizām-ul-Mulk when dying "Oh God! am passing away in the hand of the Wind" M, 1 4620 Nizām-ul-Mulk was assassinated, at the instance of Omar's patron Malk Shah, by one of the followers of Hassan Sabah, the other partner to the "tripartite agreement," but it may be observed that though Malcolm (vol 1, p 220, vide note 3, q 139) gives the dying speech of Nizām-ul-Mulk at great length (an eulogy, by-the-way, of his murderer), there is no trace in it of this observation attributed to him by Attar Cf also M, Il 1559 (Terminal Essay, p 311) and 2288, which refers to the dispersal of the dust of the body by the wind after death (Terminal Essay, p 311).
 - 3 B ii for "water" reads "cloud-mist "8

122

This quatrain is C. 411, P 58, B 11 424, L. 618, S. P 319, B. 610, N. 322, and W 365

- r. B ii , L , N , and W , for "mysteries" read "vicissitude.
- 2. B. 11, L, N, and W, for "of the world" read 'and annoyance "6
- B ii , C , L , and N., for "all the same " read "of little account " = easy."
 - (1) بیزارم (2) روزگارم دشد بنادانی (1) مینارم در مینارم مینارم بکنید
- (3) بشنو (4) از حاك مر آمُديم و برباد مديم (5) احوال (6) و رنج (7) آسان (8) ابر

با این همه از دانش خود شرمم باد م گـر مــرنــه وراي مستي دالم

171

یکچند بکودکی باستاد شدیم یکچند باستادی ٔ خود شاد شدیم پایان سخن نگر که مارا چه رسید چون آب در آمدیم وچون باد شدیم ،

177

آلوا که وقوفست بر امرار جهان شادي وغم جهان برو شد يکسان

nevertheless³ let me be modest⁴ about my own knowledge if I recognise any degree higher than drunkenness.

121.

For a while, when young, we frequented a teacher, for a while we were contented with our proficiency; behold the foundation of the discourse:—what happened to us? we came in like water and we depart like wind.

122.

To him who understands the mysteries of the world, the joy and sorrow of the world is all the same;

Notes . Notes

- 4 N reads be-su,1 meaning the same
- 5 W begins the line, "Thou wilt have pain? (and also the remedy)" The meaning of the line is obscure. W appends the note, "Twill all be one a hundred years hence." I should like to render khwāhi here by the German "meinctwegen," or the French "à la bonne heure." There is no good English equivalent, in q 2 I have rendered it "an Thou wilt."

123.

This quatrain is C 410, B ii 435, L. 617, S P 324, B 609, N 327, and W 368, and is practically invariable

- 1 The word vind is also used to designate the Sufis, who, according to the popular reading of his philosophy, were Omar's pet detestation
 - 2 nemaz Vide ante, passim.
 - 3 ruzch means "a day's allowance of food," and, ceremonially, "a fast "
 - 4 B 11, N and W omit "Omar," and end the line "Oh Friend!"
 - 5 Literally, "strike the road"
- 6 ic, but There is a Turkish proverb akin to this "Be a robber, be a thief, but do not put conscience aside" 5

124

This quatrain is C 402, P 53, B ii 436, L 605, B 598, and W 387 No 76 in the Paris MS and No 270 in B ii (both ending in r) are identical in meaning, and practically so in phraseology

- 1. Literally, "this salt-marsh"
- 2 Literally, "to cut away the soul" C ends the line, "and agony of heart and soul" B ii has practically the same ending
- (¹) بسو (²) حـواهي تـو ندرد (³) ربع دل و جـان (٩) اي دوست (٥) اوفرى اول حرسز اول انصافي الدبي قومة

چون نيك وبد جهان بسر خواهد شد خواهي همه درد باش وخواهي درمان

171

تا بتواني خدمت رندان مي كن بنياد نماز و روزه ويران مي كن بشنو سغن راست زخـــــــام عمر مي ميغور و ره مي زن واحسان مي كن

146

چون حاصل آدمي درين شورمنتان جز خوردن غصّه نيست يا كندن جان

مِن كِيد دد عان بروايد
خایمسدروارم فرای
داینا د
ا بترا ن مدمن رزان م ^{کن} ر
نياه نازوروز. ويران يك
بشنهن دا پت زخامسر سیورود . نی زن داحیان میمورود . نی زن داحیان
وامنيا د
هِ ن عبر آوی دین سورسیان
بزفرره ن منينه بت كيفريا ^ن

6:

since the good and the bad of the world will come to an end; what matter, since it must end? an thou wilt, be all pain, or, an thou wilt, all remedy.

123.

124.

Since the harvest for the human race, in this wilderness,¹ is naught but to suffer affliction or to give up the ghost,²

125

This is one of the quatrains that appear to be found only in this MS

- r Literally, "the dress of face," a "veil in which figures are woven " $Vide \neq 63$, note r.
- 2 $Vsde \neq 55$, note 3 Cf. M., l. 3653 "A celebrated shakh, clad in the robe of voluntary poverty"
- 3. Literally, "strike the drum of Sultanate" $\it Vide \ q \ 3 \ j$, note 5, and M , ll 2162 and 2753, there cited ı 6.

This quatrain is P. 186, L. 623, B 615, whence it becomes W 386 We find in it an echo of F $\,$ v 22, and the complete sentiment of F $\,$ v 25

Alike for those who for TO-DAY prepare,
And those that after some TO-MORROW stare,
A Muezzin from the Tower of Darkness cries
"Fools! your Reward is neither Here nor There"

See also F v 22, sub q 137

- r Literally, "this revolving cupola" W reads "overturned" 1 for "revolving," but gives no authority for the rendering
 - 2 P and L read "empty of all friends "2

خَرَم دل آن کزین جهان زود برفت آموده کسي که خود لیامد بههان

140

درویش ز تن جامه ٔ صورت برکن تا در ندهی بیامه ٔ صورت تن رو کهنه گلیم فقر بر دوش افکن در زیر گلیم کوس سلطانی زن ۱۲۹

زين گنبد گردنده بد افعالي بين وز رفتن دوستان جهان خالي بين

b3

light-hearted is he who passes quickly from this world, and he who never came into the world is at rest.

125.

Darvish! rand from thy body the figured veil,1 rather than sacrifice thy body for the sake of that veil go and throw upon thy shoulders the old rug of poverty2—beneath that rug thou art equal to a sultan.3

T26.

Behold the evil conduct of this vault of heaven,¹ behold the world—empty by the passing away of friends;²

244 Notes

3 Compare F 1 37, quoted $sub \neq 20$ L reads this line, "Seek not tomorrow, leave yesterday alone," etc 1

127

This quatrain is P 330, B ii 453, L 608, S. P 339, B 601, N. 342, and W 381 F took from it a verse that occurs only in his second edition, F ii 65.

If but the Vine and Love-abjuring Band Are in the Prophet's Paradise to stand Alack, I doubt the Prophet's Paradise Were empty as the hollow of one's Hand

- I Literally, a circle or ring
- 2 P and L read "rosy-cheeked ones" 2
- 3 zerk here means rather "me tal blindness"
- 4 P and L read this line, "Is better than practising the distemper of piety"s
- 5 P and L read this line, "If when dead the wine-drinkers will go to hell" 4
 - 6 P and L read this line, "Then who will see the face of heaven?" 6

128

This quatrain is C 393, B it 455, L 588, S P 341, B 581, N 344, and W 382.

t Literally, "the stone of trial"

(1) وردا مطلب گزار دی (2) گلرحان (3) بیتر ر هـــــــرار زاهدی ورزیدن (4) کر مردم می خوار (4) باشند (5) پس روی بیشترا که حواهد دیدن

تا بتواني تو يكنفس خودرا باص فردا منگر دي مطلب حالي بين ا

124

می خوردن و گرد نیکوان گردیدن به زانك بزرق زاهدي ورزیدن گر عاشق ومست دوزخي خواهد بود پس روي بهشت كس نغواهد دیدن

144

نتوان دل شادرا بغم فـرسودن وقت خوش خود بسنگ معنت مودن

64 as far as thou art able live for thyself for one moment, look not for to-morrow, seek not yesterday, behold the present!²

127.

To drink wine and consort with a company of the beautiful is beffer than practising the hypocrisy of the zealot; if the lover and the drunkard are doomed to hell, then no one will see the face of heaven.

128.

One cannot consume one's happy heart with sorrow, nor consume the pleasure of one's life upon the touchstone; 1

246 ' Notes

- 2 Literally, "The person is invisible (absent) who knows," etc. L and W begin the line, "In this world he who knows," etc.; and C. begins, "In the obligation of knowing," etc.
- 3 N appends a note, "God," a good specimen of his Sufistic tendency to' whitewash" poor Omar

129

This quatrain is C. 416, B ii 464, L 634, S P 345, B 626, N 348, W 390, and E C 3, and we recognise in it the sentiment of F v. 23

And we, that now make merry in the Room
They left, and Summer dresses in new bloom,
Ourselves must we beneath the Couch of Earth
Descend- ourselves to make a Couch—for whom?

- I C begins with the familiar mai khurki, "Drink wine, for, for the sake," etc
- 2 N for "Idol" reads "Come," a probable, but harmless, misplacement of the diacritical points ³ B 11 and L read here, "grasp the goblet" ⁴ C ends the line "for many prayers," ⁵ an error, I think, of the scribe Compare Gulistan, ch 1, story 26

For how many years and long lives Will the people walk over my head on the ground, ⁶ and again, story 15 of ch in

Wah! how—every time the plants in the garden Sprouted—glad became my heart! Pass by, O Friend! that in the spring Thou mayst see plants sprouting from my clay?

130

This quatrain is C 420, P. 36, B is 460, L. 624, S P 348, B 616, N 351, and W 393, and contains, like q 51, the germ of F v 47, q v sub q 51.

1 te, "Our life is an incomplete thing—where is the rest of it?" The other texts for "essence" read "hope"* N. reads the line, "and where is the realisation of the burden of our hopes in this world"?

کس غیب چه داند که چه خواهد بودن مي بايد ومعشوق وبكام آمودن 149

این چرخ فلك بهر هلاك من وتو قصدی دارد بجان باك من وتو بر سبزه نشین بتا که بس دیر نماند تا سبزة برون دمد زخاك من وتو

11.

از آمدن ورفتن ما سودی کو وز تار وجود عمر ما پودی کو

no one is to be found who knows what is to be;² wine, and a loved one, and to repose according to one's desire, these things are necessary.

129.

This heaven. in vault, for the sake of my destruction and thine, wages war upon my pure soul and thine;

sit upon the green sward, O my Idol!2 for it will not be long ere that green sward shall grow from my dust and thine.

130.

What profits it, our coming and going? and where is the woof for the warp of the stuff of our life?" 248 'Notes

- 2 Literally, "so many delicate hands and feet."
- 3 The other texts (except B. ii, which is identical) read this line, "Beneath the circle of the heavens, how many pure bodies" (P, L, and W, "souls").

This quatrain is C 443, P 296, B ii 480, L 670, S P 356, B 662, N 359, and W 426 It is, with q 16, the source of inspiration of F, v 41, g v sub q 16

- r B it, C and N for "all sciences" read "science and piety "2
- 2 Literally, "to hang, is best
- 3 For surāhi, "bottle," L reads "karrābat,"  flagon, or vat; N reads "kinninat,"  a glass bottle; P reads piāleh. B ii reads fakih,  "doctor of law"; and C reads 'cdwat,  : e, "as much blood as you can".

132.

This quatrain is P. 300, B ii 482, L 654, S P 361, B 646, N 364, and W 409, and does not vary The freedom of N's translation amounts to licence.

چندين سر وپاي الازلينان جهان مي سوزد وخاگ مي شود دودي کو

141

از درس علوم جمله بگریزی به واندر سر زلف دلبر آویزی به زان پیش که روزگار خونت ریزد تو خون صراحی بقدح ریزی به

144

ای من در میخانه به سبلت رفته ترك بد ونیك هردو عالم گفته 66

How many delicate bodies the world burns away to dust! and where is the smoke of them?

131.

Flee from the study of all sciences '-'tis better thus, and twine thy fingers' in the curly locks of a loved one-'tis better thus, ere that fate shall spil' thy blood; pour thou the blood of the bottle' into the cup—'tis better thus.

132.

Ah! I have brushed the tavern doorway with my moustaches, I have bidden farewell to the good and evil of both worlds;

250 Notes

t t e, at my feet. Note the vowel points in the text to make the meaning clear. Cf M, 1, 3224. "When he has drunk a little of this wine he will forget the two worlds."

133

This quatrain is C 442, B ii. 478, L 672, S P 355, B 664, N 358, and W 404

- I For "wine" N reads "gladness," and L reads "rectitude," which W thinks is a gloss by a Sufi scribe
 - 2 Literally, "shortness-deficiency"
- 3 The other texts read this line, "Wine also from the hand of Idols in a pavilion, is best" 3
- 4 Kalendars (with whom we are familiar in the pages of the "Arabian Nights") are "a 'sind of itinerant Muhammadan monk with shaven head and beard, who abandon everything, wife, friends, and possessions, and wander about the world" (Steingass). We alls them "bibulous Sufis". The term has come to be applied to persons who have abandoned all respectability. Compare R. B. M. Binning (ende note 2, p. xxv.), vol. 11, pp. 72-3, for an accurate account of these mendicants. An extract will suffice. "They lay claim to great sanctity, and pietend to be inspired, while their profession of holiness, self-denial, and austerity of life is often a mere cloak for all manner of profligacy and villainy."
- 5 This means "continually", literally, "from the Moon-month to the Pish-month" mah is the Moon, and māhi, the sign Pisces, upon which, according to the Persian cosmogony, the world is supposed to rest. All Persian poetry is full of references to this condition of things. Vide (e.g.) in M. alone, ll. 38, 48, 640, ct fussim

T34.

This quatrain is C 435, P 34, B, ii 481, L 657, S P 360, B 649, N 363, and W 408, and from this and q 134 we get F v 72

And that inverted Bowl they call the Sky,
Whereunder, crawling coop'd we live and die,
Lift not your hands to IT for help—for it
As impotently moves as you or I

C/ M. Il 145 and 2290, which probably gave F his first idea of this quatrain (Terminal Essay, p. 308)

(1) خَرَمي (2) عق (3) مي هم ر كف بتان حركاهي مة (4) جرهة ران بادة چور ، بوشش بود هر دو عالم كل فراموشش ،ود گر هردو جهان چو گوئي افتد به کوي بر من بجوئي چو مست باشم خفته

144

از هر چه بیجز مي است کوتاهي به وز دست بنان مست خرگاهي به مستي و قلندري و گمراهي به يك جرعه مي زماه تا ماهي به

146

این چرح چو طامیست نگون افتاده دروی همه زیرکان زبون افتاده 67

though both the worlds should fall like balls in my street, seek me,—ye will find me sleeping like a drunkard.

133.

From everything save wine¹ abstinence² is best, and that wine is test when served by drunken beauties in a pavilion,² drinking, and Kalendarism,¹ and erring, are best, one draught of wine from Mah to Mahi⁵ is best.

134.

This heavenly vault is like a bowl, fallen upside down, under which all the wise have fallen captive,

1 10. Wine has been poured from the bottle into the cup Blood is, in Perian literature, a synonym of hatred, and in composition "kh n uftādan bar kess" is to revenge oneself

135.

This quatrain is B ii 483, L 671, S. P 366, B. 663, N 370, and W. 414, and we find in it the source of the first distich of F. v 9:

Each Morn a thousand Roses brings, you say; Yes, but where leaves the Rose of Yesterday?

F i 8 is closer to the original.

And look—a thousand Blossoms with the Day Woke—and a thousand scatter'd into Clay;

and also F v. 14

Look to the blowing Rose about us—"Lo, Laughing," she says, "into the world I blow, At once the silken tassel of my Purse Tear, and its Treasure on the Garden throw"

- r to, the petals N translates aptly but freely, "See how the zephyr has caused the roses to open" De Sacy quotes (PN, p 309) an ode of Shahi in which the following occurs "Since the zephyr has brought to the rose the perfume of thy faine, she has torn the skirt of purple which was her glory"?
- 2 The amours of the Nightingale and the Rose occur redundantly in all Persian literature Vide note to q 67 A volume might be filled with such quotations, two will suffice here—one from Sa'adi

The Spring is delightful, oh Rose, where hast thou been?

Dost thou not hear the lamentations of the Nightingales on account of thy delay? and one from Jalal-ud-din in the Ruz bahar

While the Nightingale sings thy praises with a loud voice I am all ear, like the Rose-tree ²

- 3 B ii, N and W read "for many times these roses" B L reads the line: "Make haste! drink wine, for oh, how many roses (there are) that, by the wind "4"
- 4 N and W read "have sprung from earth and (again) been scattered to earth "5 L reads "have been scattered to earth and have become dust "6 Cf Inferno, 111 112 "si levan le foglie l'una appresso dell' altra, infin che 'l ramo rende alla terra tutte le sue spoglie"

136

This quatrain is C 504 and B ii 484 ending in ye, P. 207, L 740 in ye, C 427, S P 362, B 726, N 366, and W 411; it does not vary, and it is the original of one of the quatrains that occur only in F is second edition, F ii. 14

Were it not folly, spider-like to spin
The Thread of present Life away to win—
What? for ourselves, who know not if wer had Breathe out the very Breath we now breathe in!

(۱) بهار حورمست ای گل کتایی که بینی بلبلان را الله و سور (۱) تا بحمد تو نعره زد بلبل همه گوشم چون درحت کا،

(8) که بسیار این گل (4) هین باده حورید کلی بسا کل کرباد (5) از حاك بر آمدسست و بر خاك شده (6) بر حاك فرو ریزد وبر حاك شده (7) تا كل از باد صبع بوی تو یافست جامها یاره درد در نن حویش در دومتي شيشه ومناغر بگزيد لب برلب ودرميانه خون افتاده

100

بنگر زصبا دامن کل چاك شده بلبل زجمال گل طربناك شده در مایه گل نشین که بس گلکه زباد در خاك فرو رفته وبا خاك شده

134

تاکي غم آن خورم که دارم یانه وین عمر بخوش دلي گذارم یانه

68

choose thou the manner of friendship of the goblet and the jar, they are lip to lip, and blood has fallen between them.

135.

Sec, the skirt of the rose has been torn by the breeze, the nightingal rejoices in the beauty of the rose; sit in the shade of the rose, for, by the wind, many roses have been scattered to earth and have become dust.

136.

How long shall I grieve about what I have or have not, and whether I shall pass this life light-heartedly or not?

Notes Notes

I Compare Gulistan, ch viii "Life is in the keeping of a single breath Vide note to q 107

137

This quatrain is P 218, B 11 485, L 643, S P 363, B 635, N 367, and W 412 We get in it an echo of F v 22

For some we loved, the loveliest and the best, That from his Vintage rolling Time hath prest, Have drunk their Cup a Round or two before, And one by one crept silently to rest

- r Literally, "do not give thy body"
- 2 N and W read "thy soul" 1
- 3 N reads "do not remind thy oul of discourse" 2
- 4 Persian is full of these compound attributes B ii, N and W read "sugar-lipped," and L reads "curly-headed" Cf Lala rukh, tulip-cheeked, and gul āndām, rose-bodied

138

This quatram is P 236, B in 486, L 647, S P 359, B 639, N 362, and W 407

I Literally, "lay it not aside" N and W read this line, "do not calculate the measure of your life," etc. P and L for "measure" read "anxiety"? These readings are preferable to that of this MS, which has only age to recommend it

(1) جانرا
$$(2)$$
 سعن (3) بشكر لب (4) سر راهب (5) الله رح كل اندام (5) انجازهٔ عمر بهض از مصحت منه (7) اندیشه

پر کن قدح باده که معلومم لیست کین دم که فـرو برم برآرام یانه

120

تن در غیم روزگار بیداد مده مارا زغم گدشتگان باد مده دری پریزاد مده بی باده مباش وعمر برباد مده

150

چون عمر زیاده گردد ار منست منه هر جا که قدم نهي بجز مست منه 69

Fill up the wine-cup, for I do not know that I shall breathe out this breath that I am drawing in.

137.

Submit not 1 to the sorrow of this iniquitous world, remine 1 us 2 not of sorrow 3 for those who have passed away, give thine heart only to one jasmine-bosomed 4 and fairy-born, be not without wine, and cast not thy life to the winds.

138.

Though thy life pass sixty years, do not give up; 1 wherever thou directest thy steps, walk not save when drunk;

256 ' Notes

- 2 The other texts (with the exception of B ii) read "hair," which is not so good
- 3 ie, "Before they make thy head into a jar" P. reads "Before they make thy head and dust into jars" 6
- 4 The other texts (with the exception of B ii) begin the line, "Go thou!" L reads "Go, sell the jar, and do not let go the cup"

139

This quatrain is P 246, B ii 511, L 650, S P 378, B. 642, N 382, and does not vary Compare q 85, and vide the note to that quatrain

- t Literally, "From whatever is not wine let the road out be best"
- 2 Feridun was the sixth King of the Paish-dadian dynasty of Persian rulers. He was the son of Abten, and was elevated to the throne by the exertions of the heroic blacksmith Kaf (or Kawah) after the overthrow of the tyrant Zohak
- 3 Kai-Khosrii was the grandson of Kai-Kāwūs (the Greek Cyaxares) He was identical with Cyrus the Mede of Greek history, and was the most brilliant of all the kings of the Kaianian dynasty. He conquered and killed Afrasiab, extended the kingdom of Persia to Syria, Asia Minor, and Egypt, and became a personage of occidental history by his conquest of Babylon and subsequent manumission of the Jews there in captivity. (Compare Isaiah, ch. xliv, v. 28, and ch. xlv., v. 1.) See Sir John Malcolm's "History of Persia." (2nd edition; London, 1829, Murray) and Sir Clements R. Markham's "General Sketch of the History of Persia." (London, 1874)

Compare Hāfiz "When Hāfiz is drunk, why should he value at a grain of barley the Empires of Kāwūs and Kaī?" 5

140

This quatrain is C 453, P 260, B ii 525, L 687, S P 380, B 678, N 384, W 428, and probably inspired F v 26 Compare also C 127 (L 261, P 86, B 258, W 209, N 464), which is a corresponding quatrain

"Why, all the Saints and Sages who discuss'd
Of the Two Worlds so wisely—they are thrust
Like foolish Prophets forth, their Words to som
Are scatter'd, and their Mouths are stopt with Dust."

1 B ii and C read "in the slumber," etc 4

زان پیش که کاسه ٔ سرمت کوزه کنند تو کوزه زذوش وکاسه از دست منه

139

يك جرعه مي كهنه زملك نو به از هرچه له مي طريق بيرون شو به جاميش به از ملك فريدون صد بار خشت سرخم زناج كيفسرو به

11%.

آنان که زپیش رفته اند ای ساقی در خاك غرور خفته اند ای ساقی before they make the hollow of thy skull into a jar, lower not the jar from thy shoulder, neither relinquish the cup.

139.

One draught of old wine is better than a new kingdom, avoid any way save that of wine—'tis better so;' the cup is a hundred times better than the kingdom of Feridun,' the tile that covers the jar is better than the crown of Kai-Khosru.'

140.

Those, O Saki, who have gone before us, have fallen asleep. O Saki, in the dust of self-esteem;

141

This quatrain is C 476, B ii 527, L 703, S P 384, B 693, and N 388

- 1 L reads "You threw away my rose-coloured wine 1 upon the earth"
- 2 khūkem ba dihūn, literally, "earth on my mouth!" a frequent expletive in the East khkish ba-dihūn, "may he perish," etc
- 3 tunfu = strange, incomprehensible, new, etc. The other texts are easier to render, they read, "Perhaps you are drunk, my lord!" 3
 - 4 B ii reads "tulip-coloured ' for " pure '

142

This quatrain is P $_{339}$ and B ii $_{530}$, and 18 found by W only here, and as L $_{728}$ (W $_{492}$).

1 L, for "baths" and "canals," reads "all capital" and "courtyards" B in also reads "courtyards"

رو باده خور وحقیقت از من بشنو بادمست هرآنچه گفته اند ای ماقی

191

ابریق می مسرا شکستی رہی بر من در عیشرا ببستی رہی بر میں در عیشرا ببستی رہی بر خالف بریغتی می ناب مرا عاکم بدھن که طرفه مستی رہی

194

ای چرخ همه خسیسرا چیز دهی گرمایه وآسیا و کاریز دهی

71

go thou and drink wine, and hear the truth from me, whatever they have said, O Saki, is but wind.

141.

Thou hast broken my jug of wine, O Lord; Thou hast shut upon me the door of happiness, O Lord; thou hast spilled my pure⁴ wine upon the earth;¹ may I perish! but thou art strange, O Lord!

142.

O heaven! thou givest something to every base creature, thou suppliest baths, and milistreams, and canals; 1

- 2 Literally, "the evening loaf"
- 3 tiz, literally, "quickly"
- 4 L's concluding distich varies a good deal, but I think it is corrupt.
 - "The free man cleans out his money-bags and lays out his shop, Perhaps he may reap profit from this heaven"

143.

This quatrain is C 495, P. 209, B ii 529, L 733, S P 379, B 721, N 383, W. 427, and it is virtually invariable

It would seem to have inspired F v 62 (which made its first appearance as F ii 64)

I must abjure the Balm of Life, I must, Scared by some After-reckoning ta'en on trust, Or lured with Hope of some Diviner Drink, To fill the Cup—when crumbled into Dust!

144

This quatrain is B ii. 569, L 710, S P. 392, B 700, N 397, and W 439. Compare also C 40 (L 63, W 57, B 60, N 54, S P 54), which is a corresponding quatrain

1 ... "From the scheme of the universe you suffer only hardships"

(ا) آزد میان مُست که دکان نهند . ساید که ازین طلف معاسر دهي آزاده بنان شب گـروگــان نهد شاید که بر اینچنین فلات تیز دهی

100

اي دل تو بامرار معمّا نـرسي در نكته و زبركـان دانا نـرسي اينجا بمي وجام بهشتي مي ساز كانها كه بهشتست رسي يا نرسي

119

از مطبخ دنيا تو همه دود خوري تا جند غمان بود ونابود خوري

آزا د . با ن شب کرد کانید تا یکر برانمین کلک نیز دی وابنبگا د
ای لز انسدار ما زی دیخت دیر کان دا از
ا نابی و ما مهبنی ما ز کا ناکه مشت ریل نر آ
وابنيا له
ازمطِب دیا تومه دودری اچنعنسان مردوام د ^ی

7:

the pure man plays hazard for his night's provisions: thou shouldst give readily for such a heaven?

143.

O heart! at the mysterious secret thou arrivest not, at the conceits of the ingenious philosophers thou arrivest not; make thyself a heaven here with wine and cup, for at that place where heaven is, thou mayst arrive, or may st not.

144.

Thou eatest always smoke from the kitchen of the world; how long wilt thou suffer miseries concerning what is or is not?

2 In the other texts (excepting B ii, which varies a little only in 1 3) the last two lines vary much "The world is a grievous detriment for those who inhabit it, renounce this detriment and everything becomes profitable for you"!

145

This quatrain is C 447, P 111, B ii 523, L 707, S P 389, B 697, N. 394, W 436, and is the seventh of E C 's examples It is the original of F v 44

Why, if the Soul can fling the Dust aside,
And naked on the Air of Heaven ride,
Were't not a Shame—were't not a Shame for him
In this Clay carcase crippled to abide?

This quatrain of F made its first appearance in the poem proper as F ii 49, in the form in which it appeared in the Preface to F i

Oh, if my Soul can fling his Dust aside, And naked on the air of Heaven ride, Is't not a Shame—is't not a Shame for Him so long in this Clay Suburb to abide?

- Cf M, Il 126-7 "The soul's portion was elevation, and the body's terrestrial degradation, a mixture of vile earth and pure spirit was formed "6"
- i C and N read "griefs" for "dust," and for "body" B ii and L use the commoner word "tn"
 - 2 Literally, "thou becomest upon the heavens"
 - 3 ie, The heavenly sphere in general
 - 4 C uses the words "thou adornest "4
- 5 E C translates "in a city of clay", but even "suburb" is better The Arabic word khittet means essentially a "boundary" or "confine"

146

This quatrain is C 480, P 106, B ii 539, L 706, S P 399, B 696, N 404, and W 446. It is another of the quatrains in which the idea recurs of the despised clay or jug warning its contemner of the transient nature of human life.

- I Literally, "I was head-happy" The other texts read, "I was drunk "5
- 2 aubash signifies the mob, the common hard E C translates, "And at the reckless freak my heart was glud," which is strongely free for so conscient ous a scholar
 - (1) دنیا که بر اهل او زیانیست عطیم کر ترك ریان کني هما سود حوري (2) غم (3) تن (4) کاري (5) سرمست بدم . (8) حاق بلندې داهست و تن پستي خاك محتمع هد حاك پست و جان ياك

مىرمايە ئغواھي كە جوي كم گردد مايە كە خورد چون تو ھمە سود خوري

100

اي دل زغبار جسم اگر باك شوي . تو روح مهردي بر افلاك شوي عرشت نشيس تو شرمت بادا كائي ومقبم خطّه خاك شوي

154

بر سنگ زدم دوش سبوي کاشي سر خوس بودم که کردم این اوباشي

73

thou desirest not a stock in trade, for its source weakens, and who will consume the capital, seeing that thou consumest all the profit?

145.

O soul! if thou canst purify thyself from the dust of the body,¹ thou, naked spirit, canst soar in the heavens,² the Empyrean is thy sphere,—let it be thy shame, that thou comest and art a dweller within the confines of earth.

146.

I smote the glass wine-cup upon a stone last night, my head was turned that I did so base a thing;

3. 4 Vide ante, fassim

147

I find this quatram only in P 263, and ma varied form as L 722 (B 711) It is a matter for comment that so careful and discriminating a collator as W. should have omitted so characteristic a quatram.

- 1 Literally, "hold up" L reads bar gr1
- 2 Literally, "heart-seeking, or heart-desired"
- 3 This duplicated adverb is a common form of Persian superlative
- 4 The second and third lines in L read
 - "Cheerfully seek the verdant spot and the bank of the stream, For this vault of heaven out of the moon-like faces of idols," etc 2

148

This quatrain is B ii 546, and is W 432, taken from this In a variant form it is N 300, not in S P) It contains the inspiration for F v 80

Oh Thou, who didst with pitfall and with gin Beset the Road I was to wander in, Thou wit not with Predestined Evil round Enmesh, and then impute my Fall to Sin!

A very similar passage occurs in the Mesnevi of Jellål-ud-din Rūmī (book τ , ch vi), in the story of the Caliph On ar and the Ambassador, which elaborates this theory of predestination

That same Destiny, though it should an hundred times waylay thee Will (one day) strike a paython for thee in the highest vault of heaven.

W 432 (edition 1883) was retained as No 241 in his edition of 1893, but it appears to have taken the place of one No 224 in his original edition of 1882. This was as follows

Thou dost with frequent snare beset the way, The Pilgrim's wandering footsteps to betray, And all poor wretches tangled in thy snares Dost seize as prisoners and as rebels slay

This edition gives no original text, but this verse is a good parallel to F's quatrain, and is so quoted by D r N reads this line, "On every side thou hast placed two hundred snares 4

11

2 N and W read, "It is your loss if," etc ?

(1) مرکیر
$$(2)$$
 محرام بسوي سندهزار و لت خوې کین چرخ ز مورت بنان مه روي (3) هم قط مند بار اگر راهت رمد (4) هر قرار چرخ فلك بار هاهنت رمد (4) در هر طرعي در او دو مند دام نهي (4) کشمنت اگر

با من بزبان حال مي گفت مىبو من چون تو بدم تو نيز چون من باشي

1100

بردار پیاله و سبو ای دلجوی خوش خوش بغرام گرد باغ ولب جوی بس شخص عزیزرا که چرخ بدخوی صد بار پیاله کرد و صد بار سبوی

1191

بر رهگذرم هـزار جـا دام نهي گوئي که بگيرمت اکر گام نهي

اِ من زابن طال ک ^{رن} بسبب من چه ن تو جرم تو پرخه ن من آ
وابنياً له
بردا ریا د کوپسرای بلوی فرش فرشخسرام کرداغ کوب برشخس فرز کوپسین م ^{فو} ی صد اربا د کرد وصد کربوی
، وابنيًّا له ،
ر ر مکذرم اوا داس ای کریک ایس از کام

74

the cup said to me in mystic language,3
"I was like thee, and thou also wilt be like me."4 147.

Grasp the wine-cup and the flagon, O heart's desire! the pleasantly, pleasantly, and cheerfully, wander in the garden

by the river brink;
 many are the excellent folk whom malicious heaven ⁴ has made a hundred times into cups, and a hundred times into flagons.

148.

In a thousand places on the road I walk, Thou placest snares, "I will catch thee if thou placest step in them";

- 3 Literally, "Not one speck of the world is free from thy wisdom"
- 4 N reads these two lines

Thou hast placed the snares thyself, and every one who steps into them Thou catchest, and slayest, and callest a sinner ¹

149

This quatrain is S P 408, N 413, and W 452, and it is No 13 of E C's examples It is with q 155 the true and close original of the beautiful F v 12.

A Book of Verses underneath the Bough, A Jug of Wine, a Loaf of Bread—and Thou Beside me singing in the Wilderness— Oh, Wilderness were Paradise enow

Compare qq 25, 32, 40, 11 fassim

- tangi means also "a sack," an W renders it "a skin of wine"
- down or "divan" a collection of verses in the alphabetical order of the final letters of the end rhymes (Steingass) Like this collection of quatrains, in fact
- 3 te, a bare subsistence, enough to keep life in one Steingass renders the phrase, "the last remains of life, or, the agonies of death" W translates "a moment of respite in life," which is hardly strong enough "A stopper of the last breath" would accurately render the opening of the line
 - 4 Compare I' v 11, line 3 "Where name of Slave and Sultan is forgot"

150

This quatrain is B ii 562, L 729 and B 717, whence (and from here) it becomes W 500. It shares with q 102 the sentiment of F v 42, q v. sub q 102 ý.

I Literally, " live thou justly "

(۱) حود دام بهي هر که در او کام نيد ... ع گيري و کشي و عاصيش نام بهي يك درّه رحكم تو جهان خالي نيست حكم تو كني و عاصيم نام نهي

119

تنگي مي ٔ لعل خواهم و ديواني . سدّ رمقي بايد و نصف ناني وانگه من وتو ننسته در ويراني خوشتر بود از مملکت سلطاني

10.

چندان غم بیهوده معور ساد بزی واندر ره بیداد دو باداد بزی

75 in no smallest thing is the world independent of Thee,³ Thou orderest all things, and callest me rebellious.⁴

149.

I desire a little¹ ruby wine and a book of verses,² just enough to keep me alive³ and half a loaf is needful; and then, that I and thou, should sit in a desolate place is better than the kingdom of a sultan.⁴

150.

Do not give way so much to vain grief,—live happily, and, in the way of injustice, set thou an example of justice,

2 Literally, "business"

151

This quatrain is C $_{485}$, B $_{11}$ $_{557}$, L $_{713}$, S P $_{415}$, B $_{702}$, N $_{420}$, and W $_{450}$

- 1. Laterally, "as often as I gaze "
- 2. *avan-ist is an obscure phrase in this place. It may mean as rendered here, or "there is life from the stream Kausar". The other texts begin the line, "There is lieavenly verdure and the stream Kausar".
- 3 Kausar, in Persian mythology, is the head-stream of the Muhammadan Paradise, whence all other rivers are supposed to flow. A whole chapter of the Qui'an is devoted to this miraculous stream. The bed is formed of gems, its water is whiter than milk, fresher than snow, sweeter than sugar, more perfumed than milk, inter alia. The cup-bearer charged with the duty of serving the blessed with this water in silver cups is Ali, the son-in-law of Muhammad Cf. M., Il. 445 to 450, "The Praise of Ali."
- my suffan is "to abandon, or consider as lost" Bill, N and W omit the word him. The line refers to Winterbeing transformed into Spring, as Hell might be replaced by Heaven. Mr. Binning (ho cit, vol. 11, p. 185) observes upon the garden of Kohrood. "the Shahzadah called it hihisht, but water and trees are such railties in this "ingdom that any place in which these are to be found in abundance is Paradise to a Persian."
 - 5 behishti-rūr, an oriental exaggeration for a beautiful person

152

This quatram is C 473, B ii 564, L 702 (not in B), and W 489. It contains the inspiration of F v 74

YESTERDAY This Day's Madness did prepare,
To-Morrow's Silence, Triumph, or Despair,
Drink! for you know not whence you came, nor why Drink! for you know not why you go, nor where

- 1 Literally, "they matured they cooked" Vide q 117, 1 4
- 2 Literally, "profit, interest on capital"
- 3 Compare Behaustán, 1st Garden

Thy share has been allotted to thee from all Eternity, How long wilt thou distress thyself for a livelihood

- 4 aiman shudan means "to be in safety-secure from"
- 5 L reads "thy clamour "2

(1) از سبزه بهشتست (²) غوغاي تو

چون آخر کار این جهان نیستی است انگار که نیستی وآزاد بـزی

چندان که نگاه می کنم هر سوئی در باغ روانست زکونر جوئی صحرا چو بهشت مند ر دوزخ گم گوی بنسین به بهشت یا بهشتی روئی

107

خوښایس که نصته اند سوداي نودي ایمن سده از همه نمناي تو دي

ر آرادگاه را ینجان نبتی آ در گرانسینی دازا در برای
وابضًا 1
چذان کر کاب کم مرسو پی «باع روانت رکوژ هر ی
حواد مثت ندر دورنه کم ک ^{وی} نشره مثت ایشنی روپ
وابنيًا ل
ٔ خرش میشیم مینها ما سودگی ا
این شارند تنای و قلی 76

since the final end' of this world is nothingness; suppose thyself to be nothing, and be free.

Gaze as I may on all sides, in the garden flows a stream from the river Kausar, the desert becomes like heaven, thou mayst say hell has disappeared, sit thou then in heaven with one heavenly-faced.

Be happy! they settled thy reward yesterday, and beyond the reach of all thy longings is yesterday;

 δ . Literally, "your to-morrow's business." L. reads "the place of your tomb to-morrow." 1

153

This quatrain is C 498, P 331, B ii 570, L 693, S P 422, B 684, N 427, and W 404. It is also L 730, the only repetition that I have noticed in that text

- I Here we have la'l, meaning the colour red, instead of the "ruby" gem, to, "ruby" wine, reinforced by "tulip-coloured"
 - 2 L for "pure" ends the line like the first, āi sāki.
- 3 L for "pure" in this line uses the common word fak_i and ends the line as before, aisāki

154

I do not find this quatrain in any of the texts under consideration. We find in it the idea of F v 72, quoted sub q 134 $(q \ v)$, which contains the inspiration for the remainder of F 's quatrain. Compare q 41

1 kuzā, fate, fatality

نو شاد بزي که بي تقاصای تو دي دادند قرار کار صرداي تو دي

101

درده مي لعل لاله گون صاحي . بكشاي زحلق منيسه خون صافي كامروز برون زجام مي نيست مرا يك دوست كه دارد اندرون صافي .

در گوس دلم گفت علك پنهاني حكمي كه قضا بود زمن مي داني live happily, for without any importunity on thy part yesterday, they appointed with certainty what thou wilt do to-morrow, by yesterday!

77

153.

Pour out the red wine of pure tulip colour,¹ draw the pure blood² from the throat of the jar, for to-day, beside the wine-cup, there is not, for me, one friend who possesses a pure heart.

To the ear of my heart Heaven whispered secretly:—
"The commands that are decreed thou mayst learn from me:

2 Compare Gulistan, Introduction

Cloud, and wind, and moon, and sun, move in the sky,
That thou mayst gain bread, and not eat it unconcerned,
For thee all are revolving and obedient,
It is against the requirements of justice if thou obeyest not 1

155

This quatrain is C 474, P 229, B ii 591, L 697, S P 442, B 688, N 448, and W 479 Compare q 149, which is identical in sentiment and idea, and with this quatrain gives us the original of F v 12, q v sub q 149

- i dust dadan = to happen, or, come to pass
- 2 B ii, L, N, and W read "two mens of wine" 2 Vule q 77, note 4, and q 104, note 5 Men (or mann) is a variable measure. The men-t-tahrise equals about 7½ lbs, the men-t-shahini 6 equals 11½-15 lbs, the men-t-shahini 6 equals 116 lbs. Herrick uses the term twice to indicate a measure. Cf. (Hesperides. To Anthea)

Behold for us the Naked Graces stay, With mainds of roses for to strew the way

And again

There, filling maunds with cowslips, you May find your Amaryllis

(1b, a Dialogue)

- $\mathfrak{z}=P$, N , and W read "with a tulip-cheeked one sitting," etc ,7 and C and L , "with a moon-faced one ""
- 4 C reads "That would be a luxury, fit pastime for any sultan "2 L reads" It is a luxury the proceeding of any sultan "10

150

This quatrain is C 469, B ii 589, L 694, S P 441, B 685, N 447, and W 478 Whether by accident or by design, it seems to be connected with the preceding ruba'i, which is rate in a diwan arrangement

(1) ادر و باد و مه حورست، و فلك دركارات نا تو بادي بكف آرې و بعقلت بخورى همه از بهر دو سر گشته فرمان بردار سرط انصاف بناشد كه دو فرمان بنري (2) از مي دو مني (3) من تبريزي (4) من سناهي (5)من ري (4)من خاشمي (7) با لالة رخي (8) ماة رخي (9) فيش باشة دهيمي (10) هيش فست كه بيست قدم در گردش خويش اگر مرا دست بدي خودرا برهاند مي زمر گرداني

100

گر دست دهد زمغز گندم نانی از می کدوی ز گوسفندی رانی وانگه من وتو نشسته در ویرانی عیشی بود آن نه غدّ هر سلطانی

104

گر زانك بدست آيدت ازمي دو مني مي نوش نهر معفل وهر انجمني

ا کر دادست می ا ذہبے ذیر کردا	•
ينگاد	9
رَمَوْ کَدُمْ اپ ِ وی رکوسنب بی ای مِشْنهٔ درویرا نی وآن زمدیرپ بطاب	ازی که واکمهٔ من و تو ^ر
ت ازن دو ت ایت ازن دو من در مخاور راسیخی	گرزاک ٹ ۾ س

78

had I a hand in my own revolutions,2
I would have saved myself from giddiness."

155

If a loaf of wheaten-bread be forthcoming,¹ agourd of wine,² and a thigh-bone of mutton, and then, if thou² and I be sitting in the wilderness,—that would be a joy to which no sultan can set bounds.⁴

156.

If henceforth two measures of wine come to thy hand, drink thou wine in every assembly and congregation,

- r N. and W read "for he who acts thus," leliminating the reference to God
 - 2 Literally, "has freedom from care"—"leisure"
- 3 A good specimen of oriental imagery W translates "from saintly airs like yours, or grief like mine" N translates "he is spared the unpleasantness of seeing moustaches like yours," etc. Cf. M, 1 2955

157

This quatrain is C 494, P 88, B 11 590, L 732, B 720, W 490, and it is No 30 of E C's examples B in 593, N 450 (S P 444) is a paraphrase of it We recognise in it the sentiment of F v 99

Ah Love! could you and I with Him conspire To grasp this sorry Scheme of Things entire, Would we not shatter it to bits—and then Remould it nearer to the Heart's desire!

The quatrain in N runs

If I were free and could use my own volition,
And independent of the griefs of Fate and of good and bad,
It were better that in this hole of depravity
I had neither come, nor gone, nor lived 4

Orientalists will recognise here a coarseness, common in oriental literature, but very rate in Omar Khayyām

- I Literally, "if my coming was by me"
- 2 'alam-i-khāk, the world, or, the human body -C, P, and L read "in this ruined monastery".

158

This quatram (which, ending in d, is out of its diwan order) is W 218, taken from this MS P 190, B it 235, L 331, and B 327 are somewhat similar in sentiment, but may be regarded as only corresponding quatrams

We have here the germ of the opening and closing verses of F's " $K\bar{u}za$ $n\bar{u}mah$ " section, with their references to "hunger-stricken Ramazan" (F v 82), and F v 90

The little Moon look'd in that all were seeking,
And then they jogg'd each other, "Brother! Brother!
Now for the Porter's shoulder-knot a-creaking!"

- r Ramazān is the ninth month of the Muhammadan year, which is observed as a month of fasting and penance, during which rigid Muslims neither eat, drink, wash, or caress their wives The first day of Shawwāl is theretore eagerly looked forward to in the East
 - 2 Literally, "of growing, burgeoning," i.e., Spring
- 3 The kawwäl is the professional story-teller, or improvisatore of the oriental coffee-house

(1) چنان کرد
$$(2)$$
 گر من بمراد و اخسیار حودمي 0 فارغ ر غم قضا و نیك و بد مي 0 دن ده بودي که اندرین کون و فساد 0 نه آمد مي نه شد مي نه بد مد 0 دير خراب 0

کانکس که جهان ساخت فراغت دارد از سبلت چون توي و ريش چو مني

104

گر آمدنم بين بدي نامدمي ورنيز شدن بين بدي كي شدمي به زان نبدي كه اندرين عالم خاك نه آمدمي نه بدمي

101

ماه رمضان برفت وشوال آمد هنگام نشاط عیش وقتوال آمد

for He who made the world does not occupy Himself about moustaches like thine, or a beard like mine.

157.

Had I charge of the matter I would not have come, and likewise could I control my going, where should I go? were it not better than that, that in this world I had neither come, nor gone, nor lived?

158.

The month of Ramazan 1 passes and Shawwal comes, the season of increase, 2 and joy, and story-tellers 3 comes; 4 pusht means the back, and also the "knot" upon which porters carry their burdens. Winclines to read this pusht bast, a load, or pack, rather than pusht pusht, which he says he does not understand. It is undoubtedly a poetic form of pushta pusht, which means "back to back," as porters help one another to raise their loads.

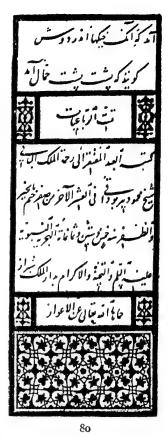

The final passage, containing the history of this MS, related by the scribe Mahmud Yerbudaki, is written in Arabic, as is commonly the case in Persian MSS.

آمد گه آنکه خیکها اندر دوش گویند که پشت پشت حمّال آمد

تمّت الرباعيات

كتبه العبد المفتقر الي رحمة الملك إلباقي شيخ معمود يربوداقي في العشر آلاخر من صفر ختم بالخير والظفر بسنه خمس وستين و ثمانمائه الهجرية النبوية عليه السلم والتعية والاكرام بدار الملك شيراز.

حماها الله تعالى عن الاعواز now comes that time when "Bottles upon the shoulder!" they say,—for the porters come and are back to back.4

END OF THE QUATRAINS.

Written by the humble slave, who is in need of mercies of Eternal God, Mahmūd Yerbūdākī. Finished in the last decade of Safar, with blessing and victory, in the year Eight hundred and sixty-five of the Hijrah of the Prophet, upon whom be peace, and benediction, and honour; in the capital Shīrāz.

May God most high protect her from evils.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

The following Bibliography of the Ruba'iyat of Omar Khayyām cannot, and does not pretend to anything like completeness. It is merely a catalogue of the literature of the subject so far as it is in my own possession, or is known to me. For some of the references to MSS. and to American editions, I am indebted to Mr. Nathan Haskell Dole.

MSS.

British Museum.

- I Original MSS., No. 330, ff. 109, containing 423 ruba'iyat (18th century).
- 2 Original MSS., No. 331, ff. 92, containing 540 ruba'iyat (A.H. 1033, A.D. 1624).
- 3 Additional MSS., No. 27,261, containing a few ruba'iyat in Section 15 (16th century).

Bodlesan Library, Oxford.

- 4 MS., No. 524, containing 405 ruba'iyat.
- 5 ,, No. 525 (this MS.).
- No. 1210. A collection of Miscellaueous Poems, containing several ruba'iyat on pp. 88-90.

Cambridge University Library.

7 MS., Add. 1055, ff. 222, containing 801 ruba'iyat. Not dated, but its first owner inscribed his name in it in A.H. 1195 (A.D. 1781).

India Office.

- 8 MS., No. 2420, pp. 212-267, containing 512 ruba'iyat.
- 9 ,, No. 2486, pp. 158-194, ,, 362

Bengal Asiatic Society's Library, Calcutta.

- 10 MS., No. 1548, containing 516 ruba'iyat.
 - Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris.
- 10a MS., Supplément Persin 745. A Diwan of Emad dated A.H. 786 (A.D. 1384). One of the owners of this has written 6 ruba'iyat of Omar upon the blank side of fol. 64, in a handwriting of the end of the 9th or beginning of the 10th century, A.H. They are i.=L. 769; ii.=L. 84; iii.=L. 120; iv.=L. 381; v.=L. 545; vi. not in L.; vii.=L. 40. And on the leaf containing the colophon he has written a variant of q. 11: of the Bodleian MS.

- 10b Ancien Fonds 349, ff. 181-210, 213 ruba'iyat, dated A.H. 920 (A.D. 1514).
- 10c Supplément Persan 823, ff. 92-113, 349 ruba'iyat, dated A.H. 934 (A.D. 1527).
- 10d Supplément Persan 826, ff. 391-394, 75 ruba'iyat, dated A.H. 937 (A.D. 1530).
- 10e Supplément Persan 793, f. 104, 6 ruba'iyat in an 11th century (а.н.) handwriting.
- 10f Supplément Persan .833. A MS. of the Atash Kadah, containing 31 ruba'iyat, dated A.H. 1217 (A.D. 1802).

Königliche Bibliothek, Berlin.

- 11 MS., No. 35, containing 238 ruba'iyat.
- 12 ,, No. 666, ,, 65
- 13 , No. 671, ,, a collection of ruba'iyat, many of which appear to be Omar's.

99

- 14 MS., No. 673, ditto.
- 15 ,, No. 672, containing 40 ruba'iyat.
- 16 ,, No. 674, ,, 380
- 17 ,, No. 697, ,, 43 ,,

Herzogliche Bibliothek, Gotha.

- 18 A MS. and a Turkish version by Daulat Shah.
- 18a The Bankipur MS. This was discovered at Bankipur at the moment that these sheets were 'raving the press. It is dated A.H. 961-2 (A.D. 1554), and contains 603 ruba'iyat. It is the largest collection known of so early a date.

LITHOGRAPHS.

- 19 Calcutta, 1836, containing 492 ruba'iyat.
- 19a Teheran, 1861, ,, 460
- 20 Tabriz, 1868, ,, 453 ,,
- 21 Lucknow, 1868, ,, 716
- 22 ,, 1878, ,, 763
- 23, 24 Other Lucknow editions were issued in 1882 and 1883, but I have not seen them.
- 25 Lucknow, 1894, containing 770 ruba'iyat.
- 26 St. Petersburg, 1888, ,, 453
- 27 In the Atash Kadalı of Azr of Isfahan, Bombay, A.H. 1299
 (A.D. 1882), 31 ruba'iyat. (Vide supra, 10f.)
- 28 A selection of poems published at Tcheran, 1857 containing 230 ruba'iyat of Omar, and other ruba'iyat of Baba Tahir, Abū Sa'id, Attar, etc.
- 29 I have a similar collection lithographed at Bombay, in A.H. 1297 (A.D. 1880), containing 756 ruba'iyat attributed to Omar.

PRINTED TEXTS.

- 30 Nicolas, Paris, 1867, containing 464 ruba'iyat. Described elsewhere.
- 31 Whinfield, London, 1883 ,, 500 ,, ,, ,,

FOREIGN TRANSLATIONS.

- 32 J. Von Hammer-Purgstall. Geschichte der Schönen Redekunste Persiens. Vienna, 1818, pp. 80-83, containing 25 quatrains.
- 33 The fourth part of A. Wolff's "Die Classiker aller Zeiten und Nationen" (Berlin, 1860-77) is entitled "Die National Literatur sämmtliche Volken des Orients," by A. E. Wollheim da Fonseca; pp. 206-209 contain an essay upon Omar, and nineteen of Von Hammer-Purgstall's quatrains, which are stigmatised as inaccurate and badly put together.
- 34 Garcin de Tassy. Note sur les Ruba'iyat de Omar Khaiyam. Paris, 1857, containing 10 ruba'iyat with prose translations. Vide Introduction.
- 35 .A. F. von Schack. Strophen des Omar Chijam. Stuttgart, 1878; contains 336 quatrains.
- 36 F. Bodenstedt. Die Lieder und Sprüche des Omar Chajjam. Breslau, 1881. 3rd edition, 1882; 4th edition, 1889; contains 467 quatrains.
- 36a J. Pizzi. Storia della Poesia Persiana. Turin, 1894. Translation ot 63 ruba'iyat.
- 366 V. Rugarli. Dieci Quartine di Omar Khayyam tradotte dal Persiano. Bologna, 1895.
- 37 V. Rugarli. "Dodici Quartine di Omar Khayyam tradotte dal Persiano." Bologna, 1895; 12 quatrains translated from Nicolas (77, 83, 85, 94, 138, 152, 235, 269, 346, 370, 396, and another).
- 38 Bela Harrach [Translation]. Eastern Pearls by the Persian Cynic Poet, Omar Khayyam. Budapest, N.D.; 130 pp., 16mo. (Follows the order of Nicolas.)

EDWARD FITZGERALD'S TRANSLATION.

- 39 1st edition, London, 1859. Quaritch. Containing 75 quatrains.
- 40 2nd ,, ,, 1868. ,, ,, ,, 110
- 41 3rd ,, ,, 1872. ,, ,, 101 42 4th ,, ,, 1879. ,, ,, 101
- 43 5th ,, ,, 1889, Macmillan. In the "Letters and Literary Remains of Edward FitzGerald," edited by W. Aldis Wright.
- 44 The same, reprinted separately. London, 1890; Macmillan. This has been reprinted as required.
- 45 An anonymous edition privately printed at Madras (Adiyar), 1862, containing a reprint of the 1859 edition, of Garcin de Tassy's Note (No. 24, subra), and Professor Cowell's article (No. 60, intra).
 - Note (No. 34, supra), and Professor Cowell's article (No 69, infra), with a translation of a few additional quatrains.
- 46 A pirated edition, got up by Mr. Quilter and a few friends. London, 1883, J. Campbell; royal 4to.
- 47 An edition made up from all four FitzGerald editions, printed on his own private press (the Ashendene Press), 1896, by H. St. John Hornby and his sisters. Fifty copies only; printed for private circulation.

AMERICAN REPRINTS.

- 48 1st American, from the 3rd London edition. Boston, 1878. (The 23rd edition of this was published in 1894.)
- 49 Elihu Vedder's Illustrated edition. Boston, 1884; folio.
- 49a A small quarto print of the text alone was issued at the same time as the above, printed on one side only of strips of paper, the foreedge being left uncut, like a Chinese or Japanese book. It has 45 pages, and no title-page, imprint, or date. A Note on page 1 explains that it is printed as an accompaniment to the Vedder illustrations. The quatrains are in the order in which Vedder rearranged them, and FitzGerald's Introduction and Notes come after the poem, at the end of the book.
- 50 The same, reduced in size only. Boston, 1886; 4to.
- 51 ,, Popular edition. Boston, 1894; small 4to. With an Introduction, etc., by M. K.
- 52 The Grolier Club edition. New York, 1885.
- 53 The Works of Edward FitzGerald. Boston, 1887. Two vols. Vol. I. contair; the Ruba'iyat.
- 54 The Ruba'iyat, separately printed, with Introduction and M. K.'s Notes. Boston, 1888.
- 55 Pamphlet edition, issued at 20 cents, in a green paper wrapper. San Francisco, 1891.
- 56 The Bibelot edition. Portlan 1 (Maine), 1893. Mosher.
- 57 The Old World edition. Portland (Maine), 1895. Mosher.
- 58 The St. Paul edition. St. Paul (Minnesota), 1895 and 1897. Porter.
- 59 The Multivariorum Edition of Nathan Haskell Dole, in 2 vols. Boston, 1895 (J. Knight Co.). This monumental work is a marvel of careful collation and compilation. In it the fullest references are given to all other translations, and the four editions are minutely compared. All the best magazine literature is included, and most of the poetry inspired by Omar. It is a work that no student of Omar can do without; but I understand that the representatives of Edward FitzGerald have refused to allow it to be published in England.

59a The same, 2nd edition, greatly enlarged and illustrated. Boston, 1897. L. C. Page & Co.

There are other American reprints appearing almost daily, which are copied or re-arranged from Messrs. Macmillan's current edition.

OTHER ENGLISH TRANSLATIONS.

- 60 E. H. Whinfield. 1st edition, 1882; containing 253 quarrains.
- 61 ,, ,, 2nd ,, 1883; ,. 500 ,, and the text.
- 62 E. H. Whinfield. 3rd edition, 1893; containing 267 quatrains.
- 63 Anonymous. [E. A. Johnson.] "The Dialogue of the Gulshan i Raz..." With Selections from the Ruba'iyat of Omar Khayyām. London, 1887.

- 64 Louisa S. Costello. "The Rose Garden of Persia." London, 1887; pp. 66-76. Omar Khayyám.
- 65 John L. Garner. "The Strophes of Omar Khayyám." Milwaukee, 1888; 12mo.
- 66 Justin H. McCarthy. A Prose translation, entirely printed in capital letters. London, 1889.
- 67 There is an American reprint of this published in the Bibelot Series by Mosher, Portland (Maine), 1896, in which the translations are put into ordinary print and numbered.
- 67a The Quatrains of Omar Kheyyam of Nishapour, now first completely done into English verse from the Persian, in accordance with the original forms, with a biographical and critical introduction by John Payne, etc. London, 1898. Printed for the
 - Villon Society by private subscription, and for private circulation only.

MAGAZINE ARTICLES.

To attempt to compile anything like a complete catalogue of these would be to attempt a vain task. The following are articles that I have myself had occasion to consult, and consider to be of sufficient importance to warrant their inclusion in a bibliography of Omar Khayyām:

- 68 Journal Asiatique (Paris), No. 9, 1857. Garcin de Tassy. "Note sur les Rubā'iyāt de Omar Khaiyám."
- 69 Calcutta Review, January, 1858. E. B. Cowell. Described elsewhere.
- 70 Le Moniteur Universel, December 8, 1867. "Les Quatrains d'Omar."
- 71 North American Review, October, 1869. C. E. Norton. Review of Nicolas's edition and Fitzgerald's 2nd edition.
- 72 Fraser's Magazine, June, 1870. "Omar Khayyam, the Astronomer-Poet of Persia."
- 73 Old and New (Boston, U.S.A.), May, 1872. The Rev. J. W. Chadwick. "The Poems of Omar Khayyám."
- 74 Canadian Monthly (Toronto). Vol. X. (1876), p. 399. Fidelis [A. M. Machar]. "An Old Persian Poet."
- 75 Contemporary Review, March, 1876. H. Schutz-Wilson. "The Ruba'iyat of Omar Khayyám."
- 76 The Galaxy (New York), September, 1876. J. H. Siddons. "A Persian Poet."
- 77 Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, No. 46, 1877. P. Whalley and C. S. Muradabad. "Metrical Translations from the Quatrains of 'Umar Khayyam' (with text; 9 quatrains).
- 78 Atlantic Monthly, April, 1878. Thos. B. Aldrich. "A Persian Poet."
- 79 Fraser's Magazine, May, 1879. Jessie E. Cadell. "The True Omar Khayyám."
- 80 Academy, January 17, 1885. Whitley Stokes. "Translation of 18 Ruba'iyat."

- 81 Saturday Review, January 16, 1886. (J. H. McCarthy.)
 - 82 Macmillan's Magazine, November, 1887. H. G. Keene. "Omar Khayyám."
 - 83 The New Englander (New Haven, U.S.A.). Vol. XLIX. (1888), p. 328. W. L. Phelps. "Schopenhauer and Omar Khayyám."
 - 84 Harvard Monthly (Cambridge, Mass.), December, 1885. A. B. Houghton. "A Study in Despair."
 - 85 Fortnightly Review, July, 1889. E. Gosse. "Edward FitzGerald."
 - 86 Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine, November, 1889. F. H. Groome. "Edward FitzGerald."
 - 87 Cornhill Magazine, December, 1890. "Omar Khayyám's Ruba'ıyat." (Translation of 10 Ruba'ıyat.)
 - 88 National Review, December, 1890. C. J. Pickering. "'Umar.of Naishapur."
 - 89 The Nation, October 26, 1893. Moncure D. Conway. "The Omar Khayyam Cult in England."
 - 90 English Illustrated Magazine, February, 1894. E. Clodd. "Edward FitzGeral"."
- gr Calcutta Review, 1895. II. G. Keene. "Loose Stanzas."
 - 92 Il Convito (Rome), June, 1895, pp. 397-415. A. de Bosta. "Note su Omar Khayyám e su Elihu Vedder"
 - 93 Fortnightly Review, December, 1896 J. A. Murray. "Omar Khaiyam."
 - 93a Indian Magazine, March 1898. B. B. Nagarkar. "Lecture on Omai Khaiyain."

I have purposely avoided Foreign Magazine Articles, except where they are of great importance.

I do not propose to give references to poems in praise or in imitation of Omar. Their name is legion. The most notable will be found among the works of Andrew Lang, Mathilde Blind, Christopher Cranch, Theodore Watts, and Rosamund Marriott Watson. R. le Gallienne has filled the upper half of a small book with such verses. All these find a place in Mr. N. H. Dole's monumental edition.

GENERAL ITEMS.

94 One of the most interesting and at the same ame unattabable items in the literature of Cmar is the fulfilment of PitzGerald's idea Ff putting the quatrains into Latin verse, as follows:

"Ruba'iyat of Omar Khayyám, the Astronomer-poet of Persia, rendered into English verse by Edward FitzGerald, and into Latin verse by Herbert Wilson Greene, M.A., B.C.L., Fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford." Privately Printed (Oxford), 1893.

95 There should also be mentioned Miss Liza Lehmann's Song Cycle, "In a Persian Garden," in which all, or parts of, thirty-one quatrains are arranged for four voices. It was performed for

- the first time (in public) at St. James's Hall, 14th December, 1896, and is fully described in the "Programme and Analytical Remarks" for that evening (Chappell).
- 96 V. Schukovsky. "Omar Khayyam. I 'Strastvuyushchiya Chetveroctishiya.'" (Trans.: Omar Khayyam and the "wandering" Quatrains.) St. Petersburg, 1898.
- 97 E. Heron-Allen. "Some Sidelights upon Edward FitzGerald's Poem, 'The Ruba'iyat of Omar Khayyam.' Being the substance of a Lecture delivered at the Grosvenor Crescent Club and Women's Institute on the 22nd March, 1898." London, 1898.

تمام شد

SOME SIDELIGHTS UPON EDWARD FITZGERALD'S POEM.

"THE RUBA'IYAT OF OMAR KHAYYĀM."

Being the Substance of a Lecture delivered at the Grosvenor Crescent Club and Women's Institute on the 22nd March, 1898.

THERE is material for much subtle argument-material indeed for discussion such as is dear to the souls of the selfproclaimed Wise Men of the East-in the following problem: Did Omar Khayyam give fame to Edward FitzGerald, or did Edward FitzGerald give European fame to Omar Khayyām? And by fame I mean, not the respect paid to a great poet by students of the language in which he wrote, but that farreaching and universal popularity which enshrouds the names of Edward FitzGerald and Omar Khayyam in every quarter of the known world where the English language is spoken by natives or colonists. Though the recent utterances of Colonel Hay, the United States Ambassador to this country, may seem, even to Omar's most fervent devotees, a trifle exaggerated,1 it is not, I think, too much to say that, even in this latter half of the 19th century, when the cult of particular poets has drawn bands of men and women together and given us Shakespeare Societies, Shelley Societies, Browning Societies, and the like, there is no freemasonry so infallible, no sympathy

Daily Chronule, 9th December, 1897—"The exquisite beauty, the fault-less form, the singular grace of those amazing stanzas, were not more wonderful than the depth and breadth of their profound philosophy, their knowledge of life, their dauntless courage, their serene facing of the ultimate problems of life and death. I came ulpon a literal translation of the Ruba'iyat, and I saw that not the least remarkable quality of FitzGerald's poem was its fidelity to the original. It is not to the disadvantage of the later poet that he followed so closely in the footsteps of the earlier. There is not a hill-post in India or a village in England where there is not a coterie to whom Omar, Khayyam is a familiar friend and a bond of union."

so profound, as that which unites the lovers of the quatrains of Omar Khayyām, in the form in which they have been made known to us by the beautiful, the eternal poem of "Old Fitz"—the Laird of Littlegrange.

The incunabulum, the earliest archive of the cult, is admittedly the single verse attributed to the ghost of Omar (by whom it was recited in a dream to his mother) and recorded in the "History of the Religion of the Ancient Persians, Parthians and Medes," by Dr. Thomas Hyde, Regius Professor of Arabic in the University of Oxford, in the year 1700.² This is the quatrain which was rendered by FitzGerald in the Introduction to his poem:

O thou who burn'st in Heart for those who burn In Hea, whose fires thyself should feed in turn; How long be crying, "Mercy on them, God!" Why, who art thou to teach, and He to learn.

The German renderings of Josef von Hammer-Purgstall and Friedrich Ruckert would not by themselves have called Omar to the position which he holds to-day among the poets of the world, and without the poem of FitzGerald the record of the astronomer-poet might have closed with the publication of his treatise upon Algebra and the higher mathematics, which was given to the world in 1851 by Dr. Woepcke, Professor of Mathe-

```
2 "Veterum Persarum et Parthorum et Medorum religionis historia" Oxford, 1700, 2nd Edition, 1760 Appendix, pp 529, 530
```

3 Dr Hyde's rendering runs

O combustus combustus Combustione! Vac, a te est Ignis Gehennae Accensis! Quousque dicis, Omaro misericors esta? Quousque Deum, Cafut Misericordiai, docebis?

which is a more correct rendering than FitzGerald's of the original, which is C r, L 769, B 755, S P 453, B n 537, W 488, N 459 Persian.

5 "Grammatik, Poetik und Rhetorik der Perser, herausgegeben von W Pertsch Gotha, 1874 matics in the University of Bonn 4/8 Dr. Woepcke has pointed out in the Introduction to his translation that the Algebra of Omar Khayyam first attracted the notice of mathematicians in 1742, when a Dutch savant, Gerard Meerman, called attention to a manuscript of his treatise, bequeathed by one Warner to the town of Leyden. The citation occurs in the Introduction to Meerman's "Specimen calculi fluxionalis." Succeeding mathematicians called attention to the work; but the first important consideration that it received was at the hands of L. A. Sedillot, who announced in the Nouveau Journal Asiatique, in May, 1834, the discovery of an incomplete MS. of the same treatise in the Bibliothèque Royale in Paris. It was reserved for Professor Libri to discover, in the same place, a complete MS. of the work, and it was from the Leyden MS., the Sedillot fragment, and the Libri MS. that Dr. Woepcke edited his admirable text and translation. In his Introduction Dr. Woepcke gives a translation of the account of Omar from the Tarīkh ul hukamā of Jamal ud Din 'Alı, which has been so often quoted in articles upon the poet,7 and observes upon it that Omar "is a detestable man, but an unequalled astronomer; he is perhaps a heretic, but surely he is a philosopher of the first order." This opinion would appear to have been shared by Elphinstone, who, in his account of Cabul, places on record what may, perhaps, be looked upon as an undesirable precursor of the Omar Khayyām Club. He says: "Another sect, which is sometimes confounded with the Sufis, is one which bears the name of Moollah Zukkee, who was its great patron in Cabul. Its followers hold that all the prophets were impostors and all revelation an invention. They seem very doubtful of the truth of a future state, and even of the being of a God. Their tenets appear to be very ancient, and are precisely those of the old Persian poet Khayyam (sic, Kheioom), whose works exhibit such specimens of impiety as probably never were equalled in any other language. Khayyam dwells particularly on the existence of evil, and taxes the Supreme Being with the introduction of it in terms which can scarcely The Sufis have unaccountably pressed this be believed. writer into their service; they explain away some of his blasphemies by forced interpretations; others they represent as innocent freedoms and reproaches such as a lover may pour out against his beloved. The followers of Moollah Zukkee are said to take the full advantage of their release from the fear of hell and the awe of a Supreme Being, and to be the most dissolute and unprincipled profligates in the kingdom. opinions nevertheless are cherished in secret, and are said to be very prevalent among the licentious nobles of the Court of Shah Mahmoud." And, potwithstanding that Professor Cowell made the Algebra of O nar Khayyam the text for his article in the Calcutta Review (January, 1858), here, but for FitzGerald, might have rested the fame of him who, as Dr. Hyde described him, was "one of the Eight who settled the Jalāli cra, in 1079," a computation of time which, says Gibbon,⁹ surpassed the Julian and approached the accuracy of the Gregorian style.

^{6 &}quot;L'Algèbre d'Omar Alkháyyamı," publice, traduite et accompagnee d'extraits de manuscrits medits par F Woepeke Paris, 1851

⁷ Vide Nathan H Dole's Multivariorum edition of the "Ruba'iyat of Omar Khayyem" Boston (Mass), 1896 Vol ii, pp 457-461

⁸ The Hon Mountstuart Elphinstone "An account of the Kingdom of Caubul and its Dependencies in Persia, Tartary, and India" *London, 1815 Ch v, p 209

The object of the present essay, however, is, not to analyse the quatrains composed by, or attributed to Omar Khayyām, but to examine by the light of diligent research the poem of Edward FitzGerald, which was founded upon and took its title from those quatrains, or (ruba'iyat). Almost from the day upon which FitzGerald's poem first saw the light, a controversy, in which question and doubt have been uppermost, has raged round the problem of how far it can claim to be regarded as a correct rendering—I will not say translation, for that is an expression that cannot be properly applied to it—of the original quatrains. remarked in another place,10 "A translation pure and simple it is not, but a translation in the most classic sense of the term it undoubtedly is." Since expressing that view, however I have had occasion to modify it somewhat. Prof. Charles Eliot Norton has summed up the position in a passage unsurpassed in the literature of criticism." He says: "FitzGerald is to be called 'translator' only in default of a better word, one which should express the poetic transfusion of a poetic spirit from one language to another, and the re-representation of the ideas and images of the original in a form not altogether diverse from their own, but perfectly adapted to the new conditions of time, place, custom and habit of mind in which they reappear. . . . It is the work of a poet inspired by the work of a poet; not a copy, but a reproduction; not a translation, but the re-delivery of a poetic inspiration."

^{9 &}quot;Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," chap lvii, Gibbing's edition, 1890, vol iv, p 180 Vide also Dr Hyde, loc cit, chap xvi, pp 200-211.

FitzGerald's poem is, however, something more than this. Stated in the fewest possible words, the poem familiar to English readers as the "Ruba'iyat of Omar Khayyām" is the expressed result of PitzGerald's entire course of Persian studies. There are many isolated lines and ideas, and more than one entire quatrain for which diligent study has revealed no corresponding passages in the original quatrains of Omar Khayyām—notably, for instance, the quatrain:

O Thou who Man of baser Earth did'st make, And ev'n with Paradisc devised the Snake: For all the Sin wherewith the Face of Man Is blacken'd—Man's forgiveness give—and take!

and the opening quatram, which Mr. Aldis Wright, the editor of his "Letters and Literary Remains," says "is entirely his own." Even Professor Cowell has said, ex cathedrá, "there is no original for the line about the snake," and attri-

¹⁰ I ide Introduction, p xxxi

¹¹ In the North American Review, October, 1869.

¹² London, 1889 Macmillan, 3 vols

butes the last line to a mistake of FitzGerald's translating a quatrain from Nicolas, which led him to "invent" the line. We shall presently see that this is not so, save in so far as that FitzGerald took these lines by a process of automatic cerebration, not from Omar, but from other sources. The manner in which he wrote his poem must be borne in mind. 'Professor Cowell, writing to me (under date 8th July, 1897), says: "I am quite sure that he did not make a literal prose version first; he was too fond of getting the strong vivid impression of the original as a whole. He' pondered this over and over afterwards, and altered it in his lonely walks, sometimes approximating nearer to the original, and often diverging farther. He was always aiming at some strong and worthy equivalent; verbal accuracy he disregarded." Composing his poem in this manner, with the original ruba'iyat not before him, all the impressions stored in his brain as the result of his extensive studies of Persian poetry, and Persian history, manners and customs, were present in his mind, and the echoes of those studies are clearly recognisable in the lines and passages which have defied the research of students of the original quatrains.

That no one should have called attention to this before, surprises me, for the process was indicated clearly by Professor Cowell in his note upon the opening lines of quatrain No. 33:

Earth could not answer; nor the seas that mourn In flowing Purple, of their Lord forlorn.

FitzGerald corresponded with Professor Cowell upon these two very lines—or rather upon the idea contained in them—in March, 1857, but it was reserved for the latter to call attention to the fact that they were taken from the Mantik ut-Tair (the Parliament, or Language of Birds) of Ferid-ud-din Attar. FitzGerald himself never acknowledged in his printed works the assistance of anyone, or (except in the case of Mr. Binning's Journal) the sources of any of his information, but I have followed the clue given by Professor Cowell, and by dint of reading every work to which FitzGerald refers in his letters, during the time when he was composing his poem, I have traced the actual originals of those debatable lines, and discovered the sources from which his information concerning Persia and the Persians was derived.

FitzGerald, in 1845, was repelled rather than attracted by Oriental matters, as we know from the contempt he expressed concerning Eliot Warburton's "The Crescent and the Cross," published in that year; but in 1846 Professor Cowell was translating some Odes of Hāfiz,13 and sent some of his renderings to FitzGerald, who was greatly impressed by them. It was not, however, until 1853 that, fired by Cowell's enthusiasm, he addressed himself seriously to the study of the Persian language, reading as a foundation Sir Wm. Jones's Persian Grammar, which exactly suited him, as all the examples of the rules are given in beautiful lines from Hāfiz, Sa'adi, and other Persian poets. He records buying a Gulistan (of Sa'adi) " whilst still studying the Grammar, but it did not very greatly influence his later work. In 1854 he read and paraphrased Jāmī's "Salāmān and Absāl," which he printed for private circulation in 1856, and reprinted in 1871. After Salāmān came Hāfiz, the text he used being the Calcutta edition of 1791, bought for him by Professor Cowell. In 1856 he had received, also from Professor Cowell, a copy of the MS. of Omar Khayyam, which Cowell had found uncatalogued and unknown among the Ouseley MSS. in the Bodleian Library at Oxford. It was about this time also that he began to correspond with the eminent French Orientalist Garcin de Tassy, about the latter's critical essay upon the Mantik-ut-Tair of Ferid-ud-din Attar, with which he had already become acquainted in De Sacy's notes to the Pend Namah of the same poet; 15 and early in 1857 he borrowed

¹³ These were not published until September, 1854, when they appeared anonymously in Fraser's Magazine, and called forth further praise from FitzGerald
14. E B Eastwick "The Gulistan, or Rose Garden" London, 1852

^{15 &}quot;Pend-Nameh, ou Livre des Conseils de Férid eddin Attar" Traduit et publié par M. le Bon Silvestre de Sacy Paris, 1819 At p 41 of this work the parable of Josus and the bitter water in the jar is given at length in French a MS. of the original poem from Napoleon Newton, the associate of Stephen Austin, the Oriental publisher at Hertford. The two poems, the Ruba'iyat and the Mantik-ut-Tair, took violent hold of his imagination, and already, in March, 1857, he had completed "twenty pages of a metrical sketch of the Mantik." This sketch, though eventually finished, was never published until after his death, when it was included in his "Letters and Literary Remains"; but the influence of the original upon his Ruba'iyat of Omar Khayyām and Persian, and at pp 168-173 there is a complete résumé of the entire Mantikut-Tair Though we know that this volume formed part of FitzGerald's course of study, I have not made it one of the works to be analysed in this essay, for the reason that its teaching was, without doubt, merged in that of the same author's Mantik-ut-Tair At the same time, besides the passage cited in Note 38, there are several passages to which one might refer in such an essay as this, exemple gratia, the story from Sa'adı's Mujaliss, which is worthy of transcription in its entirety "One day, Ibrahim bin Adhem was seated at the gate of his palace, and his pages stood near him in a line. A dervish, bearing the insigna of his condition, came up and attempted to enter the palace 'Old man,' said the pages, 'whither goest thou?' 'I am going into this cai avanseral,' said the old man. The pages answered, 'It is not a caravanseral, it is the palace of Ibrahim, Shah of Balkh' Ibrahim caused the old man to be brough, before him, and said to him 'Darvish, this is my palace ' 'To whom,' asked the old man, 'did this palace originally belong '' 'To my grandfather' 'After him, who was its owner' 'My father' 'And to whom did it pass on his death?' 'To me' 'When you die, to whom will it belong?' 'To my son' 'Ibrahim,' said the Darvish, 'a place whither one enters and whence another departs is not a palace, it is a caravanserar'" We have here a powerful suggestion of FitzGerald's 17th and 45th quatrains

Think, in this batter'd Caravanserai,
Whose Portals are alternate Night and Day,
How Sultān after Sultān with his Pomp
Abode his destined Hour, and went his way
'Tis but a Tent where takes his one day's rest
A Sultān to the realm of Death addrest
The Sultān rises, and the dark Ferrāsh
Strikes, and prepares it for another Guest

At pp 236-244, we have a collection of passages in eulogy of generosity, and at p 309, de Sacy quotes an ode of Shahi containing the image of the rose tearing as under its garment of purple silk,

ما كل ارماد صبح بوي بو ياهت جامها پارة كرد بر تن حويس which suggests FitzGerald's No 1.4

Look to the blowing Rose about us, "Lo, Laughing," she says, "into the world I blow, At once the silken tassel of my Puise Tear, and its Treasure on the Garden throw"

Such parallels might be greatly extended, but, for the most part, the images are repeated in the Mantik-ut-Tair was so great, that whole quatrains and a great many isolated lines came, consciously or unconsciously, from the Mantik into his poem. It is not in any way surprising that this was so, for Attar's poems are a perfect reflection of the Ruba'ivat of Omar, on which it is more than probable that much of their philosophy was founded, seeing that Ferid-ud-din Attar was born at Nishapur in Khorasān four years before Omar 'Khayyām died there, and was, no doubt, brought up to revere the recently deceased poet-mathematician and his works. In 1857 FitzGerald received from De Tassy his magnificent text of the Mantik; but De Tassy's translation was not published until 1863, so FitzGerald had nothing but the introductory analysis to help him, Professor Cowell being at that time in India. By June, 1857, he had received from Professor Cowell a copy of the MS. of Omar Khayyām in the Bengal Asiatic Society's Library at Calcutta, 16 and addressed himself at once to the arduous task of deciphering it. We may infer with some degree of certainty that his poem was primarily constructed on the foundation of the Bodleian MS, from the fact that within three weeks of the arrival of the Calcutta MS, he had practically finished the first draft of his poem, having surveyed the Calcutta MS. "rather hastily," as he himself says. During the remaining months of 1857 he polished and prepared his poem for the press, and sent it (in January, 1858) to Fraser's Magazine for publication; but the editor of that eminently respectable serial did not consider it, evidently, up to the standard demanded by his other contributors and readers, and in January, 1859, FitzGerald took it away from him, added a few of the more antinomian quatrains that he had suppressed out of consideration for Fraser's families, schools, and the Young Person, and gave them to our mutual friend "little Quaritch" to sell The oft-told tale of how the edition fell

This MS has been lost or stolen, so that Professor Cowell's copy is now the only means of ascertaining what were the materials from which FitzGerald worked. A copy is now being remade from Professor Cowell's copy for the Asiatic Society's Library in Calcutta from grace to "the penny box," and rose thence to seven guineas a copy, has become a gem of classic antiquity, like most of the anecdotes concerning Omar, FitzGerald and Fitz-Gerald's poem. This particular story, however, has paled into insignificance, for a copy of this first edition was sold at auction on the 10th. February, 1898, to Mr. Quaritch for £21, and I have received an offer from America of £45 for a copy. Meanwhile, he had read Mr. Binning's charming journal of his travels in Persia, 17 and culled therefrom the historical, topographical, legendary and sociological information that is to be found in the notes to his Ruba'iyat, including a prose translation of the quatrain which appeared in his second edition, and which he quotes in his notes to the third and fourth editions:

The Palace that to Heav'n his pillars threw,
And Kings the forehead on his threshold drew—
I saw the solitary Ringdove there,
And "Coo, coo, coo," she cried; and "Coo, coo, coo." 18

(C. 419, L. 627, B. 619, S. P. 347, P. 140, B. ii. 459, W. 392, N. 350.) This is merely quoted by Mr. Binning, without reference to Omar Khayyām, but FitzGerald identified it, of course, in the Calcutta MS. where it occurs, though it is not to be found in the Bodleian MS. 19

In 1867, Mons. Nicolas published his text and prose translation, which, as FitzGerald tells us, "reminded him of

17. Robert B M Binning "A Journal of Two Years' Travel in Persia, Ceylon, &c" London, 1857 Vol ii, p 20

19 FitzGerald had also before him a very similar passage from the Pend-Nameh of Attar (vule Note 15), to which de Sacy had appended notes from Omar Khayyam and other poets, which impressed it on his mind. The passage runs a follows "Though thou may'st rear thy palace towards heaven, thou wilt one day be buried beneath the earth. Though thy power and strength equal those of Rustam, thou shalt be one day reduced like Bahram to the abode of the tomb."

several things and instructed him in others," and his interest being once more aroused in Omar Khayyām, he prepared his second edition (that of 1868), in which we find several new quatrains (ten in all), the originals of most of which are common to Nicolas's translation and the Calcutta MS. FitzGerald's note upon the dying utterance of Nizām ul Mulk came from De Tassy's translation of the Mantik-ut-Tair, which he sent to FitzGerald in exchange for a copy of this translation by Nicolas. After this, FitzGerald practically dropped the study of Persian literature; he reduced the number of his quatrains to 101, and gave us what for all practical purposes was the final form of his poem in the third edition (of 1872).

In this recapitulation of FitzGerald's study of the Ruba'iyat, I fear that I have perforce travelled over well-trodden ground, but it has been necessary for the purpose I have in view of showing how those studies influenced his poem. We have, then, as his acknowledged materials:

- (i.) The Odes of Hāfiz, translated by Professor Cowell in 1846, and published in 1854, and later, the Calcutta text.
- (ii.) Sir William Jones's Grammar of the Persian Language.
- (iii.) The Gulistān of Sa'adi.
- (iv.) The Salāmān and Absāl of Jāmī.
- (v.) The Mantik-ut-Tair of Attar.
- (vi.) Binning's Journal.And of Omar Khayyām's Ruba'iyat,
- (vii.) The Bodleian MS.
- (viii.) The Calcutta MS.
- (ix.) Nicolas's Translation and Text.

I propose to examine these materials in their chronological order, and call attention to those passages whose echoes we find in FitzGerald's poem.

I. It is not surprising that the future "translator" (in default of that better word for which Professor Norton appeals) of the Ruba'iyat of Omar Khayyām should first have been attracted to the study of Persian by the Odes of Hāfiz as presented by Professor Cowell's translations, and the examples of Sir Wm. Jones, for the two poets are brothers in song indeed. There is recorded a saying of the great Akbar himself that "an ode of Hāfiz is the wine, and a quatrain of Omar is the relish." I take the following parallels from the Odes of Hāfiz translated by Cowell:

COWELL'S HAFIZ.

I. Thou knowest not the secrets of futurity,

There are hidden games behind the Veil; do not despair.

FITZGERALD'S RUBA'IYAT.

52. A moment guess'd—then back behind the Fold

Immerst of Darkness round the Drama roll'd

Which, for the Pastime of Eternity,

He doth himself contrive, enact, behold.

There is a parallel for this in the Bodleian MS.:

94. To speak plain language and not in parables, we are the pieces and heaven plays the game, we are played together re a baby game upon the chessboard of existence, and one by one return to the box of non-existence. 22

FitzGerald took from this his quatrain:

69. But helpless Pieces of the Game He plays Upon this Chequer-board of Nights and Days Hither and thither moves, and checks, and slays, And one by one, back in the Closet lays.

So that the sentiment of No. 52 comes clearly from Hāfiz.

II. Rest not thy trust on that night-patrolling star,²³ for that cunning thief

Hath stolen Kawus' crown and the girdle of Kay Khusraw.

9-10. And this first Summer Month 4 that brings the Rose Shall take Jamshyd and Kaiko-bad away. Well, let it take them! What have we to do

With Kaikahad to a Crost or

With Kaikobad the Great, or Kaikhosru?

21 H S Jarrett Ain-i-Akbarı, by Abu Fazl-i-Allanu Calcutta, 1891. Pt ii, p 392

22 از روي حقیقتي ده از روي محاز ما لعمتكاسم و هلك لعبت بار باز بهته همي كنيم بر نطع وحود رفتيم سندوق عدم يك يك بار

23. ie, the Moon.

24 Moon-Month = Mah (ماه معناه) Persian synonym

V. The morning dawns and the cloud has woven a canopy,

The morning draught, my friends, the morning draught!

It is strange that at such a season

They shut up the wine-tavern! oh, hasten!

Have they still shut up the door of the tavern?

Open, oh thou Keeper of the Gates!

- 3. And, as the Cock crew, those who stood before
 - The Tavern shouted, "Open then the Door!
 - You know how little while we have to stay,
 - And, once departed, may return no more."
- The parallel here is obvious, the more so as there is no quatrain in the Bodleian or Calcutta MSS. that so completely conveys this picture of the unopened tavern.
- VII. The foundations of our penitence, whose solidity seemed as of stone—
 - See, a cup of glass, how easily hath it shattered them

93-4. Indeed, the Idols I have loved so long

Have drown'd my Glory in a

Have drown'd my Glory in a shallow Cup

Indeed, indeed Repentance oft before

I swore . . .

And then and then came Spring, and Rose-in-hand My thread - bare Penitence a-pieces tore.

17. Think, in this battered Caravanserai

Whose Portals are alternate Night and Day,

How Sultan after Sultan with his Pomp

Abode his destined Hour, and went his way.

45. 'Tis but a Tent where takes his one day's rest

A Sultan to the realm of Death addrest;

&c. &c. (C. 95 & 110.)

Since from this caravanseral with its two gates departure is inevitable.

It will be borne in mind that FitzGerald read these Odes over again in Fraser's Magazine (as he himself indicates in his "Letters") whilst his poem was in course of construction.

II. We have not, however, finished with Hāfiz. His lines predominate in Sir Wm. Jones's Grammar, and these isolated passages, with some from other poets, evidently fixed themselves in FitzGerald's mind when he was deciphering them word by word for the purpose of learning the language.

JONES'S QUOTATIONS.25

FITZGERALD'S RUBA'IYAT.

p. 22. Boy, bring the wine, for the season of the rose approaches;

let us again break our vows of repentance in the midst of the roses.25 94. Quoted above.

The phrase fast-i-gul (فصل کل), "the season of roses," is a common I ersian expression to indicate spring. It may be observed that this passage was his first introduction to the connection of the Rose and Nightingale, so constantly recurring in Persian belles-lettres.27

p. 27. The Cypress is graceful, but thy shape is more graceful than the cypress.²⁶

p. 89. It is morning; boy, fill the cup with wine, the rolling heaven makes no delay; therefore hasten.
The sun of the wine rises from the east of the cup: if thou seekest the delights of mirth, leave thy sleep.

41. The Cypress-slender minister of wine.

25 The Seventh Edition London, 1809

28 ساقي بيار باده که آمد زمان گل تا بشکيم توبه دگر در ميان کل

27 Save in No 6 and remotely in No 96, FitzGerald has not introduced the loves of the Nightingale and the Rose into his poem. There are many references to it in Jones. Cf. pp. 80, 90, 112, 120, etc.

28 ماه نیکوست ولی روی تو ریباتر ازوست سرو دلجوست ولی قد تو دلجوتر ازوست و مناصب کن دور فلك درنگ ندارد شتاب کن خورسید می زمشرق سامر طلوع كرد گر برگ هیش میطلبی ترك حواب كن

Here we have again the inspiration for the opening quatrains cited above.

- p. 102. By the approach of Spring and the return of December the leaves of our life are continually folded.*0
- 8. The leaves of life keep falling one by one.

This is a distich culled by Sir Wm. Jones from Omar Khayyām himself, and from a quatrain which occurs in the Calcutta MS. (No. 500), but FitzGerald was evidently "reminded of it" by Nicolas's text, where it is No. 402, for the line does not occur in his first edition. It was doubtless the above quotation that originally fixed it in his mind.

On p. 106. The spider holds the veil in the palace of Caesar;

The owl stands sentinel on the watch-tower of Afrasiab.⁵¹

This is a constantly recurring illustration of the vanity of earthly glory in Persian belles-lettres. FitzGerald took his quatrain No. 16 from this, and from the Calcutta MS.

p. 111. A garden more fresh than the bower of Iram.³² Inam indeed is gone with all his rose.

I cannot ascertain whether FitzGerald had studied S. Rousseau's "Flowers of Persian Literature," which was published in 1801 as "a companion to Sit W. Jones's Persian Grammar," but at p. 71 of that work is an account of the "Garden of Iram," translated by Jonathan Scott from the تحفي المجالس (Tohfet al Mujālis). References to this fabulous garden, however, occur constantly in all Persian literature.

At pp. 123-124 occur quotations referring to the images of the Caravan in the desert, and the cock-crow rousing the apathetic sleepers. At p. 132, in an ode from Hāfiz we find the inaccessibility of the secrets of futurity and the ignorance of the wise on this subject, and finally in the list of works recommended to the student at the end of the Grammar, we find the Salāmān and Absāl of Jāmī to which FitzGerald next turned his attention.

30 از آمدن بهار از رفتن دي اوراق حيات ما ميكردد طي 18 پرده داري ميكند در قصر قيصر عنكبوت بومي نوبت ميزند برگنبد افراسياب 32 بوستاني تازهتر از كلسهان ارم 20 ميده در 20 ميده 2

III. We have seen that, whilst FitzGerald's study of Jones's Persian Grammer was still in progress, he had obtained Eastwick's translation of the Gulistān of Sa'adi, and the text printed at Hertford by Napoleon Newton; he also studied Semelet's text and translation (Paris, 1834). It is readily comprehensible that a mind already strongly attracted by the Sufistic and antinomian verses of Hāfiz did not enter into warm sympathy with the rhapsodies of the essentially pious Sa'adi, but certain isolated passages must have impressed him, for we gather distinct echoes of them in his poem. The principal are as follows:

GULISTAN.84

FITZGERALD'S RUBA'IYAT.

CHAPTER I., Story 2.

Many famous men have been buried underground
Of whose existence on earth not a trace has remained,
And that old corpse which had been surrendered to the earth
Was so consumed by the soil that not a bone remained.35

Here again is a vivid picture of the transitory nature of earthly pomp, which is everywhere apparent in Omar Khayyām and in FitzGerald's poem.

Story 9. I spent my precious life in hopes, alas! That every desire of my heart will be fulfilled; My wishes were realised, but to what profit? since

³⁵ حديث از مطرب ومي گو وراز دهر كمتر جو كه كس نكشود و نكشايد بعكمت اين معمارا 34 I quote the Kama Shastra Society's translation, "Benares" (London, 1888), as being more literally accurate than the rhymed translation of Eastwick. ³⁵ بس نامور كة زير رمين دفن كرده اند كر هستيش بروي "رمين يك نشان مماند و ان پير لاسترا كة سهردند زير خاك خاكش چنان مغورد كزو استخوان نماند

There is no hope that my past life will return.

My life has elapsed in ignorance, I have done nothing—be on your guard! 36

This is quite in the spirit of Omar, and the quatrains in Fitz-Gerald's poem which echo the sentiment are too numerous to quote.

Story 26. For how many years and long lives
Will the people walk over my

Will the people walk over my head on the ground? 37

23-4. Ourselves must we beneath the couch of earth
Descend—ourselves to make a
Couch—for whom?
Ah! make the most of what we yet may spend,
Before we too into the Dust
descend.²⁰

In chapter ii. we find references to the hospitality of Hatim Tai (F. 10) and the sweet voice of David (F. 6). In chapter v. we recognise the "rumble of a distant drum" (F. 13), and in chapter vii. the image of the verdure and flowers sprouting from the clay of those who have died before us (F. 19-20). But these images are also to be found in Omar, so we can only say that FitzGerald met with them originally in the Gulistān.

IV. The Salāmān and Absāl of Jāmī occupies a small but not unimportant place in this examination, for it was one of the works of which FitzGerald laboriously studied the original text and made a metrical paraphrase—his first printed volume. I have not read the original of this, save in a desultory and أن درين اميد بسر سد دريغ عمر عزير كه انچة در دلمست از درم فرار آيد اميد بسته بر آمد ولي چه فايده زانكه اميد ديست كه عمر گذشته باز آيد 37 چه سالهاي فراوان وعمرهاي درار كه على برسر ما بر رمين بشواهد رفت

38 PitzGerald had had before him a passage very analogous to this from the Bostān of Sa'adi, quoted in Sacy's notes to the Pend Nameh (loc cit, pp 225-6), "After having brought and accumulated goods like the ant, hasten to consume them ere that thyself art consumed by the worms of the grave"

پس از بردن وگرد کردن چو مور بغور پیش از آن کس خورد گرم گور superficial manner, for I found it difficult to arouse my own interest in it, but readers of FitzGerald's paraphrase will recognise many lines which contain thoughts which reappeared in his ruba'iyat. One passage, however, occurs in it to which especial reference must be made, and that is the couplet:

Drinking, that cup of Happiness and Tears In which "Farewell" had never yet been flung.

This image recurs in FitzGerald's opening lines of his first edition:

Awake! for Morning in the Bowl of Night Has flung the Stone that puts the Stars to Flight:

V. The Mantik-ut-Tair of Ferid-ud-din Attar is by far the most important of the materials under examination, for it is not too much to say that it might properly have been cited on the title-page of FitzGerald's poem as one of the sources of that work. It is one of the most important expositions that have come down to us of that alliance of religious revelation and mundane philosophy which the Muslims in general, and the Sufi philosophers in particular, have from all time attempted to demonstrate. The philosophical study of religions is neither more nor less than an attempt to solve the enigma of nature, and in Persia this study has been the constant care of the Sufis. They commence by the postulation of a vast Pantheism in which everything is God save alone God himself, everything being regarded by them as an emanation from God and everything being finally reabsorbed into God. As opposed to this, Muhammadanism is the gospel of the abstract and personal Unity of God, and it is interesting to note that Muhammad, admitting the personalities of Moses, the Prophets and Christ, looked upon Christianity as a kind of developed Judaism, which authorises us in concluding that Islam itself is nothing more than an aberration of Christianity.

Sufism, as it presents itself to the student of Omar Khayyām and Ferīd-ud-dīn Attār, has been admirably described by the great English traveller and Oriental scholar Sir Richard Burton; he says: "It is the religion of beauty, whose leading principle is that of earthly, the imperfect type of heavenly love. Its high priests are Anacreontic poets; its rites, wine, music and dancing, spiritually considered; and its places of worship, meadows and gardens where the perfume of the rose and the song of the nightingale, by charming the heart, are supposed to improve the mind of the listener." 39 The first Sufi (a word derived from weightarrow suf = wool, the material of which the robes of dervishes and fakirs are made) was one Abu Hashim Kufa, who lived in the second half of the eighth century A.D., so that Sufism was only two centuries old when Omar Khayyām flourished, and undoubtedly its greatest priest and poet was Muhammad bin Ibrahim Nishapuri Ferīd-ud-dīn Attār (meaning "Pearl of the Faith, the Druggist," from his trade, which was that of an oil-presser), born, as his name denotes, at Omar's own town of Nishapur in 1119 A.D., and massacred by the soldiers of Gengiz Khan in 1230, and in the 110th year of his age. The story of his conversion to philosophical religion is told to the effect that a Sufi Darvish apostrophized him one day in his shop, congratulating himself that he had no merchandise to carry on the Mystic Road, or Oriental "Way of Salvation," and exhorting Attar to prepare himself for the journey.

Attār, like almost every other Persian poet, wrote an immense quantity of verse, but his most interesting and important work is undoubtedly his "Language of Birds," a title which he borrowed from the passage in the Qur'ān, where Solomon declares, on his accession to the throne of David, "Oh, men! I understand the language of the birds." No exposition of the doctrines of Sufism could be more complete than that contained in this book, and as those doctrines are prominent ^{39.} R. F. Burton. "Sindh, and the Races that inhabit the Valley of the Indus." London, 1851. Ch. viii, p. 201.

^{40.} Chap. xxvii., v. 16.

in the sentiments of Omar Khayyam, we may shortly state them, as follows:

- (i.) All created beings are emanations from God and are finally reabsorbed in God.
- (ii.) Since God orders all things, good and bad are indifferent, a doctrine identical with that of the early Christian schismatics called "Adamites," whose rites and tenets, by the way, leave much to be desired on the score of social ethics.
- (iii.) The soul is everything and the body imprisons it, therefore death is merely a return to God.41

And these doctrines are clothed in a wealth of imagery, often licentious, which, like the doctrine of Platonism, invoke God under the form of beauty, pleasure, and woman—which are one. It may be observed that the Sufis do not admit the contention of the strict Muhammadans that they are heretics; indeed, Attar himself, in the epilogue to this poem, says (as Omar said before him 42), "I am neither a Muslim nor an infidel," 43 and immediately after implores God to keep him firm in the faith of Islam," and to make him die therein.45

I will now, following as far as possible the system observed above, point out some of the principal parallels between the Mantik-ut-Tair and FitzGerald's Ruba'iyat. The lines in the Mantik are counted by distichs (d).

مائيم درين گنبد ميرورة رخام ني كافر مطلق نة مسلمان تمام

43. d. 4592. I remain neither an infidel nor a Musim, Between the two I remain bewildered

من نه کافر به مسلمان ماندهٔ در میان هر دو حیران ماندهٔ

44 d 4595. Open this door to worthless me,

And indicate a path to this pathless (lost) one

وین ز راه افتادهرا راهی نمای

بر من بیهاره این در بکشای 45 زین همهٔ الودگی پاکم کنی در مسلمانی فرو حاکم کنی

Qur'an, chap. i, v. 151 "We are of God and return to him.

[&]quot;Beneath this heaven of azure marble I am neither an independent infidel nor a perfect Muslim," which is L. 527, C. 340, W. 347, N. 315, SP 314, P. 302, B. 532, B. ii. 417.

MANTIK-UT-TAIR.

- d. 4. To this (i.e., the sky) he has imparted a perpetual motion.46
- d. 24. The sky is like a bird that flutters along the path God has appointed for it.47
- d. 145. What is the sky, like a bowl turned upside down, unstable, stationary and revolving at the same time.48
- d. 2290. The sky is like a dish turned upside down.49
- d, 38. From the back of the Fish (Mahi) to the Moon (Mah) every atom attests Him.50

FITZGERALD.

72. And that inverted Bowl they call the Sky,

> As impotently moves as you or I.

51. Taking all shapes from Mah to Mahi.

> They change and perish all, but He remains!

A score of passages might be quoted in which this figure occurs. FitzGerald's quatrain came, as a whole, from the Calcutta MS. (C. 72).

d. 147-8. Can he who during so many years . . . has impotently frequented the Door, know what is behind the veil.51

32. There was the Door to which I found no key; There was the Veil through which I might not see.

This is also an image which constantly recurs.

152. Those who before us entered upon the Path have studied the Mystery time and again.

They have agitated themselves profoundly and in the end their result is feebleness and astonishment.52

- 26. Why all the Saints and Sages who discuss'd
 - Of the Two Worlds so wisely —they are thrust

Like foolish Prophets forth; their words to scorn

Are scattered and their Mouths are stopt with Dust.

46 آن یکی را جسس مادام داد

⁴⁷ مرغ کردون در رهش پر می ربد بر درش چون حلقه ٔ سر می زند بی قراری دایماً بر یك قرار

48 چیست گردون سر فکون ماپایدار 49 هست گردون همچو طشتی سر نگون

50 هر چة هست از پشت ماهي تا بماه جملة ورات بر داتش كواه او چه داند تا درون پرده چیست

او که چندین سال برسر گشته است ⁵² پیشوایایی که ره بین آمدند گاه و می گاه از پی این آمدند جان خودرا هين حسرت ساختند همرة جان عصر وحيرت ساختند

There is a quatrain in Omar (L. 326, C. 236, B. 322, W. 147, N. 120, S. P. 120) which is almost identical with this. At d. 216-8. Oh! Thou who pardonest my faults and acceptest my excuses, I am an hundred times consumed, why burn me again. It is by thy impulsion that my blood boils; let me shew my ardour. 53

Here we have part of the sentiment of the quatuor of quatrains 78-81. There is a parallel quatrain for this in Omar, (L. 449, C. 286, W. 276, N. 236, S. P. 235, B. 445, B. ii. 308) but the whole of this great quatuor is a redelivery of the sentiments conveyed in the parable quoted here; a little further on we find dd. 217 (bis 51) to 220. "Oh! Thou my Creator! the good and the bad actions that I commit, I commit with my body. Pardon my weakness and efface my faults. I am led away by my natural instincts and cast by Thee into uncertainty; therefore the good and the bad I do comes from Thee."55 And further, d. 225: "Thou hast planted in the centre of my soul a black mole (i.e., original sin). Thou hast marked me with a spot as black as the skin of an Abyssinian; but if I do not become Thy mole, how can I become accepted by Thee? Therefore to attain that state I have made my heart like a black Abyssinian slave."56 Here we have the original of the lines:

For all the Sin with which the face of Man Is blackened, Man's forgiveness give—and take!

This plea for reciprocal forgiveness appears again with great force at d. 4618: "Deign to notice neither the good nor the bad that I have done. Since Thou createdst me gratuitously, Thou must pardon me gratuitously." We shall presently سوحتم صد رة چة حواهى سوز من 6 ای کناه آموز عدر آموز من تا جوادمردي بسي كردم بپوش خودم از " دوير تو آمد بحوس 54 By an error of the Editor the numbers 215 to 220 are repeated twice هر چه کردم با تن حود کرده ام ³ خالقا كر نيك وكر بد كردة ام عفو کن دون همتیهای مرا معو کن بی حرمتیهای مرا داع همچون حبشیا دارم ز تو ه هندوي حان بر ميان ارم ز تو تا شدم هندوت رنكي دل شدم کر نیم هندوت چون مقبل شدم یگذری از هر چه کردم غوب و زهند آفريدن رايكانم چون رواست رایکانم کر بیامرزی سزاست

upon Edward FitzGerald's Poem

find other passages in the Mantik-ut-Tair which are identical in sentiment with this quatuor. We will proceed again with the parallel passages.

MANTIK-UT-TAIR.

- d. 240. So long as my Soul comes not forth to my lips, I will cherish these thoughts.
- dd. 2501 and 3031 open passages containing this same metaphor.⁵⁰
- d. 302. One night he (Muhammad)

 ascended to heaven, and all secrets were revealed to him from God he obtained complete understanding of all things.

FITZGERALD.

- And, offering his Cup, invite your Soul Forth to your Lips to quaff you shall not shrink.
- 31. Up from Earth's Centre through the Seventh Gate I rose and on the Throne of Saturn sate; And many a Knot unravel'd by

And many a Knot unravel'd by the Road.

The "Seven Gates," or "Seven Heavens," recur continually all through the poem, sc. dd. 27161 and 1818,64 etc. At d. 451 we find a reference to the life-giving breath of Jesus,68 and at d. 453 to the White Hand of Moses.64 At d. 742 ct passim the loves of the Nightingale and the Rose.65

- At d. 972. An observer of Spiritual Things approached the Ocean, and asked it why it was clad in blue (purple);
 why this tobe of mourning
 . . . The Ocean replied
 . . "I weep for my separation from The Friend.
- 33. Earth could not answer; nor the Seas that mourn In flowing Purple of their Lord forlorn.

داستم آحر دلي ران سان كة مود (a) در دم آحر كه جان آمد بلب گفس جامم بر لب آمد زانتدار س سر كل با او بهاده درميان هم كل كل بي حسابي يافته و مقس پرگاز فلك شد آسكار رو مكشس آگاه در هفت آسمان او بدم دست بريدة كرد راست زان بر آوردي يد بيضا زجيب بلبلي را بس بود عشق كلي

ها نیاید بر لبم این جان ده بود
 وقت مردن بو علی رودبار
 وقت مردن بو علی رودبار
 کرده در سب سوی معراجش روان هم زحق بهتر کنایی یافنه³
 در طلب برخود بکشت او هفت بار
 در طلب تا بشناسد اورا آن رمان
 از دم عیسی کسی گر زنده حاست
 در ضمیرش بود مکنوبات عیب
 مادت سیمرع بارد بلبلی

Since, by reason of my insufficiency, I am not worthy of him, I am clad in blue on account of the sorrow that I suffer."65

These are the two lines upon which Professor Cowell has given us the note which gave me the first clue for these researches. A curious illustration of FitzGerald's method is found in connection with the passage at d. 1017: "The true dawn was the light of his countenance." This, together with Mr. Binning's note on the phenomena of the Oriental sunrise, produced his line and note concerning "the Phantom of False Morning." The process will be set out further on.

At d. 1559. We, all of us, leave the world like Wind, it has gone and we must go too. A

- 29. And out of it, as Wind along the Waste,
 - I know not Whither, willynilly blowing.

This is one of two frequently recurrent images of death in Persian poetry; the other we find in d. 2288. "Knowest thou not that every man who is born, sinks into the earth and the wind disperses his elements," 69—a figure as frequently found in Omar as the former one.

At d. 1866. Heaven and Hell are reflections, the one of thy goodness, and the other of thy anger.⁷⁰

68. Heav'n but the Vision of fulfill'd Desire, And Hell the Shadow from a Soul on fire.

Here, again, we have a true original, for there is no parallel for No. 68 in Omar. FitzGerald was reminded of it, but no

گفت اي دريا چرا داري كبود ديست هيچ آنش چرا جوشيدة كز فراق دوست دارم اضطراب جامة نيلي كردة ام از درد او روح قدسي نفعه از بوي او رفت او و ما همة هم مي رويم شد بجاك و هر چة بودش باد برد حلد و دوزخ عكس لطف و قهر تست

66 ديده ور صردي بدريا سد فرود جامع مانم چرا پوشيده داد دريا آن دکو داررا جواب چون زنا مردي بيم من مرد او 67 صبح صادق لمعة از روي او 68 جملة چون بادي زعالم مي رويم 69 تو نميداني که هر کو زاد مرد 200 طاهف روحانيان از بير تست more, by quatrain 33 of the Bodleian, and 90 of the Calcutta MSS., which reads:

> The heavenly vault is the girdle of my weary body, Jihun is a watercourse worn by my filtered tears, Hell is a spark from my useless worries, Paradise is a moment of time when I am tranquil."

We trace in this quatrain the original of, "the Soul on Fire."

We find the first mention of "the rumble of the distant drum," at d. 2162, "He whose lofty station is indicated by the drum and the standard, cannot become a darvish," and at 2. 2753, "Were it not better to strike the drum of sovereignty," etc.78

At d. 2340. He who controlled the world beneath his signet-ring (i.e., Solomon) is actually an element beneath the earth."

This figure occurs in various forms in Omar, and has been freely made use of by FitzGerald.

At d. 2342. The dead sleep beneath the earth, but though asleep they are anguished.75

29. . . . the fire of Anguish in some Eye There hidden, far beneath and long ago.

Closely following these passages, we find the following fable:

d. 2345. (On a certain occasion) Jesus drank of the water of a clear stream whose flavour was more sweet than that of rose-water. By his side, a certain one filled his jar at this same stream and then withdrew. Then Jesus drank a little from this jar, and pursued his way, but now he found the water bitter, and stood amazed. "Oh, God!" he said, "the water of the stream and that in the jar are identical: explain to me the mystery of this difference in the flavour, why is the water in the jar bitter and that in the stream more sweet than honey." Then spake the jar these words to Jesus: "I am, of old, a man. I have been fashioned

دوزغ شرري ر ربع بيهودةً ماست فردوس دمى ز وقت آسودة است ⁷² هر که از کوس و علم درویش نیست دور از و دان بانگ وبادی بیش نیست

⁷¹ گردون كمرى از نن فرسودهٔ ماست جيهون انري ر اسك پالودهٔ است 73 گفت تاکی کوس سلطانی زدن زین نکوتر خشت بتوانی زدن 13 گفت تاکی کوس سلطانی زدن این زمان شد توتیا زیر زمین 14 آنکه هالم داشت در زیر نگین این زمان شد توتیا زیر زمین 15 جمله تا این همه آشفته اند a thousand times beneath the seven-domed heavens, now into a vase, now into a jar, and again into a bowl. They may refashion me again a thousand times, but I shall always be tainted with the bitterness of death. It so impregnates me that water contained in me can never be sweet." ⁷⁶

FitzGerald, in his paraphrase of the Mantik,⁷⁷ rendered this answer very beautifully:

The Clay that I am made of, once was Man, Who dying, and resolved into the same Obliterated Earth from which he came Was for the Potter dug and chased in turn Through long vicissitude of Bowl and Urn: But, howsoever moulded, still the pain Of that first mortal Anguish would retain, And cast and re-cast, for a Thousand years Would turn the sweetest Water into Tears.

And it was to this passage of the Mantik, and to this alone, that we owe the quatrain No. 38.

And has not such a Story from of Old Down Man's successive generations roll'd, Of such a clod of saturated Earth Cast by the Maker into Human mould?

In the comment upon this parable in the Mantik we find the original of another quatrain of Fitzgerald.

آ خورد عيسي آبي از جوي خوش آب بود طعام آب حوشتر از گلاب
آن يكي زان آب خم در كرد ورفت عيسي از حم نيز آبي خورد و رفت شد زآب حم همي تلخش دهان داز كرديد و هجايب ماند اران گفت يا رب آب اين خم وآب جوي هر دو يك آبست سرآن بگوي تا چرا آنخست آب خم چين وان دگر سيرينترست از انگين پيش هيسي آن خم احد در سخن گفت اي هيسي منم مرد كهن زير ابن نه كاسة من باري هزار گشته ام هم كوزه هم خم هم تغار كر كنندم خم هزاران بار نيز نيست جز تلخي مركم كار نير دايم از بلخي مركم اين چين خين

77 This paraphrase was never published during FitzGerald's lifetime It occupies pp 433-452 of vol it of his "Letters and Literary Remains" (Vide Note 12)

- d. 2355. Thou thyself art lost. Oh!

 Thou that pursuest the Mystery. Strive to discover it, ere thy life be reft from thee, for if, to-day, whilst thou livest thou findest not thyself, how then, when thou art dead, shalt thou unravel the secret of thine existence? 78
- 53. But if in vain, down on the stubborn floor
 Of Earth, and up to Heav'n's unopening Door,
 You gaze To-day while You are You—how then
 To-morrow, You when shall be You no more?

The whole doctrine of the evanescence of the world is contained in the 27th chapter, which immediately follows this, and which contains the germ of one of FitzGerald's most sarcastic quatrains:

- d. 2409. If thou seekest a moment of well-being in this world, Sleep! and then repeat what thou hast seen in thy dreams.70
- 65. The Revelations of Devout and Learn'd Who rose before us and as Prophets burn'd Are all but Stories which awoke from Sleep, They told their comrades and to Sleep returned.

It may be observed, however, that FitzGerald translated his quatrain from No. 127 of the Calcutta MS.

We come now to another most interesting side-light upon FitzGerald's mental process. There is in the Calcutta MS. (but not in the Bodleian MS. or Nicolas) a quatrain, No. 387, which may be thus rendered:

Neither thou nor I know the Secret of Eternity, And neither can thou nor I read this Enigma. There is talk of me and thee behind the curtain,

(But) When they raise the curtain there remains neither thee nor me **

From this FitzGerald constructed two remarkable verses:

32. There was the Door to which I found no Key;
There was the Veil through which I might not see:

⁷⁸ خويشرا كم كردة اي راز جوي پيش ازان كسه جان بر آيد باز حوي گر. نيابي زنده خودرا باز تو چون بميري كي شناسي راز تو ⁷⁹ كر تو در عالم خوشي حوثي و دمي حفته ايا خواب ميكوئي اهمي ⁸⁰ اسرار ازلرا نه تو داني و نه من و تو چون پرده برافتد نه تو ماني و نه من هست از پس يرده كفتكوئي من و تو چون پرده برافتد نه تو ماني و نه من

Some little talk awhile of Me and Thee There was—and then no more of Thee and Me.

34. Then of the Thee in Me who works behind The Veil, I lifted up my hands to find A lamp amid the Darkness: and I heard, As from Without, "The Me within Thee blind!"

There are those, I believe, "who by Genius and by Power of Brain" have found these two quatrains quite simple and self-explanatory. For my own part, I confess that I never understood them in the least until I found the two passages in Ferīd-ud-dīn Attār, which evidently surged up in FitzGerald's brain when he read the Calcutta quatrain. They are as follows:

d. 3090. The Creator of the world spoke thus to David from behind the Curtain of the Secret: "Everything in the world, good or bad, visible or invisible, is mere substitute, unless it be Me, Me for whom thou canst find neither substitute nor equal. Since nothing can be substituted for Me, do not cease to abide in Me. I am thy soul, be not separated from Me; I am necessary, thou art dependent upon Me... Seek not to exist apart from Me." so and

d. 3735. "Since long ago, really, I am Thee and Thou art Me, we two are but one. Art thou Me or am I Thee, is there any duality in the matter? Or else, I am thee, or thou art me, or thou, thou art thyself. Since thou art me and I am thee for ever, our two bodies are one. That is all!" ⁸³

This is an admirable specimen of the Sufistic argument of Unity with God, or the Thee-in-Me that FitzGerald has introduced with such mystic skill into his Ruba'iyat.

81 خالق الآفات من فوق العجاب كرد با دأوود پيغمبر حطان كشت هر چيزى كه هست اندر جهان حوب و زست و آشكارا و نهان بملقرا يابي موض الآمرا به هوض يابى ونه همتا مرا چون عوض نبود مرا بي من مبلش من بهم جان تو تو جان كن مبلش نا كزير تو منم اي حلقه كير يكنفس فافل مباش از نا گزير لحظه ي من بقلي جان مخواه هر چه حز من پيشت آيد آن مخواه الحظه ي من بقلي بان مخواه من توئي و تو مني هر دو يكي تو مني يا من توي چند از دوئي يا توم من يا تو من يا تو توئي و السلم

I have never found in Omar any mention of

The Mighty Mahmoud Allah-breathing Lord That all the misbelieving and black Horde Of Fears and Sorrows that infest the Soul Scatters before him with his whirlwind Sword.

The reference is to Mahmoud the Ghasnawi, who made war upon the black infidels of Hindostan, whose conquest and its sequelæ are related at d. 3117 of the Mantik. The main image of the quatrain, the dispersal of fears and sorrows by wine, comes primarily to FitzGerald from a quatrain which is No. 81 in the Bodleian and No. 180 in the Calcutta MSS.

In like manner, though Omar is full of allusions to the dead that come not back again, the precise image of our ignorance of the road they travel comes primarily from the Mantik:

- d. 3205. No one has returned to the world after having travelled that Road, no one knows how many parasangs it extends . . . Fool that thou art! how can those who have been lost in the Road for ever tell us of it. AS
- 64. Strange is it not? that of the myriads who Before us pass'd the door of Darkness through Not one returns to tell us of the Road. Which to discover, we must travel too.

This passage is quoted in the Notes to De Sacy's Pend Nameh, where FitzGerald originally saw it.

At d. 3220 we find an allegory related by Amru Osman, in which we read of the presence of the Snake (Iblis) in Paradise at the moment of the creation of Adam (FitzGerald 81), and at d. 3248 Satan argues with the Creator quite in the manner of FitzGerald's great quatuor of quatrains: "If malediction comes from thee, there comes also mercy; the created thing is dependent upon thee since destiny is in thy hands. If maledic-

میسب از فرسنگ او آگاه کس

⁸³ وا میامد در حیان زین راه کس چون نیامد باز کس زین راه دور چون دهندت آگهی ای نا صبور چون مدند آنحایکه کم سر بسر کی خیر بازد دهند ای پیخبر

tion be my lot, I do not fear; for every poison there is an antidote."4

Finally, at d. 4620, we find the dying words of Omar's reputed friend Nizām ul Mulk, recorded by FitzGerald in his letter to Professor Cowell of 28th December, 1867,85 and quoted in a note to his Introduction.

The parallel passages cited at so much length above might have been considerably increased, but I think that enough have been recorded to exhibit the intimate connection between Fitzgerald's study of this Author and his own poem.

VI. We now come to the last of the authorities cited as FitzGerald's material for his work, the Journal of Mr. Binning, from which he drew very largely for his notes. To the student of Oriental manners and customs no more interesting or delightful work has been written, the conservative tendencies of the Persians having militated successfully against any progress in their social conditions, so that the reader of the latest travel-journal of Persia finds little or nothing altered in the state of the country from what was described by Binning, and before him by Dr. Wolff, 86 by the Hon. Mountstuart Elphinstone, 87 and by even earlier travellers.

FitzGerald's first note about the False Dawn is taken from vol. i., p. 176, practically word for word. It is curious to note that in speaking of the subh i sadik (صبح صادق), or True Dawn, FitzGerald has followed Binning in his Persian phrase for False Dawn, the subh i kazib (صبح کارب) a phrase that does not occur in Omar. In quatrain 145 of the Calcutta MS. we find the synonym subh i azrak (صبح الربي), literally

84 لعنده آن تست و رحمده آن تو الله آن تست و قسمت آن تو کر مرا لعنتست قسمت آن تو کر مرا لعنتست قسمت باك نيست زهر هم بايد همة ترياك نيست باك كيت آلهي ميروم در دست باك 86 Joseph Wolff, D.D., LL.D "Narrative of a Mission to Bokhara in the years 1843-1845" London, 1846

"the blue dawn," having the same meaning, which one would have expected FitzGerald (who had it before him) to use.

Mr. Binning's work, besides referring at some length to the Mantik-ut-Tair of Attar, contains translations of a dozen odes of Hāfiz which we know were in FitzGerald's mind (together with those of Cowell) when he was constructing his poem. One or two passages from these translations will show what I mean:

- III. The season of Spring has arrived: endeavour now to be merry and gay while thou art able; for the roses will blow again and again, after thou art laid under the sod.
- V. Bring the right medicine for all the pains and troubles of love—namely, the juice of the grape—for that is the true panacea for all ills that beset both the young and the old.
- VI. When Hāfiz has become fairly intoxicated, he cares not a barleycorn for the whole Empire of the Cyruses.
- VII. At early dawn I walked forth into the garden to pluck a rose, when suddenly the plaintive voice of a nightingale fell on mine ear. The poor bird like myself, was in love with the rose, and, sick with the passion, warbled its complaint.
- XII. Bring the wine, O cupbearer, for the season of roses has arrived, that we may again break our vows of abstinence among the rosebushes.

It will be observed that some of these have already been quoted by Professor Cowell and Sir William Jones.

Mr. Binning's information about the festival of the Nūruz (New Year), reproduced by FitzGerald, is to be found at vol. i., p. 346, and vol. ii., pp. 160, 165 and 207, and the account of Bahrām Gūr is taken from vol. ii., pp. 353 and 357, though we have it recorded by FitzGerald himself in his letters that he made a superficial study of the Haft Paikar of Nizāmi, which contains the legend of that hero's Seven Castles and the seven ladies inhabiting them, who recount their stories in turn in true Oriental style.

At the risk of being wearisomely prolix, I have set out the above parallels seriatim, encouraged by the belief that nothing that adds to our knowledge of the history of FitzGerald's beautiful poem can lack interest for the students and admirers of that poem. The array might have been largely extended, but not, I think, with any great advantage. It has been enough to show that, as I stated at the outset, FitzGerald's "Ruba'iyat of Omar Khayyām" is, in addition to being a remarkable paraphrase of Omar's incomparable quatrains, a synthetical result of our poet's entire course of Persian studies.

London, July, 1898.

شکر که این نامه بعنوان رمید پیشتر از عمر بپایان رمید

(Gratitude is due that this book is finished Before my life has reached its termination.)

